OLD BELL PEALS AT BIRTH OF YEAR

Old City Hall looked down last evening upon the closing hours of the institution of a local tradition. With every window gleaming with lights; with the numerals of the dying year of 1913 glowing above its portals; with the city's children and citizens joining in song about the gay symmetrical tree below, it watched the turning of another page in the city's history, the progress of time from one year of accomplishment to another year of hope.

He took his place on the stand and waited for the Veteran Firemen's Association, which was coming up Main street led by Colt's Band, directed by Scott Snow. The broad walk in front of the City Hall

ILAN PROCLAMATION

While custom does not require of the mayor a proclamation on New Year's Day, it seems especially appropriate at this time for some word from the mayor, and Mayor Louis R. Cheney has accordingly issued a proclamation in connection with the country-wide Father and Sons movement started in Cleveland, O. This movement has attracted some attention and the mayor is in hearty accord with it as his proclamation will show:—

City life nowadays teems with divergent interests, interests that tend to sap the strength and wholesomeness of family life. The natural result has been to weaken the sound family relation and injure this great agency for combating the perils of city life. A remedy must be found to overcome this tendency. Father and son must be drawn closer into the bonds of a more intimate fellowship with one another. Fathers must be reminded of their individual responsibility of giving their boys advice and counsel which books

HARTFORD DAILY COURANT: THURSDAY, JANUARY 1

A NEW YEAR'S GREETING TO THE PEOPLE OF HARTFORD.

Given Through "The Courant" by Mayor LOUIS R. CHENEY.

The dawn of a new year is always the signal for a new outburst of hope and expectation on the part of all wide-awake citizens. The past year, with all its sorrows and disappointments, yet not undimmed with its joys and happiness, is behind us. The future, with all its good resolutions and hoped-for business, is before us, and the sun is undimmed with the possibilities that might come; for who knows the future? It is so with the greatest of us. I take this opportunity to convey to the people of Hartford the heartiest of New Year's greetings. It is true that in the prevailing business depression and the embarrassments of the factories in this city, there are over 2,000 factory employees out of work in Hartford.

However, a new year is before us. Certain national legislation has been of such character that it will cause many great business interests of the country to go slow until they can observe industrial conditions resulting from the new government experiments." I earnestly hope that the experiments will be successful and that the high cost of living will be materially lowered. I hope that the year before us will be a banner year in our happy and prosperous home.

New York, Jan. 1.—John Purroy Mitchel, elected mayor of the fusion ticket, was inducted into office in the City Hall at noon today. As he had already taken the oath, administered several days ago, the ceremonies were simple. They consisted of an address of leave-taking by the retiring mayor, Ardolph L. Wounded Man Into City

New York, April 17.—In an attempt to take the life of Mayor John Purroy Mitchel today, Michael P. Mahoney, an apparently irresponsible elderly man who later said he was a blacksmith out of work, fired into a group of three men seated in the mayor's automobile, which stood at the east side of city hall park. The bullet from his revolver struck the jaw of Corporation Counsel Frank L. Polk, who was sitting next to the mayor in the tonneau of the automobile. With blood spurting from his mouth, Mr. Polk was taken into an ante-chamber in the city hall and afterwards to the New York hospital, where it was said that the wound would not prove fatal. Mr. Polk was graduated from Yale in the class of 1894.

Mahoney shot at the mayor, he declared in the course of a disjointed statement extracted from him tonight, because he felt aggrieved at the city executive's "extravagant expenditures" and because he was incensed at being twice turned back from the door of the mayor's room in the city hall when he came to apply for a municipal job.

Mahoney fired only one shot when he was overpowered by Detective George Neun, who, in the capacity of chauffeur, was adjusting robes about the men in the automobile. The mayor sat in the middle of the back seat with Mr. Polk on his right and George V. Mullan, the mayor's former law partner, on his left. The bullet passed so close to Mayor Mitchel that it grazed his face. Standing within a few feet of Mahoney was Police Commissioner Arthur H. Woods, intending to sit beside the driver after the latter was seated.

To bystanders, the report of the revolver and the sight of the aged man sprawling upon the pavement as he was borne down by the onslaught of Detective Neun, seemed almost simultaneous. Mayor Mitchel steadying the staggering figure of Mr. Polk then detached itself from the picture. Within thirty seconds the city hall plaza and Park Row were flooded with a surging, swaying crowd and the police reserves were called out.

As soon as he had seen that Mr. Polk received medical attention, Mayor Mitchel went to the police station in the basement of city hall, where Mahoney had been taken, and ques-

"Why did you shoot at me?" he asked Mahoney.

The mayor seemed as calm as if nothing had happened. The prisoner's answer was incoherent. Cowering and trembling before his questioners, he seemed hardly to know what he had done. He was slim and gaunt, wore a ragged fringe of white beard and was clad in an ill-fitting suit of dark striped gray and a derby hat.

While the police were trying to learn his name, Mr. Polk was removed to the New York Hospital. By this time the plaza was literally packed with a jostling, morbidly curious crowd, some of whom cried: "Where's the assassin? Lynch him!"

It was thought at the time that the corporation counsel had lost most of his lower teeth and that the jawbone had been pierced in two places by the bullet, but a latter report from the hospital stated that only one tooth had been knocked out and that, unless blood poisoning set in, the wound would not prove serious.

The prisoner underwent a searching examination before Police Commissioner

New York Mayor's Appendicitis Rivals That of J. P. Morgan's in Sudden Acuteness.

New York, November 16.—Mayor John Purroy Mitchel was operated on at Roosevelt hospital yesterday afternoon for a sudden attack of acute appendicitis. He passed through the ordeal successfully and late last night his condition was encouraging to Dr. Charles H. Peck and Dr. Woodruff L. Post, the attending surgeons.

The mayor's attack was even more sudden than that which seized J. P. Morgan recently. On last Saturday morning, Mr. Mitchel, feeling in the best of health, went with his wife to the country home of Robert Goelt at Goshen, N. Y., for the week-end. He spent Sunday there, riding horseback part of the day, and returned in the evening to his home in the Peter Stuyvesant apartment house at Riverside drive and the Ninety-eighth street.

Shortly after his return he talked over the telephone with his secretary, Theodore Rousseau, and was reminded by Mr. Rousseau that he had an appointment to preside at 10 o'clock yesterday morning at the hearing by the board of estimate on the proposed new bus routes. The mayor replied he would be on hand. He was still feeling free from any ailment.

Before daybreak yesterday morning Mr. Mitchel awoke with a sharp pain in his right side which kept him awake most of the night. His suffering was intense and at 10 o'clock he telephoned to his office in City Hall that he would be unable to attend the hearing, but expected to be in his office later in the day. Mrs. Mitchel summoned Dr. Post, the family physician, who diagnosed the case as appendicitis, and at once called into consultation Dr. Brewer and Dr. Peck, among the surgeons who attended Mayor Gaynor when he was shot in Hoboken.

No special significance seems to attach to the attempt made Friday on the life of Mayor Mitchell of New York by a seemingly half-demented old man. But following so close upon the wounding of Mayor Gaynor in August, 1910, also by a man of unbalanced mind, it suggests that the position of mayor of New York may have come to be as risky as that of president of the United States.

Mahoney's act will be taken as ground for a fresh agitation for shutting up all the cranks, but it may be doubted whether. It is expected that Michael Mahoney, who shot at Mayor Mitchell of New York and hit Corporation Counsel Frank Polk, will be sent to Matteawan to be confined with the 'criminal insane. If so, he will not soon thereafter be making ridiculous the courts of two se countries by his escape and his fight for freedom. It takes money to do those things. That does not mean that the courts are directly influenced by the use of money, but money can hire resourceful lawyers, who will make it their business that, while the mills of the 'courts may grind slowly, they shall not grind exceeding small, nor with justice grind them all. Thaw and his horde of lawyers have shown old man Mahoney how, but the old man will not be able to follow the trail so openly blazed. It is a golden road, and Mahoney must stick to the asphalt or the macadam. These reflections are penned in sadness. They are not edifying.

From the many incoherent letters written by Mahoney in which he attacked the official acts of Mayor Mitchell of New York city, of Mayor Armstrong of Pittsburgh and of Col Goethals, governor of the Panama canal zone, and after a two hours' study of the aged man, District Attorney Whitman expressed the opinion that Mahoney was of the "embittered and sodden type of hobo."

Rank of Major Won Man Who Earlier Gained Civilian Distinction.

Lake Charles, La., July 6.—Major John Purroy Mitchel, former mayor of New York city, and an officer in the army aviation service, was killed to-day at Gerstner aviation field here, while flying in a scout machine.

The accident occurred at 7:30 a. m. on Gerstner field, fifteen miles from Lake Charles.

According to officials at Gerstner field Major Mitchel was in a single-seater scout machine, which had been in the air about half an hour.

The machine fell six hundred feet in an isolated section of the field. Officers could not determine the cause.

Mrs. Mitchel was there but did not witness the accident. She will accompany the body to New York to-night.

In His 39th Year.

New York, July 6.—John Purroy Mitchel, killed in an aviation accident to-day, became a flyer for the army after having been defeated last fall for re-election as mayor of New York. He had served one term and was the youngest man ever elected mayor. On July 19 next he would have been thirty-nine years old.

Course at Plattsburg.

Mitchel went into the army with previous military training, having taken the course at Plattsburg while he was mayor. Upon joining the aviation corps he was transferred to San Diego, Cal., where after successfully covering the cadet training he became a full-fledged flyer. He was frequently mentioned as having shown unusual daring.

John Purroy Mitchel is vindicated by his tragic death the entire sincerity of the intense patriotism he displayed as mayor of New York, particularly in his unsuccessful campaign for re-election last autumn. How much a misfortune to the city his defeat has been is apparent to anyone who follows closely the administration of his successor. It has been declared by certain critics of Mr. Mitchel that he overstressed the issue of Americanism in his assaults on his election opponents and thus alienated support that might have been his on purely local issues. Such a fault, if fault it was, is one to be forgiven. Mr. Mitchel was a fervent patriot, even if he blundered as a politician, and the discredit of his political downfall still rests heavily upon his home city, for incontestably the administration he gave it was one of the few of real excellence it has enjoyed in 60 years.

In enlisting in the army and in training to be an aviator, Mr. Mitchel followed a course corresponding to his highest ideals and his premature death is to be deeply mourned. While his decision to become an aviator must have seemed to many of doubtful wisdom, owing to his age, as aviation appealed to the bold and adventurous spirit that was his by inheritance from his Irish ancestors, Mr. Mitchel, it will be remembered, was the grandson of a famous Irish rebel, an exile of the middle of the 19th century; yet it was his own special merit and distinction that his Americanism was so pure that he could view the relations between the United States and the British empire from a strictly American point of view. His life and his death must be an inspiration, one may be sure, to all young Americans, particularly those of Irish origin.

In his automobiles of course he was permitted in the funeral procession. The honorary bearers and city officials will walk from City Hall to

Mitchel's Public Service

Mitchel went into the army with previous military training, having taken the course at Plattsburg while he was mayor. Upon joining the aviation corps he was transferred to San Diego, Cal., where, after covering the cadet training, he became a full-fledged flyer. He was frequently mentioned as having shown unusual daring.

Military matters were somewhat of a hobby with him while still in civil life, and during his mayoralty, even before the United States entered the war, he placed the police department partially on a military basis. He established a military training corps of policemen and organized an efficient home defense guard as soon as war was declared with Germany. He was credited with having brought the police department to the highest state of efficiency in the city's history.

A descendant of a New York family of Irish lineage which had figured prominently in the history of the city, he took part in civic activities while still in his 20s. At the age of 27, then a lawyer, he was appointed special counsel for the city to investigate city accounts, and the manner in which he performed his work attracted the attention of Mayor Gaynor, who appointed him commissioner of accounts. At 30 he was elected president of the board of aldermen. In this position he took a leading part in the subway investigation. Upon the death of Mayor Gaynor, before the end of his term, Mitchel became acting mayor, but resigned to become collector of the port of New York by appointment of President Wilson.

With the prestige of these offices and public service, Mitchel, running on a fusion anti-Tammany ticket, easily defeated Edward E. McCall for mayor in 1914. He took that office at the age of 34, and was credited with having administered affairs as one of the city's most successful mayors. He was attacked, however, by John F. Hylan, who defeated him for mayor last fall, for alleged extravagance in financial expenditures and unnecessary innovations, particularly in the employment of experts from other cities to assist in the administration of some departments, notably that of education. Mayor Mitchel established the Gary system and Hylan abolished it.

Mitchel's administration was marked by several controversies. One which attracted nation-wide attention was over affairs in charitable institutions. This brought him into conflict with a number of Catholic priests, although he himself was a Catholic.

A man named Mahoney fired a shot at Mitchel near the city hall four months after his inauguration. The bullet missed the mayor and wounded Frank L. Polk, then corporation counsel, now counselor of the state department.

Surrounded by a magnificent display of choice and beautiful flowers, the gifts of a host of friends, Mrs. Clarissa E. Collins, who was born in Hartford January 1, 1814, yesterday received at her home, No. 35 Hillhouse avenue, New Haven, on the occasion of her 100th birthday. Mrs. Collins was carried to the first floor of her home for the first time in about six months, and between 2:45 and 3:45 o'clock, greeted about sixty close friends. She is the widow of David C. Collins, one of the founders of the Collins Company of Collinsville.

Mrs. Collins's advancing years have taken her away from the activities that she followed until a few years ago, but it was apparent that she enjoyed every minute of her birthday party. She chatted with her many guests, and the arrival at the century mark was an event which gave her much happiness. The hour's reception tired her, yet she seemed regretful when it was over.

Scores of gifts were received by Mrs. Collins on this 100th birthday. Scores who did not attend the reception sent flowers and greetings, and the display of blossoms was an exquisite one. The aged woman received sitting down. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Godfrey Dunscombe, a daughter, who lives at No. 324 Pros-

The marriage of Miss Evelyn Quintard Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Jackson of No. 392 Washington street, Middletown, to John Lyman Cox of Philadelphia, took place to-day at 1 o'clock at the Church of the Holy Trinity in Middletown, the Rev. E. Campion Acheson, rector, officiating. Many guests from Hartford attended the ceremony and the reception at the home of the bride which followed and other out-of-town guests were present from Boston, Washington, and Philadelphia. The bride is a cousin of Walter L. Goodwin of this city and a number of entertainments have been given in her honor by Hartford friends. Mr. and Mrs. Cox will make their home in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Jackson of Middletown have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Evelyn Quintard Jackson, to John Lyman Cox, son of the late John Sitgreaves Cox of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Collins was born in Hartford 100 years ago yesterday. She was the daughter of William Ely and Clarissa (Davis) Ely. She married David C. Collins in 1832, five years after he and his brother, Samuel W. Collins, had started, in a small way, the Collins Company, now one of the largest concerns in the edge-tool business in the world. After her marriage, she and Mr. Collins lived on Farmington avenue, Hartford, across from where St. Joseph's Cathedral now stands. Later they lived in New York. Mr. Collins died in 1861. Two of their children died, Charles Henry Collins, the only son, a doctor, at the age of 26, and Miss Clara Collins, who lived with her mother, a few years ago.

Two daughters are still living. They are Miss Edith Collins, who lives with her mother and Mrs. Godfrey Dunscombe of No. 324 Prospect street, New Haven. Mrs. Dunscombe is widely known through her connection with the Connecticut Society of the Colonial Dames of America.

Mrs. Collins, in her day, was a great church worker and of a charitable disposition. Her great regret in recent years has been that her advanced age would not permit her to continue her church activities. Her Bible is still her great solace and she also derives much pleasure from the reading of the old church hymns. Her daughters spend many hours reading all her favorite hymns to her and often she requests that the same hymns be read over and over again.

COLLINS—Died at her residence, No. 35 Hillhouse avenue, New Haven, Conn., Wednesday, September 2, Mrs. Clarissa Ely, widow of David Collins, and daughter of William Ely, late of Hartford, in the 101st year of her age. Services at her late residence at half-past ten a. m. Friday. Commitment services in the Old North cemetery, this city, at half-past two p. m. Friday.

The New Haven papers report that the late Mrs. Clarissa Collins of that city left $500 each to the American Society for Foreign Missions and the Ladies' Home Missionary Society, and the balance of her estate of $50,000 to her daughter, Mrs. Godfrey Dunscombe. The executor is the Security Trust Company of this city.

COLLINS—At her residence, No. 35 Hillhouse avenue, New Haven, on Tuesday, June 30, 1914, Edith, second daughter of Clarissa Ely and the late David C. Collins, aged 76 years. Notice of funeral hereafter.

Miss Edith Collins died at her home in New Haven, Tuesday. She was the second daughter of the late David C. Collins, one of the founders of the Collins company, makers of axes and edged tools in Collinsville. She leaves her mother, Mrs. Clarissa Ely Collins, and a sister, Mrs. Godfrey Dunscombe of New Haven. Funeral of Miss Collins was held at her late home this afternoon. A cousin, Howard S. Collins of this city, died at his home in New Haven, Tuesday.

On New Year's Day the wedding of Miss Eleanor Sanford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sanford of Litchfield, and Mr. Winthrop Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackson of Middletown, was solemnized in St. Michael's Church in Litchfield. Miss Margaret Sanford was her sister's maid of honor and the Misses Joan Sanford, another sister, and Katherine Scott were the bridesmaids. Mr. John J. Jackson of New York was his brother's best man. The ushers were Messrs. Reginald Sanford, Irving Bacheller, James Cox and Richard Jackson. A reception followed the marriage ceremony at Elmcroft, the Sanford home.

FRIENDS GATHER AT EAGLEWOOD

Jan 1. — 1914

Home and Society Friends Greet Mrs. Charles B. Wood At Simsbury.

After the manner of the old time the portals of Eaglewood, the country residence of Mrs. Charles B. Wood at Simsbury, are open in welcome to home and society friends today.

It was the old time custom both in New York and Connecticut for the ladies to reserve this day especially to receive greetings from their gentlemen friends on New Year's Day and Mrs. Wood has held to this tradition for many years. No invitations have been issued and none was needed as the friends of the hostess well know the welcome in store for them at Eaglewood at New Year's, where the latchstring is always out.

Mrs. Wood has entertained several guests during the Christmas holidays and among the special guests she is entertaining now are Senator and Mrs. George P. McLean, Mrs. Alfred Howes of Toronto, Can., daughter of John Allen of Saybrook, and her brother, John C. Eno of New York. Her niece, Miss Mary C. Eno, has also been her recent guests.

Upon a slightly knoll just off Main street, with a backing of picturesque woodland, coursed by a clear brook and dotted with miniature ponds stands Eaglewood house, a spacious Colonial structure built by Hon. Elisha Phelps, a member of Congress for several years, about 100 years ago. Congressman Phelps, Mrs. Wood's grandfather, was a very patriotic man and chose for the symbol of his home, the American eagle to which, in finding a name for the place, Mrs. Wood has added the family name, making the name Eaglewood.

The home lot and accompanying area comprise 250 acres, consisting of a well kept grove, ponds, on which the Simsbury boys and girls skate in winter and picnic and play in summer. There are besides, fine conservatories and beautiful flower and landscape gardens and best of all the picturesque woods.

Another day of great interest and which Mrs. Wood holds in reserve for her friends large and small, is the Fourth of July, when she provides a band of music for the entertainment of her guests in the grove. The day is looked forward to eagerly by the townfolks each year, especially by the children. Mrs. Wood is broad in her charity which is quietly dispensed and only yesterday a needy family received a generous check, for relief in a case of sickness. At Christmas the church tree is weighted with sweetmeats for the children.

The old home, which has not been changed materially since it was built by the ancestor, is a study in itself.

A reporter of "The Courant" was received in the cosy, old-fashioned parlor. Filled with family heirlooms, conspicuous among which was the helpm coat-of-arms—the original emblem granted to the family, given to Wood by Mrs. Antoinette Phelps of Hartford. There, too, were fine tapestries that have been wrought at boarding school by Mrs. Wood's grandmother, Mrs. Lucy Smith, daughter of Captain John Smith of Middletown; the antique mantle clock, and the eagle, the home symbol, with its claws grasping national banners.

Mrs. Wood is the daughter of the late Amos R. Eno and Mrs. Lucy Jane (Smith) Eno. She was born and brought up in New York. Her father was of Simsbury and made a fortune in the mercantile business in Simsbury and Hartford, and afterward went to New York and became interested in real estate, investing largely in city property which yielded him large returns.

Aside from her home at Eaglewood Mrs. Wood has a home in Washington, D. C., where she spends the winter and to which she is preparing to go next week. There she is a neighbor of Senator and Mrs. McLean. She moves in the society of Washington and New York, has a wide acquaintanceship and many social friendships.

One of the most delightful debutante receptions of the winter took place Thursday afternoon between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock in the home of Mrs. George Benson Holbrook, who gave it to introduce her granddaughter, Miss Rachel Holbrook, daughter of George Milliens Holbrook. A dance followed in the evening, also at the home of Mr and Mrs G. B. Holbrook, the guests of the afternoon including the representative local society, men being invited as well as women. The guests for the evening, on the other hand, were limited to the younger set, about 200 being invited, and dancing began at 8.30. The beautiful home on Maple street was most attractively decorated for the occasion, the simplest decoration being used in the spacious rooms, which were found commodious for the enormous number of guests who came during the afternoon, as well as comfortable for dancing, owing to the length of the adjacent drawing and music rooms, with their large doorways.

The marriage engagement of Miss Rachel Holbrook, elder daughter of George Milliens Holbrook, to Jasper Adams Campbell, Jr., of New York was announced Saturday at a dinner given by Mr and Mrs George M. Holbrook at their home on Maple street. Covers were laid for 12, and the guests included only the immediate families of both the future bride and the groom. Dec 5 1914

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Fairbanks of No. 13 Hart street were busy yesterday acknowledging congratulations and best wishes which were showered upon them in recognition of the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding. Sixty years ago yesterday the couple were united in wedlock in Taunton, Mass., and for the past thirty-eight years have been residents of New Britain. During the day, the past noble grands of Stella Rebekah Lodge, No. 11, called at the Fairbanks home, and presented Mrs. Fairbanks with a handsome tea set in honor of the anniversary. Mrs. Edwin O. Keeling recited an original poem, which was composed especially for the occasion, and the party spent a most enjoyable afternoon as the guests of the happy couple. Mrs. Fairbanks has been an active member of Stella Rebekah lodge for the past thirty-eight years.

business and his opinion has been frequently sought as a textile expert.

Nine years ago he decided to relinquish his somewhat burdensome responsibilities as manager of a woolen mill in Indiana and he came to this city as manager of the Empire Steam Laundry on Sheldon street. For the past four years he has been a deacon of the Wethersfield Avenue Congregational Church.

The Grant Seamless Laundry Net Company of No. 296 Sheldon street was founded by Mr. Grant in 1908, and his son-in-law, Victor A. Moreau, has been associated with him in this industry, which has been having much success. In his work in connection with the laundry Mr. Grant saw that much unnecessary damage was done because of the tearing of the laundry nets and his experience in the woolen industry suggested the manufacture of these nets without seams, thus preventing this damage. A patent was applied for, and the sale of the Grant seamless net for laundries has increased rapidly, spreading to the far West.

Rev. Mr. Thrall's Resignation

Rev. William Patton, whose name was considered at the church meeting of the John Nelson Memorial church Wednesday night, as a candidate for the vacant pastorate, preached again very acceptably Sunday. He was graduated this week from Andover seminary and has also taken a degree at Harvard college. He and his fiancée were in town Tuesday looking over the parsonage. It is understood he is to be married in September. They were entertained by Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of Worcester, a personal friend, who has also entertained Rev. Mr. Patton on each occasion when he has preached at Leicester. Rev. Mr. Patton is a nephew of Rev. Cornelius Patton of Boston, the well known secretary of the Massachusetts home missionary society. Extensive repairs are being made to the Congregational parsonage. It was left in very excellent condition by the former occupants, Rev. and Mrs.

PASTOR CALLED

Rev. William Weston Patton Called to Congregational Pulpit

At the meeting of the John Nelson Memorial church it was voted unanimously to extend a call to Rev. William Weston Patton of Chicago, Ill., at a salary of $1200 and parsonage.

A meeting of the parish is called for this Friday evening and in case the parish concurs with this action of the church it is expected that Rev. Mr. Patton may take up his duties with this church Sept. 1, as he has signified to the committee his willingness to do so in the event of a call.

He was graduated Monday from Andover theological seminary and has also taken a degree at Harvard divinity school. He is also a graduate of Amherst college.

The young lady to whom he will be married during the summer is Miss Elizabeth Boynton, daughter of Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, the well known pastor of a large church in Brooklyn, N. Y., and prominent for years in connection with the Massachusetts missionary society. What makes it still more interesting is the fact that Rev. Mr. Patton is nephew of the secretary of that society, Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D. D.

The Leicester church will be fortunate if they secure so bright and promising a young clergyman and equally helpful and well educated wife who will bring new life into the church. The pulpit will be supplied during the summer by the church committee, as Rev. Mr. Patton leaves at once for a vacation trip to Maine.

Rev. and Mrs. R. W. Patton of Highland Park, Ill., arrived at the Congregational parsonage early this week on a visit to their son, Rev. William Weston Patton, and are to be here over the ordination and installation Thursday. Mrs. Patton's parents, Rev. and Mrs. Nehemiah Boynton D. D., Brooklyn, N. Y., also came later in the week and other relatives, a large number of college friends of the young clergyman, also were present Thursday.

The ordination of Rev. William Weston Patton and installation as pastor of the John Nelson Memorial church was carried out according to the program Thursday, and it was a notable leave of absence for a few days and had left the police station without saying where he intended to go. An hour or so later Mrs. Engelhardt received the following letter as supposed, from her daughter:—

"Dear Mamma: Dan and I are going to be married today. I am arranging to have this letter delivered to you shortly after 10 o'clock. If it is not, it will be no fault of mine. I know that I leave Babe in safe hands when he is with you, and I will soon come back to him. I ask you to forgive me. "Eva."

Postmarks on the envelope of the letter showed that it had been mailed in the Hartford post office a few minutes after Mrs. Christie left her home to go to her office. The "Babe" referred to in the letter is 5-years-old Everett Thomas Christie, Mrs. Christie's son. The young woman's parents said last night that they had no doubt but that their daughter and the policeman had been married, though they had not heard from them since they received the letter and had no idea where they might have gone. They seemed indignant that their daughter had eloped. Mrs. Engelhardt said that she would refuse to admit Ahern to her home and that

Mrs. Christie was married June 10, 1907, to P. H. Christie and was granted a divorce from him three years ago. Since then she has been living with her parents. Ahern has been married twice, both of his wives having died. He has been boarding at No. 12 Linden place.

He is six feet seven inches tall and his strength and weight have served him in many important arrests on the East Side, where he has done many years of duty. He is now a member of the day squad, covering a beat which includes Church, Trumbull, Ann and High streets and serving part of his time as a traffic officer at the corner of Main and Pratt streets.

The accompanying illustration is a reproduction of an unusually fine pastel painting executed by Clara Mamre Norton and shown with other paintings in Miss Norton's exhibition at her New York studio in the Atelier building, Sixty-seventh street.

Miss Norton is well known in Connecticut, being a native of Bristol and a former prize pupil of the Hartford Art Society. The portrait is an excellent likeness of the artist, and distinguished as well for the exceedingly successful treatment of the extended arms. The design as a whole is unique and striking, the drawing of the foreshortened forms masterly, and the color of restrained and dignified quality. Miss Norton has been registered to exhibit the portrait in Hartford may do so after the close of the New York exhibition.

February 15, 1914 LIKENESSES MADE

Springfield People in Silhouettes
When the Famous Edouart Was in This Country—Black Paper Likenesses of Once-Prominent Residents.

Silhouets of a number of Springfield people were included in the collection exhibited in November in New York by Arthur S. Fernay, which comprised the complete list of some 3600 portraits cut by the famous French silhouetist, Edouart, during the 10 years that he spent in this country between 1839 and 1849. Almost everyone of any note had to have his or her portrait cut by "the incomparable Edouart," and he visited most of the larger cities and the resorts where the fashionable and aristocratic congregated, always in great demand for his really remarkable art.

Saratoga was the queen of watering places in those days, and it was quite the thing to have one's portrait taken by the renowned foreign silhouetist who was already famous in England and had been created silhouetist to the French royal family. Many Springfield people who frequented Saratoga to "take the waters" sat for Edouart, who cut portraits from black paper that were astonishingly life-like and characteristic.

August Edouart was a good business man as well as an artist, and he cut every silhouette in duplicate, preserving one copy with data for his own use and giving the other to the sitter. Had it not been for this careful, methodical system the exhibition of his American silhouettes would have been impossible. After his stay in this country, which he seems to have enjoyed, always thereafter speaking with the greatest admiration and affection for America and Americans, Edouart cut no more silhouettes. The reason suggested is that the unfortunate return trip to England on which the vessel Oncida was wrecked in a storm, was such a fearful experience that the artist's hand lost its cunning.

Edouart managed to get to land from the wrecked vessel and to save his case of silhouettes. The wreck was off the coast of Guernsey and he was taken to the home of a man named Lukis, to whose daughter, Frederica, he gave his entire collection of silhouettes. From her grandson the collection was bought by Mrs F. Neville Jackson of London, who sold it to the present owner, Arthur S. Vernay.

Most of the Springfield people who had their portraits cut by the famous Frenchman seem to have been at Saratoga in July, 1842, and the members of the Dwight family evidently sat for the artist all on the same day. There was Mrs James Scutt Dwight (called Widow Dwight in the data on the back of the portrait), her son and his wife, Mr and Mrs George Dwight, her daughter and her husband, Mr and Mrs William W. Orne, and another son, Francis, of Albany, all of whose silhouettes were cut on July 23, 1842. Mrs Laura Childs was another of the Dwight children, of whom there were 10, whose portrait was cut at Saratoga, July 25, 1842. Her daughter, Selina Childs, had her portrait cut the same day, and the careful artist recorded that she was "aged 7." The tragic end of Mrs Childs and her daughter is known to those who know

In the same month, on the 21st, John Howard, president of the Springfield bank, and his sisters, Misses H. W. and M. O. Howard, sat for Edouart. Earlier in the month, the 3d, Col George Bliss, president of the Great Western railroad, was cut, and on the 29th, Col G. Ames. In August of that year, the 27th, Rev Justin Perkins of West Springfield, who, according to the notes of the careful Edouart, "translated the Bible into modern Syriac" and was a "missionary to the Nestorians of Persia," had his portrait taken. Rev E. J. Potter, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, sat for his silhouette some time in 1841 or 1842, and Rev E. P. Rogers, who is listed under Springfield as "pastor of the Fifth Congregational church," had his cut at Saratoga Springs, August 11, 1841.

In Mr Vernay's cataloged list of New York people whose silhouettes were included in Edouart's American collection appears the name of George Ireland, president of the Mutual insurance company, 52 Wall street, whose residence is put down as 172 Duane street. Mr Ireland, whose portrait was cut October 15, 1840, was the grandfather of Oscar B. Ireland of Ames hill.

Perhaps Edouart's most distinguished Springfield patron was George Ashmun, whose name appears in the catalog under Boston, the portrait having been cut on February 20, 1842, while he was in the House of Representatives in the midst of his brilliant career, and before he became a leader in national politics in the six years and after that he was in Congress. It is remembered that Mr Ashmun was chairman of the republican convention which met at Chicago in 1860 and nominated Lincoln for the presidency.

Mildred Rose.

One of the city's most promising elocutionists is Miss Mildred Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander C. Rose of No. 43 Lincoln street. When 6 years of age she began appearing at church and society entertainments and gradually drifted into public entertaining. She devotes herself to prose entirely, not caring for poetry, and believing that prose makes the best appeal to an audience. Her humorous work is the most popular, although she also devotes a part of all her programs to more serious effort. Her character portrayals are all good and her voice clear and distinct.

She has appeared at the Parsons Theater in benefit productions and has recited in Rockville, Middletown, Suffield, West Hartford and other places in the state. She is a native of Hartford and is in her senior year at the high school. After she is graduated she proposes to continue her study of elocution and eventually become a teacher of elocution or a professional elocutionist. She is a pupil of Miss Anna Weyand.

ATTRACTIVE BOOK PLATE.

Presented to Miss Hewins By Women's Clubs.

As a tribute of their appreciation of the never failing kindness of Miss Caroline Hewins, librarian of the public library, and her helpfulness, both personally and in their club work, a book plate, designed by Mr. Spenceley of New York, and five hundred prints, were presented to Miss Hewins by five women's clubs of Hartford. The clubs which took part were: The Four Corners' club, Miss Carolyn Goodwin, president; the Art club, Mrs. Joel L. English, president; the Conversation club, Mrs. Abijah Catlin, jr., president; the Friday club, Miss Carolyn Taylor, president, and the Thursday club, Mrs. Howard Goodwin, president.

The plate is a representation of the Gothic window and bookshelves in the room of the old library where Miss Hewins first began her long and faithful service as librarian. There is a dignity, purity of style and beauty in the design and execution as well as the subject selected, which makes the plate not only an appropriate gift but a work of art.

On Thursday morning, Miss Anne S. Peck, who is famous through her speaking French with him upon occasions—for Yorke was a fine French scholar—perhaps it was the half-foreign looks and half-foreign way of thinking about Moore which brought back to the Yorkshire man memories of his youthful days on the Continent that attracted him. Mr. Yorke lacked imagination. Well, what then? Is not imagination a rather dangerous attribute—akin to weakness—perhaps partaking of frenzy—a disease rather than a gift of mind? Probably all think so except those who possess it—or think they do. To hear them speak you would suppose that imagination imparted some glad hope to spring, some fine charm to summer, some tranquil joy to autumn, some consolation to winter which you do not feel. All illusion, of course, but the fanatics cling to their dream and would not give it up for gold.

The day after that first lot of machinery which Moore had ordered was destroyed in its passage across the heath by the "frame breakers" Caroline Helstone visited the cottage at the Hollow and stayed to tea. She had fallen in love with Robert when he first came, and as the days passed and she saw him in trouble and peril her love increased. "And when people love," mused Caroline, "the next thing is they marry." Robert was very tender to her that day after the breaking of the "frames," and when Caroline went back to the rectory she walked in a happy dream. Robert, too, as he went to the mill had a dream for a moment of the beautiful girl with her statue-like face; but he put it away from him sternly.

Love and marriage were not for him—unless love and marriage could help in the rehabilitation of the house of Gerard & Moore. Yet Robert spoke much of Caroline to his sister Hortense that evening—asked how the girl was getting on with her French, asked many little things about her, what she said and what she thought and how her health was. But he dreamed of machinery and of markets and finances that night and not of Caroline. As for Caroline, she lay for a while upon her bed, watching through the windows the shadows of the trees slant down the moonlit sward and then fell into slumbers which were haunted by visions of Directors of Board of Trade Entertained at Luncheon.

About twenty of the directors of the board of trade were entertained at the Hartford club, this afternoon, by Vice-President A. B. Gillett at a luncheon in honor of General Henry C. Dwight, who has been president of the board eleven years.

Proposed changes in the by-laws providing for automatic changes every two years in the board of directors were discussed and approved in about the same form that they were presented at the annual meeting.

General Dwight is positive in his declination to accept another term as president of the board, and the names of Dr. George C. F. Williams, Walter S. Garde and Mayor L. R. Cheney have been suggested as successors to General Dwight, when the board holds its election of officers.

The following amendment was approved by the board:

The board shall consist of twenty-five members elected for five years each in groups of five, and that directors elected in 1914 for less than four years shall be eligible to re-election. No one is eligible to re-election after a five years' term.

An amendment limiting the term of office of president and other officers to two years was disapproved.

Eulogistic remarks about General Dwight were made by John M. Holcombe, Charles E. Billings, Charles Hopkins Clark, P. Henry Woodward, Thomas J. Kelley and Secretary David W. Nichols.

HARVARD ORATOR NEGRO

Has Won High Honor in His Class— Will Work to Educate Colored People.

The town of Englewood, N. J., is proud of the fact that one of its sons, negro though he be, will be graduated from Harvard university next June with the honor of being class orator, a distinction for which there were six candidates. The young man is Alexander L. Jackson, and unless all signs fail, he seems destined to be, in his maturer years, a leader of his race.

Jackson was born in Englewood, on March 1, 1891. The son of hard-working parents. His father died a few years ago, but his mother still lives here, where she is self-supporting and much respected. As a youngster Alexander did anything he could to earn money. He sold newspapers, worked as a chauffeur and as a store clerk, tended furnaces, waited on table, tutored and tried his hands at many kinds of labor. He worked his way through school and college.

Jackson's school record is one of steady progress. He was graduated from Lincoln grammar school in Englewood in 1905, being the valedictorian of his class. He attended the

He was born in 1891, the son of hard-working parents. He has sold newspapers, worked as a chauffeur, tended furnaces, waited on table and acted as a tutor. As her certificate of registry was dated at Nassau, April 23d, 1864, this must have been her first, and, without doubt, will be her last, trip as a blockade runner. Her captain, Frank M. Harris, (Master in the rebel navy and late of the U. S. navy) together with the purser, surgeon, three engineers, and a crew of forty men, are held as prisoners. Her cargo, which is a very valuable one, consists principally of 600 bales of cotton and a quantity of tobacco. In the chase, she threw overboard several hundred bales of cotton, but afterwards, with her aid, we succeeded in picking up most of it. All of her nautical instruments, &c., were thrown overboard by order of her captain, and were lost. She has been sent to Boston for sale.

This is the third prize that the Grand Gulf has captured. The first was the Banshee, a Clyde built iron side-wheel steamer, with an assorted cargo of merchandise. She was purchased by the Navy Department and altered into a gunboat, and is now doing blockade duty off Wilmington. The next was the Mary Ann, a fine Clyde built, iron side-wheel steamer, and a valuable prize. Her cargo consisted of 246 bales of cotton and a quantity of tobacco.

The Grand Gulf was built by Messrs. C. & R. Pollion, of New York, and sold by them to the Navy Department. She has proved to be very fast and I assure you that we consider ourselves fortunate, as well as honored, in being attached to her.

ing with coal; her log shows she was for Matanzas partially unloaded, and thence to Nassau, N. P., where she changed her name from the "Conqueror," of New York, to the "Young Republic," of Nassau, N. P. Now, who shipped anthracite coal for a neutral port frequented by the Confederacy and their allies? And what became of it after it arrived at its destination? We venture to say that the one who shipped that coal left the wharf in New York; and her change of name and her sale are so plainly traitorous, that if the Government overlook such a transaction, it has no right in future to say a word against England. The veil is so flimsy that comment is superfluous.

It is a curious circumstance, that two months had elapsed between the capture of the Mary Ann and the capture of the Young Republic, with the difference of only eleven miles north and thirty-eight miles east, sighting them both about the same time in the morning, but gaining on and capturing the Clyde-built steamer in less time than the American.

From an authoritative source THE TIMES learns that the holdings of the Pease estate in the Hart & Hegeman company have been sold to Shiras Morris, director and president of the organization.

The price is not made public, although it is understood it was considerably higher than the inventory price. The late Alfred H. Pease, who was president of the company at the time of his death, held 560 shares, which were inventoried at $280,000, or $500 a share. The sale places Mr. Morris in control.

It has been rumored that a well-known Hartford manufacturing concern was back of the purchase, but it is stated with authority that the company will remain under the control of Mr. Morris and his associates, who have been in charge since its organization.

The factory is at No. 342 Capitol avenue and is engaged in the manufacture of electric switches for controlling electric lights, a line of competition with the Westinghouse company, and is doing a very large and prosperous business. The capital is only $21,000.

PORTLAND. YALE PROFESSOR FOR TREASURY JOB. Reilly Recommends John P. Norton to Succeed John S. Williams.

Washington, Jan. 17.

Professor John Pease Norton of New Haven has been recommended to President Woodrow Wilson and Secretary of the Treasury W. G. McAdoo, by Congressman Thomas L. Reilly, for appointment to the place of assistant secretary of the treasury to succeed John Skelton Williams, who will probably be confirmed as comptroller of the currency by the Senate on Monday. When the Senate sub-committee voted to report favorably on the President's appointment of Mr. Williams as comptroller, many eyes were turned on the job which he would probably vacate, and with the full committee report to the Senate this afternoon, many efforts are being made to land the lesser job.

John Pease Norton was born in Suffolk July 28, 1877, the son of John Hughes Norton and Annie Lord Lombard Norton. He took his A. B. from Yale University in 1899 and his Ph.D. in 1901. From 1901 to 1904 he was instructor in economics and statistics and since that time has been assistant professor of railway and trade statistics. He is also actuary for Fisk & Robinson of New York. During the St. Louis Exposition of 1904 he was secretary of the department of historical economic institutions, and in 1907 was a member of the committee of 100 for establishing a national department of health. ## LISTENING TO EUROPE WITHIN ACCOMPLISHMENT

Hartford Resident President of American Radio Relay League of International Amateurs—Relaxation of U. S. Government Restrictions.

What is said to be the most powerful wireless station in the state has just been completed at the residence of Hiram Percy Maxim at No. 276 North Whitney street this city. Two lofty poles have been erected in the rear of the grounds and these support a curtain of antennae wires especially designed by Mr. Maxim for long distance communication. The receiving and transmitting instruments are installed inside the house, the exterior wires from the antennae leading in through the walls.
Especially sensitive receiving instruments are located in the library of the residence and all of the transmitting apparatus is located in the cellar.

Distant control mechanism in the library controls the transmitter in the cellar, so that regular wireless communication with all parts of the country can be conducted from the library.

The relay lines of the American Radio Relay league between New York and Boston. It is said to be the most powerful yet erected in Connecticut and probably one of the five most powerful amateur radio stations in the United States. The others are owned by prominent amateurs in New York, Boston, Chicago and St. Louis.

Latest Developments.

In the construction of the station many of the latest developments in wireless have been taken advantage of.
Principal among these is the form given the antennae. Usually this is arranged between two masts the wires, usually two in number, running from mast to mast. Wooden spreaders at the mast heads separate the wires. As opposed to this arrangement, this new station has a single supporting wire running from mast head to mast head, and from this supporting wire seventeen phosphor bronze wires lead down. Thus, instead of two wires running parallel to the ground, there is in this new Maxim station a curtain of fine wires having a width of fifty feet and a height of eighty feet. This construction is said to be the latest method by which powerful impulses may be sent out on the short wave prescribed by the government for amateurs.

The poles or masts are also representative of the latest developments. Instead of being made from solid timbers fastened together to give the necessary height, the masts are built up from spruce strips, much as expensive fishing rods are built up of strips of bamboo. Selected spruce boards such as are used in the construction of flying machines are fastened together with rust proof nails, all joints breaking at different places,
and so arranged as to produce a graceful taper mast, said to have extraordinary flexibility and strength, with small size and weight. Each strip was tested all over before being put in stricted space and the great lengths of the masts. This work was done by Bill Brothers of this city. The plans made were so well worked out that after erecting the necessary hoisting gear it only required one hour and a half to stand each pole on end and fasten all guy wires. The preparations, however, required the better part of a day, for each mast.

In discussing the erecting with Mr.
Maxim he stated that he was fearful that the masts might not be strong enough to stand the strain of lifting from a single hitch made below the middle point. He expected to see the mast bend nearly double when lifted this way or to break. The "fish rod" construction, however, quickly overcame this fear, for the masts bent but slightly when lifted and showed no sign of being anywhere near the breaking point.

Mr. Maxim says that the signals from this station are expected to be readable easily in Chicago, and in favorable weather in Kansas City. These ting is by federal law. With the lofty antennae and the large number of wires and their great spread, and their flat surface facing almost exactly due east, Mr. Maxim sees no reason why he should not hear most of the European stations. It is no unusual thing for an amateur station to hear the large European stations, but it is expected in this new installation at the Maxim residence that many smaller ones will be heard, as well as all of the wireless telephone work done within 2,000 miles.

Mr. Maxim is president of the American Radio Relay league, an international organization of amateurs, who number several thousand, and publish the wireless magazine known as "QST." Members of this organization carry on a relay system among themselves and friends so that messages to any part of the country are forwarded by wireless free of charge. Elaborate trunk line systems have been organized running from coast to coast and from lower Alaska over the Mexican border.
Before the war closed up all amateur stations it was customary to send a message to Los Angeles or San Francisco, Hartford or New York, and back the same evening. The message was from an amateur in New York city to one in Los Angeles and the answer back in New York in one hour and forty minutes.

Renewed Activity.

It is said that even greater activity among amateurs in wireless will occur this winter, on account of the large numbers of young men who received radio training in military service during the war. Mr. Maxim stated that many of the relay stations in the league are owned and operated by the young men who conducted the important naval and army radio communications during the war, and represent the most skillful wireless operators in the world. He said that all of the principal heads in the naval and army wireless establishments were amateurs before the war, and are now back at their private stations, and in charge of the amateur league traffic.

The headquarters of the American Radio Relay league is in this city in the Waverly building, where the magazine
"QST" is published. Lieutenant K. B.

 Quiet Ceremony Followed by Reception to 375 Guests.

The first wedding of especial importance in the new year is that which took place last evening, when Miss Ruth Houston Caldwell, daughter of Mr and Mrs Winford N. Caldwell of Ridgewood place, became the bride of Emmett Hay Naylor, son of Mr and Mrs William A. Naylor of Chicago, Ill. Although the guests attending the wedding included only the immediate families and a few intimate friends of the couple, those bidden to the following reception took in a larger circle of friends, the plans for the wedding being accordingly simple, while the reception was made more elaborate. Both young people are well known to local society, the bride being one of the most popular young women in the younger set. The groom came to this city only three years since, but has established a large circle of acquaintances in town. Society has anxiously awaited the date of the marriage since the announcement of the engagement, and Miss Caldwell's many friends are congratulating themselves that she is not to leave Springfield, but is to make her future home in the city.

The hour appointed for the wedding last evening was 7 o'clock, the officiating clergyman being Rev Dr Philip S. Moxom of the South Congregational church. The single-ring service was used, the bridal party being very small. The bride was attended only by her maid of honor, Miss Helen D. Clark of Kansas City, Mo., who was formerly a classmate at Vassar. The best man was Robert W. Fernald of Winchester, a college friend of the groom. The only music was during the ceremony, when the orchestra played softly Liszt's "Liebestraum" and Saint-Saens's "Le Cid."

The bridal gown was an exquisite creation of white satin charmeuse, with an overdress of point d'aleneon, the trimming being of chiffon and pearls. The tulle veil was fastened to a band of point d'aleneon combined in a soft chaplet with orange blossoms. The bride carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids. Her traveling suit was of black zibeline, with a collar and waistcoat of white satin, and trimmings of black velvet. A contrasting touch was given in the chiffon blouse worn with the suit, the collar of this being burnt orange. A black hat was worn with the suit, this being edged with skunk fur and trimmed with a fur "stick-up" and velvet flowers of burnt orange. The maid of honor wore a white brocaded crepe de chine, with tunics of tulle, with trimmings of strass. Touches of pink were used on waist and skirt, and she carried an arm bouquet of pale pink Killarney roses.

The reception began at 7.30 o'clock, and following the supper dancing was enjoyed between the hours of 8.30 and midnight in the elaborate ballroom built so attractively for the wedding. The bride and groom were assisted in receiving by both Mr and Mrs Winford N. Caldwell and Mr and Mrs William A. Naylor. Mrs Caldwell appeared in a gown of gray brocaded chiffon velvet over peau de poche satin, the trimmings being of rhinestones and pearls. The gown was made with a train, and Mrs Caldwell carried a hand bouquet of violets and lilies of the valley. Mrs Naylor was gowned in black thread lace, this being used over white satin. A brocaded velvet train and a bodice of rose point lace completed the costume, the jewels worn with it being pearls and diamonds. American Beauty roses were the flowers carried by Mrs Naylor.

The ceremony took place at the northern end of the library before the fireplace, which was banked in with smilax and ferns and garlanded with ropes of the delicate southern smilax. A cluster of Easter lilies reached the ceiling and fell over the mantel, and vases of white roses were used in other convenient parts of the spacious room. Southern smilax outlined the wide doors, and fell gracefully from the windows, the same decoration being carried into the adjoining music-room. Baskets of white roses were also used in the latter room to vary the color scheme. The hall was simply decorated with southern smilax, the green and white predominating here, as a large vase of Easter lilies was used in a conveniently

After an extended wedding trip, the destination of which the young couple did not divulge to their friends, Mr and Mrs Naylor will make their home for the present in the residence of the bride's parents, as Mr and Mrs Caldwell are planning to be away this winter. They will make their future home in the city, although they have not yet decided where. The bride is a graduate of "The Elms" and of Vassar college. She is a member of the College club, Country club and the Springfield art society. Her father, Mr Caldwell, is president of the American writing paper company and president of the Springfield institution for savings. The groom's father, William A. Naylor, is general manager of the American express company in Chicago, Ill. The groom, Emmett Hay Naylor, is a graduate of Dartmouth college, Columbia university law school and the graduate school of Harvard university, from which he was called to the secretaryship of the board of trade three years ago. In colleges and universities he was member of leading fraternities and clubs, Psi Upsilon, Theta Nu Epsilon, Phi Delta Phi (law) and class and literary societies. He is also a member of the Noyasset club, Country club, Dartmouth lunch club, Harvard club, the Literary club and the Springfield art society. He is president of the New England associates of civic secretaries and national secretary-treasurer of the American association of commercial executives.

The out-of-town guests included: Mr and Mrs Henry M. Hobart, John C. W. Tobin and Charles Warren, all of New York city; Mrs A. L. Pratt, Elton G. Pratt and Roy Murchie, all of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Miss Marguerite Gamage of Pawling, N. Y.; Miss Charlotte Burnette of Fort Plain, N. Y.; Alexander D. Naylor of Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs E. H. Palmer, Mr and Mrs H. # LOVING CUP FOR JOHN M. HOLCOMBE

Honors Paid to Phoenix Mutual President. HIS ASSOCIATES

SOUND HIS PRAISE

"Holcombe Day" in the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company was January 15, 1914. It was in honor of President John M. Holcombe, but he had not the faintest inkling of it until last night at a dinner given at the Hartford Club by the officers, directors and a few of those long associated with him in the office. It had come August 1, 1914, his suspicions might have been aroused from things he had seen occurring, for that date would mark his fortieth anniversary. As it was, the field men of the company throughout the country achieved a tremendous surprise for him.

For the whole month of January the men had resolved to make special effort, but the 15th was to be the bright, particular day. Those at the home office who were in league with the men had equipped them with a special application blank. The first page of this blank was the "binding receipt," to be detached and given as a receipt to each applicant who paid his first premium on that date. The front side of this receipt bore a handsomely engraved portrait of the president. Each application itself was then put in a special envelope, in the corner of which the agent wrote his name, and then was forwarded through the manager to the home office. The total amount of insurance secured for that day was $639,515, in 301 applications, on which $19,244 was paid in premiums. This exceeds all records in the company for one day. But more than the applications, to Mr. Holcombe himself, were the expressions of regard which the men also slipped into the envelopes or sent by special letter or wire.

All that Mr. Holcombe knew of the affair at the end of the day was that everyone had been quite busy, until he recalled an appointment he had with Charles E. Gross, the company's general counsel, at the Hartford Club to meet a friend of Mr. Gross's and went over there for that purpose. From the moment he entered the building the curtain began to lift for him and continued to lift throughout the evening.

Mr. Gross's "friend" was numerous and soon Mr. Holcombe was seated at dinner with them. After the dinner Vice-President and Actuary Archibald A. Welch addressed to Mr. Holcombe remarks expressive of the sentiment of everybody connected with the company and closed with putting before the president a beautiful gold loving cup, bearing this inscription:—

New Britain, January 20.

Mr. and Mrs. Abram Howell, of No. 32 Cottage Place will observe their fifty-first wedding anniversary on Thursday. ily gathering. There will be present their daughter, Mrs. John Turner, who gained distinction by having driven her automobile all the way from Berkeley, Cal., to this city a distance of 4,080 miles, and Mrs. William Hart, of Wethersfield, their granddaughter. Mrs. Howell recently recovered from a severe illness. Mr. Howell is in excellent health.

Mr. and Mrs. Howell were married in New Haven by the Rev. Orrin D. Judd, then pastor of the First Baptist church of that city. They have spent all of their married life, with the exception of six years, in this city. Two children were born of the union, Charles L. Howell, who died several years ago in Hartford, and Mrs. Grace E. Turner, lately of Berkeley, Cal., but who ed the call for volunteers for the war and served for three years.

Four Brothers Off to War.

The patriotic spirit of the Howells was strong, the family being represented by six on the battlefield. Leverett and Edwin Howell went out from New Britain with Company F, Fourteenth Connecticut Volunteers. James Howell went out with the Seventh from New Haven, and Abram joined Company K, Sixty, from this city. Lyman E. Bradley, a brother-in-law, was with Company G, Seventh, and a half brother, Samuel Green, went out with the Sixteenth. When Abram Howell left New Britain for the war he carried with him a picture of the girl he loved and wore it throughout the war. As soon as he returned, learning that she had waited for him, he made haste to have the marriage ceremony performed. The Sixth regiment participated in twenty-three engagements.

Mr. Howell, after the war, made his home in New Britain, taking up housekeeping in a house that stands on the site of the Stanley Memorial church. Mr. Howell was employed in the grocery business for years. For sixteen years he was the local representative of the Grand Union Tea company. Since giving up that business he has followed no active employment. He is the present sexton of Stanley Memorial church. Mr. Howell is one of the oldest members of Stanley post, G. A. R., and is one of its past post commanders. He served as one of the staff of Commander-in-Chief Beers. Mr. Howell was present at the national encampment which was held at Los Angeles, Cal., two years ago, and at that time visited his daughter in the west.

Silas H. Cornwell, secretary of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company, completed forty-eight years of service with that company yesterday. The anniversary was observed by scores of associates and other friends and an informal luncheon was given to Mr. Cornwell in the directors' room of the Phoenix Mutual Building at which the officers of the company and a few of the older employees were present.

When Mr. Cornwell entered his office yesterday morning he found his desk covered with flowers from his associates. There were also letters of congratulation from a number of old policyholders and a gold pencil, the gift of Charles E. Gross, general counsel of the Phoenix Mutual.

At noon Secretary Cornwell was invited to a luncheon laid in the directors' room. There were present, besides Mr. Cornwell, President John M. Holcombe, Vice-President Archibald A. Welch, Assistant Secretary Oliver M. Thurman, Cashier Harry E. Johnson, Superintendent of Agencies Dr. George S. Miller and eight of the veteran members of the Phoenix Mutual office force.

President Holcombe made a short speech in which he referred to Secretary Cornwell's "remarkably unselfish devotion to the duties of his office" and told what a joy it had been to work with him. Mr. Holcombe also reviewed the great growth and progress of the company during the time that Mr. Cornwell had been with it. Vice-President Welch spoke in a similar vein and said he hoped that if he should remain with the company as long a time it would be possible for others to speak as highly of his work as they had of Mr. Cornwell's. Dr. Miller, who entered the employ of the Phoenix Mutual seven years after Mr. Cornwell, reviewed the progress of the company during these years.

Mr. Cornwell was born in Canaan Four Corners, N. Y., where he lived until he was a young man. He came to Hartford to become a clerk in the Phoenix Mutual, March 7, 1868. His brother, Harry Cornwell of this city, was at that time employed by the company and it was through his efforts that Silas Cornwell came to this city.

After a few years Mr. Cornwell was promoted to be a bookkeeper. In 1903 he was appointed assistant secretary and in December, 1904, secretary of the company. He was elected a director, January 11, 1914.

Mr. Cornwell was a charter member of Company K, First Regiment, C. N. G. He is a member of the Hartford Golf Club, Washington Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar, and Sphinx Temple, Mystic Shrine.

Fifty Years With Phoenix Life, Vice-President S. H. Cornwell Is Honored by His Associates.

Profusion of Flowers, Some From Far Out of the City
—Gold Pen, Silver Vase, and Telegrams and Letters in Great Number.

Vice-President Silas H. Cornwell, of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance company, celebrated, to-day, the fiftieth anniversary of his connection with the company. The flowers which covered his desk on his arrival at the office transformed the room into a florist's shop, and in addition there were other gifts and remembrances, with numerous telegrams and letters of congratulation.

Manager C. W. Welles, of the Connecticut department, gave to Mr. Cornwell over a million and a half of new business that the managers from various sections had contributed in honor of the occasion, and there was also a gift of a gold fountain pen from the managers.

A basket of flowers three feet in height was from the employees of the home office. There was a basket of fifty pinks from Vice-President Winslow Russell, and a basket of deep red carnations from the force in the St. Louis office. W. F. Hilton, formerly of the Phoenix Mutual, and Howard H. Keep, who had been associated with Mr. Cornwell upwards of forty years, were represented by a basket of fifty roses. The auditing department contributed a silver vase containing sweet peas.

The Phoenix Mutual was only seventeen years old when Mr. Cornwell entered its employ as a young clerk in the bookkeeping department. He was promoted to the head of the department and later became assistant secretary and secretary, and last January was elected a vice-president.

SILAS H. CORNWELL.

He has been a director for several years.

Mr. Cornwell is faithful in his attendance at his desk, and it is a rare occasion when he misses a day. He received with deep pleasure the well wishes of his associates to-day.

Marion Gaynor, 16 years old, daughter of the late Mayor William Gaynor, married to Ralph Heywood Isham, son of the late Mayor Isham, a New Jersey capitalist and president of the Maryland. The wedding came as a surprise.

The rectory where the reception was held is the house where Colonel Mosby of the Confederate forces was captured. Brigadier-General Stoughton of the Union army during the Civil war. Miss Antonio Ford, a friend of the bride, was accused of being Mosby's accessory, and Major Willard, a member of a Washington family, was sent to arrest her. He fell in love with his prisoner and later married her. Joseph Willard, United States ambassador to Spain, is their son, and their granddaughter, Miss Willard, will soon marry Colonel Roosevelt's son, Kermit.

Celebrate Wedding Anniversary.

Tuesday night Mr. and Mrs. J. Fayette Douglass celebrated their golden wedding in a very quiet manner. They had not expected to observe the anniversary at all but a surprise party of fifteen near relatives was organized and the couple were much surprised. An anniversary supper took place. For

MRS. ROBERT B. CLARKE.

Windsor, January 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bradley Clarke, well-known residents of Palisado avenue quietly celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding to-day by entertaining their children and grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke were married at Haddam Neck by the Rev. J. E. Hawkins, then pastor of the Methodist church of that town. Six children have been born to them, three sons and three daughters, four of whom now survive.

In politics Mr. Clarke never failed to show his colors, being one of the staunchest of democrats. Under the Cleveland administration he served as postmaster in the town of Higganum. Previous to this he held the position of deputy sheriff for many years. Being a man of the fearless type, this rendered him most fit for such a position.

For the past fifteen years Mr. Clarke has devoted his whole time to his extensive tobacco holdings in Windsor. The couple are now enjoying fairly good health, considering their years, Mr. Clarke being 71, while his wife is three years his junior.

Family Party.

Mrs Abigail Blondin will receive the congratulations of friends and entertain a family party at the home of her daughter, Mrs Delia White, on Hawley street, Northampton, to-day, in observance of her 100th birthday. Mrs Blondin is in excellent health, but within the last few years has become blind. Her hearing is good and her strength of voice and interest in conversation and in what is going on about her suggests a much younger person. Mrs Blondin is French, but speaks English readily. She is able to find her way about the house and takes care of her own room and assists in washing dishes and in other household tasks.

She was born in Montreal, February 1, 1814, the daughter of Mr and Mrs John Laflamme. She had three brothers and three sisters, none of whom are now living. Her father's family moved to Vermont when she was a child, and the family lived in Swanton, Cambridge and other places in that state. She was married in Swanton, and became the mother of 13 children. Her husband died many years ago, and five of her children survive. The children are Mrs Rosella Girard of New York, Mrs Mary Arsino of Montague City, Mrs Olive Wyman of Northampton, Mrs Delia White of Northampton and Joseph Blondin of Worcester. She has 22 grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren. Mrs Blondin lived in Montague City a number of years, and moved to Northampton about 12 years ago. An interesting feature of the reunion to-day will be singing by Mrs Blondin of songs of her girl-

 Mr. Ward was the guest of the

 main figure in the act, being a singer was singing in a motion picture theaappearance on the vaudeville stage, he has been a success.

To add to the "surprise" feature of the marriage, Mrs. Ward is back at her work in the Nevels office and appeared much unconcerned yesterday.
 Other employees of the firm called her up on business during the day, but nothing was said about the marriage.
 The family was reticent when asked of the affair last evening, having little to say beyond confirming the report that the marriage had taken place.
 Miss Ferguson has been with the Nevels firm about seven years.

MASON 56 YEARS

Treasurer of Lodge In Rock- ville Half a Century.

ROCKVILLE, Sunday, Feb. 1.

The record for long continued and unbroken official service for fraternal organizations for this state, or any state, for that matter, held by Hon. E.
 Stevens Henry as treasurer of Fayette Lodge, A. F. & A. M., is unique and is believed to be unparalleled in the history of any fraternity. He has served Fayette Lodge as an officer continuously for the past fifty-six years and for fifty years of that time has been the treasurer. Mr. Henry was the second member raised in Fayette Lodge after its removal, on October 15, 1856, from Ellington, to its new home in the old "King Tavern" building in Rockville. On June 17, 1857, being then just four months past his 21st birthday, Mr. Henry made application to Fayette Lodge for admission.
 He was accepted, and on July 1, 1857, was initiated as an Entered Apprentice Mason, and July 24, was passed to the degree of Fellowcraft, and was raised to the degree of Master Mason.
 The following year, 1858, he was elected secretary, being installed in that office on July 28. On April 17, 1859, he was elected junior warden. He was reelected to that office on February 26, 1860, and was again reelected on February 27, 1861. On December 25, 1861, he was elected and installed as senior warden, and was reelected on December 25, 1862. On December 23, 1863, he was elected treasurer, being installed on January 9, 1864. He has been annually and unanimously re-elected by the lodge to that honorable and responsible position at every annual communication since then, and is now on his fifty-first year as treasurer.
 Out of fifty-seven years' membership in Fayette Lodge, he has been for fifty-six years an officer. He is one of the oldest and ablest men in the Masonic order in this state. Fayette Lodge has recently adopted resolutions expressing appreciation of his faithful and honorable service, given without wish or desire for reward, manifesting as it has his great interest in the lodge and the order.

Former Hartford Boy Chosen In Archdiocese of Balti- more.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Stickney of Summit

APPOINTMENT BY CARDINAL GIBBONS

Announcement was made at Baltimore this week by Cardinal Gibbons of the appointment of Rev. Louis R.
 Stickney as chancellor of the Roman Catholic archdiocese of Baltimore.
 Father Stickney will succeed Rev. P.
 C. Gavan, who has been appointed pastor of the Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church of Washington, D. C. Father Stickney is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Stickney of Summit street, Hartford.

Father Stickney is now a member of the household of Cardinal Gibbons, having been stationed at the cathedral at Baltimore for six years. He has had charge of all the foreign correspondence of the Cardinal, which has been very heavy in recent years, besides his parish duties. He filled the usual duties of the parish jointly with the other priests of the household and in late years has had charge of the Cathedral Sunday school.

Father Stickney is at present taking up gradually the duties of his new office and little by little will relieve Father Gavan of the many details of financial affairs of the archdiocese.

The newly appointed chancellor is one of the youngest men to fill this important office in the church, which brings the incumbent in very close touch with the head of the archdiocese. It is well known that the Cardinal has the highest regard for the abilities of Father Stickney. Besides the ordinary routine of taking up problems presented to the Cardinal, the chancellor handles large investments and special bequests made to the prelate. All the collections taken up in the various parishes pass through his hands and he must make an accounting.

Father Stickney was born in Newark, N. J., but shortly after his birth his parents removed to Hartford, where he spent his boyhood. He was educated in the parochial schools of this city and in 1892 entered St. Charles college, then at Ellicott City, Md. He was graduated from that institution in 1896 and went to Rome to study at the American College.

Father Stickney was ordained at Rome, June 15, 1902, and his ability and scholarly attainments were recognized almost immediately and he was sent to Canada as secretary to the papal delegate, stationed at Ottawa. He remained there about a year and on January 1, 1904, succeeded Mgr. Rooker as secretary to the apostolic delegate at Washington. In this position he received wide experience which fitted him for the work which followed when on March 8, 1908, he was transferred to the household of Cardinal Gibbons and given charge of the foreign correspondence of the cardinal.

His ability was recognized by the Pope for in June, 1908, Father Stickney received from Pope Leo XIII a "Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice" medal which has been granted to very few individuals in this country. It is given to the military and clergy alone and was first made at the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the elevation of Leo in 1888. It is given each year to a few persons in these two branches who have rendered especial service to the church and the Pope.

Father Stickney is a frequent visitor at the home of his parents in this city and has many friends here who will be pleased to hear of his marked advancement. Father Stickney is a nephew of the late Rev. D. DeWulf through his employing the former Mrs. Baldwin to help him with these affairs during the past two months that the romance began which culminated in the marriage yesterday.

The ceremony was brief, made so by the minister at the request of both bride and bridegroom. It was a simple ring service, and scarcely three minutes elapsed from the time the party entered the hotel parlor until the minister had read the ceremony, offered a short prayer and pronounced the couple man and wife.

Mrs. Norton stood by the side of her mother and the other two witnesses stood at the other side, near Mr. Nettleton. The aged bridegroom and his bride, but twenty years his junior, seemed happy. In Bristol, friends of the couple look upon the wedding as a satisfactory arrangement for both.

Within a few days Mr. and Mrs. Nettleton will leave for a wedding journey to Washington, Norfolk and other Southern cities, and will spend some time in Florida, where Mr. Nettleton has spent his winters for several years.

Mr. Nettleton is one of the most respected citizens of Bristol. He has been a director of the Bristol National Bank since its organization forty years ago. A short time ago he asked to be released from the board and the other directors said that they would never accept his retirement. He is in good health and for an hour before his wedding he walked about Hartford's busy streets unaccompanied.

Mrs. Nettleton was born in Guilford and during her former married life lived in Branford. She was the widow of John U. Baldwin, who died twenty-one years ago. For some years she has made her home with her daughter, Mrs. F. C. Norton, in Bristol. She is well preserved, and her appearance does not reveal her 68 years of age. She has three sisters over 70 years old, all living, Mrs. H. G. Smith, of Hartford, aged 70; Mrs. Cynthia P. Hall of Hartford, aged 72, and Mrs. N. Bartholm of Oakland, Cal., aged 74.

He was discharged in New York just following the time of the draft riots in that city. Some of the more important engagements in which he participated were the first and second battles of Bull Run; the seven days' battle before Richmond; the battles of Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville. brigade staff he was wounded and lost his leg at Wilmington, N. C., Febru-cuperation at Moosup, he was em-

at Springfield, Mass. for a few years.
Following this he returned to Moosup, where he worked in a retail dry goods and grocery store, being postmaster for seven years.

Ill health in his family necessitated more or less of his time being spent in Florida for the next few years. In 1881 he represented the town of Plainfield in the Legislature. In that year he moved to Central Village in which town he has since lived. He was appointed state factory inspector in 1889 and was reappointed for a sec-term, he was appointed an agent of the state board of education which place he held until he resigned a year and a half ago because of ill health.

He was sent to the Legislature the second time in 1905.

He has always been strongly identified with the republican party, having been chairman of the town com-the position. He was registrar of voters from 1886 to 1896. He is chairman of the town school commit-since the schools were consolidated.

February 11, 1864, while home on a furlough, he was married to Miss Angeline Lyon of Moosup. She was born in Coventry, R. I., and was next to the youngest of eight children of family became residents of the town

In many ways the most brilliant event of the social season in Hartford will be the Oriental Ball which will be held at the Park Casino on Elm street Thursday night. No one has taken a more active interest in making the affair a complete success and so of great financial benefit to the Visiting Nurse Association, for whose benefit it is being given, than has Mrs. Joseph R. Hawley. Mrs. Hawley is shown in the picture above in the costume which she will wear at the ball, impersonating the Begum of Bhopal.

Hartford Girl Dances In Famous Company

Tracy

July 1917

To have danced in company with famous Russian stars, including Loupovka, at Atlantic City, this week, is one of the recent achievements of Miss Serena Plasikowski of No. 31 Maplewood avenue, who is here shown as she appeared at the Garden Pier in that noted resort, where she has been visiting. The little Hartford dancer, who has frequently appeared in local entertainments, has received several offers to join companies of Russian dancers, including one from the manager of the production in which Nijinski appeared in Hartford, so this New England city may sometime be represented in a famous group of dancers.

Through her frequent appearances at charitable functions and in theatrical productions by Hartford amateurs she is widely known here. For years her appearances in the pageants and balls given for the benefit of the Visiting Nurse association each winter were anticipated with pleasure and received with enthusiasm. In the first of those entertainments, the Oriental ball, at the Park casino, in the winter of 1912, Miss Plasikowski, then just a little girl, danced delightfully, and at the last visiting nurse ball, the Fashion show at the state armory, in January, 1916, her dance was again a feature of the event. Miss Plasikowski has contributed similarly to the success of theatrical productions, notably to that of "The Magic Mushroom," given for the Hartford Social settlement.

Her dancing is characterized by expert technique, with a spontaneity and natural grace that makes it a delight to the eye. She dances as if she were enjoying it thoroughly, with all the glee of youth, and her excellent professional training is so masked by her own personality and individual interpretation that her art suggests not work but pleasure. She first studied in this city, and is now a pupil of Alviene in New York.

Miss Plasikowski is not only a talented dancer, but also an artist of marked promise. She is a member of the class of 1918 at the Hartford public high school, where she belongs to the Sketch club, and her school work in arts and crafts is of high quality. Some of the most effective pieces of pottery and studies of still life at the exhibition of students' art work at the school in June were by Miss Plasikowski.

Miss Plasikowski is to be one of the entertainers at the rally of the Girls' Patriotic league division of the National League for Women's Service at the Northwest school hall, Wednesday evening. She will give a group of three dances. Others on the program for the meeting are Miss Ada Segur, who will sing, and A. H. Clements, who will give an exhibition of magic.

MISS SERENA PLASIKOWSKI

One of the noted members of the theatrical profession of the present season in New York is Serena Plasikowski, who is appearing in the cast of the Greenwich Village Follies, 1920, now at the Shubert theater, New York. Miss Plasikowski is a Hartford girl, and was educated in schools in this city, being a graduate of the Hartford high school in 1918. She made the tour with Madame Pavlova through South America, and was selected as a solo dancer at the gala performance given at the Teatro Real on November 16, 1919, for King Alfonso of Spain. She also had a long engagement at the Champs

Elysee in Paris, where she was seen in a number of new dance creations of her own. Miss Plasikowski is one of the well-known artists in Greenwich Village, and the picture shows some of her work as a sculptor.

In addition to her other accomplishments, Miss Plasikowski has recently exhibited a decided talent for clay modelling. During her spare moments she has made several most attractive miniatures of the various members of the troupe with which she is now engaged, and dressed them in striking costumes, which have helped to make them famous among the theatrical profession.

HIRAM PERCY MAXIM

HARTFORD TO SPRINGFIELD IN '96

Hiram Percy Maxim Made The Trip.

Hiram Percy Maxim of this city has an interesting account of a trip he made from Hartford to Springfield eighteen years ago in "Country Life in America." His record of the memorable trip follows:

LEONARD D. FISK'S FORTY-FIRST CAR. 1916

FISK WAS THE

Numbered among Hartford's motoring population are many users whose experience dates back to the first cars built. Leonard D. Fisk is one of these. Those who have kept pace with the industry will recall Mr. Fisk in the Columbia electric he drove, quite a curiosity in those days. Later came a French Panhard, a notable vehicle of the time. This car is still in commission though it has passed to another owner. Mr. Fisk not long after had a DeDion motorette which would appear small if placed beside any of the modern cars. An ardent motorist from the outset, it is hardly surprising that Mr. Fisk in the course of time should own many cars. More recently he has been driving Nationals, and at present, for his own use, has a Marion roadster. A twelve cylinder National touring car is used in warm weather by the family. The latest acquisition is a six cylinder Winton convertible touring sedan, a very natty vehicle as will be noted from the accompanying illustration.

This is the forty-first automobile in the Fisk family. This is surely a record. The new Winton is equipped with wire wheels. Mr. Fisk purchased this car because he thought it to be comfortable. He was by no means disappointed. A week ago he drove to New Haven in the Winton Sedan and as he has always been in the habit of driving in the open, so to speak, he was much impressed with the Winton's coziness. There was no reason in the world why he could not leave his coat open and be perfectly comfortable. The contrast between the Sedan and the open vehicles was the more pronounced when other motorists were observed in touring cars and roadsters bundled to their cars in furs.

That one so experienced as Mr. Fisk should select the Winton Sedan is in itself significant. The latest car is intended for the family, for which particular purpose it is admirably suited, in fact it was for this sort of work it was designed. The Capitol City Auto company at the corner of Allen and High streets is the local Winton representative and is now in a position to make immediate deliveries in closed cars, being one of the very few concerns in the east so situated. It is worthy of note that the Capitol City Auto company has sold 31 Wintons this season, only two of which were of the same color, these going to a single purchaser. The range of colors offered in this make almost passes description.

"dash to the pole" was made when the roads had dried out. The fourth blacksmith shop was attained this time, being located in Windsor. Here it became necessary to rebuild most of the running gear which had jolted to pieces. It took a day's hard work to patch her up so I could get back home.

Chicago Magazine Recalls 7 1/2-Mile-an-Hour Speed Record Made in 1895—Hartford Manufacturer Rode on Electric Vehicle—Racers Accompanied by Sleigh Parties and School Children.

To owners of automobiles of the present day it seems a far step backward to recall the period of 1895, only twenty-seven years ago, when the "horseless carriage" was in its infancy. Recently a number of articles on the prehistoric automobiles have appeared, and none are more interesting than a series which has just been published by the "Motorcycle," a monthly magazine in Chicago. The story of the first horseless carriage race is given, a race which is of peculiar interest to Hartford people as Hiram Percy Maxim of this city, president of the Technology Club of Hartford and local manufacturer was one of the official umpires and played a leading part in preparing the plans for the first event of its kind, back in the days when the automotive industry was in swaddling clothes.

America's first horseless carriage race was run in Chicago on November 23, 1895. The development of the motor car that has gone on apace since then could be illustrated no better than by a brief comparison of the results achieved in that historic contest and in the races of recent years. The first automobile race in the United States was inspired by a purse offered by H. H. Kohlsaat, publisher of "The Chicago Times-Herald."

The first motor car race in America was held in the wake of one of those great snowstorms which nearly obliterate the Windy City. The contestants frequently found their cars stuck hopelessly in snow drifts. Before they could continue the grind they had to jump out and give their old-fashioned machine a shove, and after they got them going they had to keep sanding the belts and replacing the chains that were used for the propulsion of the buggies with light motors. All day long they plowed through the slush in order to cover a distance of fifty-four miles on a circuit that carried them along the lake shore to Evanston and back to the heart of the city. They completed the trip after dark, and the winner's elapsed time was ten hours and twenty-three minutes. His average speed was five and one-quarter miles an hour.

Compare with this speed the average of ninety-five to ninety-six miles made last year at Daytona, Fla., for 100 miles. And where the best time made by the old motor cars in the first race was little more than seven and one-half miles an hour, approximately 153 miles an hour was made by Tommy Milton on the Daytona track in April, 1920.

But the races at Daytona were hardly more spectacular than the

but when the fifty-four-mile race began only six cars appeared at the starting point at Jackson Point and Midway Plaisance. They were Duryea Motor Wagon Company, Springfield, Mass., gasoline; De La Vergne Refrigerating Machine Co., New York, gasoline; Morris & Salom, Philadelphia, electric; H. Mueller & Co., Decatur, Ill., gasoline; R. H. Macy Co., New York, gasoline; Sturges Electric Motorcycle, Chicago, electric.

The judges were Major Gen. Wesley Merritt, commander of the Department of the Missouri; Professor John P. Barrett, City Electrician of Chicago and Chief of Electricity at the Columbian Exposition, and Henry Timken, president of the National Carriage Builders' Association. The cars were off on a signal from Assistant Judge C. P. Kimball. But let the "Motorcycle" tell the story:—

"J. F. Duryea leaped into the wagon, followed by Arthur W. White, the umpire. At 8:55 o'clock the word 'Go' was uttered and the motorcycle passed swiftly through the crowd, which opened and closed on it as it rushed on. A minute later the Benz wagon of the De la Vergne Refrigerating Co. was started amid cheers Frederick C. Hass, inventor of the steering gear on the De la Vergne, operated the machine, with James F. Bate as umpire. The Benz motor in this case proved unequal to the task of getting over bad pieces of road from the starting point to Fifty-fifth street. The wheels slipped around in the snow, but failed to go forward. Then Mr. Hass decided he would not attempt the race, and the wagon was shoved over the deep snow to a better part of the road.

"Macy's wagon was started in good shape at 8:59 o'clock with Jerry O'Connor as the operator and Lieutenant Samuel Rodman, jr., as umpire. Mr. O'Connor had to jump out and push his machine over the snow at Midway Plaisance before he reached a hard track. The Sturges electric motorcycle left at 9:01, with Harold Sturges, the owner, and T. T. Bennett, the umpire, on board. The Morris and Salom electric wagon left a minute later with Mr. Morris and Hiram P. Maxim, the umpire, on board. The Meuler gasoline motorcycle was not started until 10:06:45. Oscar Mueller operated the wagon, of which C. E. King acted as umpire.

"The Duryea was the first to cross the line, followed closely by the Macy machine. The next across was the De la Vergne, which found the snow so formidable in South Park that its owners finally decided to withdraw from the race."

was the old Cape factory at Park street. For the motor cars were paced by horse-drawn sleighs with the official observers and trailed by a non-descript crowd including school girls who appeared in their bloomers, players who left a football game, and all kinds of unofficial observers. There were collisions between motor cars in the race and the sleighs of the observers, as well as collisions with trolley cars and other conveyances. The casualties were numerous, but they were very slight and not a fatality was recorded. Eleven competitors had signified their intention of entering the race, but only six appeared. At the time we were half way up the Park street hill, affected nearly every man in her entire being, and when she had succeeded in reaching the top of the hill she was seriously ill. "With the assistance of citizens and ball boys we turned her around and lifted back to the works. Here she was tenderly lifted up the stone steps, on a mild evening, with the frost just coming out of the ground in fine style. The only bit of macadam road between Hartford and Springfield in those days ended at the city line on Windsor avenue. With the frost coming out of the ground, the rest of the road was a quagmire. We have had enough road experience to-day to know what to expect of a country road in March, but those days, having no past experience to go by, we simply 'butted in'.

"We swung out over the macadam at the city line, dead sure that Springfield was ours. Then things began to happen. Being a three-wheeler, and having no differential on the rear axle, we carried a certain amount of port helm. This was all right on a hard road. But when we got into the mud, this port helm became aggravated and to an astounding degree, for I simply could not keep her headed right. She would siddle about in spite of everything I could do.

"We got her up on the car tracks

keep the throttle wide open, and keep up the noise, unheeding of the toolbox and lid of the toolbox and it up and down for all I cared. The noise was terrific. The watchman came up to see what was going on, and sent with the speed of a lightning bolt to the middle of his stable yard. He was shouting a horrible noise, and with whom was slamming the cover of a box. A poor man had been with Lobdell let go of the jumping off the machine closely up to the watchman. His face not a bit more inches from the face of said in a very excited and "Is this New Britain?"

"It was a glorious experience by far the best automobile ever taken. In a similar made an eventful trip to other to Boston, and to New York. Each of them in itself."

she calls "Hyperion tea." Mrs. Adams explains:—

Oh, Mrs Gates, these herbs did not grow in China. You might have seen me hunting for them like an old witch for her simples. Sage and thyme grow in the garden bed, and I mix with them a bit of catnip, a touch of penny royal and sometimes a little bone-set. Raspberry leaves are also an excellent substitute for tea.

In the midst of the conversation the sound of drums is heard outside and all are startled. This touch of reality was supplied by the local militia drum corps stationed outside and the unaccustomed sound was a surprise alike to the audience and the actors, who did not have to pretend that they were startled. It developed that a spy had been caught and great was the excitement. Of course, the gentlemen who had been lingering in the dining-room could not appear at all now as they were all called away, and that fact was explained by Grimes, the colored servant, who says:—

His excellency, General Washington, and dose toder-gentlemen begs won to 'scuse them from 'tendance in de drawing-room, as the exigencums of de day calls 'em elsewhere.

Lady Washington and her daughter-in-law, Mrs Custis, it seems, have been detained by an accident to their coach and when the sharp eyes of the Misses Byles see them approaching there is a flurry of expectancy. They have not suffered from the accident and partake of the "tea" and conversation with charming grace. The talk turns to the literary women of Boston and the ladies beg Mrs Warren to read one of her poems which she does, putting aside her diffidence as best she can. The subject of the poem is "What can we do without," inspired by the necessity for women as well as men to give up the luxuries and all but the very necessities of life for the cause of freedom. It is Mrs Custis who finally suggests that they "sing those verses the British soldiers have given to us in derision," and they all, audience as well as players, join in the lively old tune:—

Father and I went down to camp
Along with Capt Gooding—
And there we saw the men and boys
As thick as hasty pudding.

Chorus:
Yankee Doodle, keep it up,
Yankee Doodle dandy,
Mind the music and keep the step
And with the girls be handy.

And there was Capt Washington
With gentle folk about him—
They say he's grown so tarnaal proud,
He will not ride without 'em.

The flaming ribbons on his cap,
They looked to tarning fine, ah—
I wanted pockily to get
And give to my Jemima.

The hostess, Mrs Adams, says:—
And, ladies, let us pass again Hyperion tea.

The affair was so well planned and carried out that all declared it quite the most delightful occasion of the calendar. Of course, in those days of club activity no hint that the Women's club had spent an entertaining morning of unusual character was found in the next day's paper as it would be nowadays. The negative of the picture taken of the assembly was destroyed in the fire that burned the Van Norman studio and only a few prints were ever made from it. The members of the club often look back with pleasure to their early dramatic effort on the occasion of Washington's birthday, 15 years ago.

TEA FOR MRS W. S. BACON.

Mrs L. C. Hyde and Mrs Philip D. Hawkins Entertain for Mrs Hyde's Guest. Feb. 1914

Entirely pleasing was the tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs Louis Cavelli Hyde and her daughter, Mrs Philip Delano Hawkins in honor of Mrs Hyde's guest, Mrs William Stevens Bacon of Longmeadow and Washington, D. C. The hours chosen for the reception were those between 4 and 6 o'clock and early spring and summer flowers trimmed the rooms in which the guests were received. The color scheme in each room differed, the bright colors used lending an air of cheer to the interior of the attractive home. Yellow and white were the colors used in the dining-room, a large bowl of fresias and jonquils decorating the tea-table. A deeper combination of color was chosen for the drawing-room, where Richmond roses and violets arranged artistically in convenient nooks, made the air fragrant with their exquisite perfume. Red roses were also used in the hall, together with greenery, which was used by the way of contrast throughout the other rooms as well.

The receiving line included Mrs Hyde, Mrs Hawkins and Mrs Bacon. The blossoms carried by Mrs Bacon were violets and gardenias. Mrs Hyde had an arm bouquet of Aaron Ward roses and gardenias, and Mrs Hawkins's bouquet was a French nosegay composed of pink Killarney rosebuds and fresias, arranged in foreign fashion, with a lace Italiens surrounding the delicate flowers. Those who were in charge of the tea service during the first hour were Mrs Alfred Leeds and Mrs Charles Hiland Hall, their places being taken at 5 o'clock by Mrs Robert W. Day and Mrs George Dwight Pratt.

The matrons who assisted the hostess in welcoming her guests were Mrs Robert O. Morris, Mrs Harriet L. Dickinson, Mrs Prioleau Ellis, Mrs Charles W. Burt and Mrs Charles Meals. The young women assisting in serving included Miss Louise Schlessinger, Miss Mary Newell, Miss Eleanor Southworth, Miss Lucy Chapin, Miss Pauline Carmichael, Miss Dorothy Fulton, Miss Rachel Holbrook and Miss Grace Medlicott. Hughes catered for the affair.

EXPRESS COMPANY RESPONSIBLE FOR UNION STATION FIRE

New Haven, Dec. 17.

After the fire that destroyed the railroad station in Hartford, a question developed where the blame rested, whether on the railroad company or its tenant, the Adams Express Company. The matter was referred to former President W. H. Taft and last spring and summer he was taking testimony. It is understood here that he has given his decision that the express company is responsible for the fire, but the matter of damages is still undetermined.

The Hartford Courant THE REOPENED STATION.

Time has been within the last twenty years when Hartford has yearned for a new railroad station but the feeling was never less marked than it was yesterday when Hartford had an opportunity to see the interior of Union Station for the first time since the fire of February, 1914. When the fire was out, the interior of the old station was one of the most complete ruins of which Hartford could boast; the interior of the rebuilt station is a great deal better than the old. Probably some of the railroad officials can explain how, while using the same building, they have apparently secured twice as much room, but the lay mind will never understand it, nor care to, being satisfied with results. The waiting room looks large enough to be adequate to the demands which are likely to be made upon it; the nine or ten ticket windows are cheerfully suggestive of good service in the event of a crowd; the local express stand is in its place. Even the restaurant is present, but the odors of past and gone lunches have disappeared and the whole station is suggestive of the old myth of the phoenix.

Best of all is the fact that the station is clean and looks as if it might remain so. The cream white of the walls and ceiling, the russet tiles which form the floor, the polished brass on the guard rails at the staircases and the oaken benches all suggest cleanliness and Hartford folk may thank heaven alike for the fire and for the repairs, for the old station had reached the point where only fire could clean it. None of the changes made is likely to be confusing. Men who know where Track 1 was in the old days will find Track A just as easily and to strangers the change from numerals to letters will not signify, while other changes tend to make travel more simple rather than more complex. Evidently the road is coming back and the station has arrived. Hartford's cup will be full when the New Haven people come up and see it and then go back to view their own antique.

the lack of some organization which shall aid the individual scholars in their research and shall preserve the results of these researches.

"Some years ago in company with Mr. Justice McLean, I visited St. Louis to examine manuscripts left by the late Dr. William G. Hammond, Chancellor of Iowa university. There in a vault in a box at least three feet in length and eighteen inches wide, were the unpublished manuscripts of this great scholar, unfinished and unarranged for publication. What days and nights of toil, what years of thought and study those manuscripts represented!

Aid to Scholars.

"The great danger is always that the scholar worn out by his zeal, unchecked and unguided, wears himself out before his task is finished. With an organization of the kind proposed the labor of the scholars can be lightened, the results preserved for the general good.

"In the matter of legal education the proposal is to secure a general recognition among the schools that there is a system of law, an existing corpus juris, if you like, the comprehension of which necessarily constitutes the object of study. Without in any manner interfering with established courses or with well known methods of study and teaching the eyes of all students may be directed toward the goal of their endeavor; namely, the knowledge and understanding of this system, which is common to all.

"My own belief is that this will prove to be one of the greatest influences for the attainment of a uniform conception of what must needs be the central body of law identical in most of its parts throughout the land. A comprehensive, concise and complete restatement of the existing law has been found to be necessary in every developing country.

"May I be indulged in one further thought, namely, the paramount importance to the profession of this movement? It may not be too much to say that the dignity of the bar is at stake; surely its dignity and welfare are involved."

Urged by Great Lawyers.

In organizing the academy frequent reference was made to comments by great lawyers on the necessity for such a body as the American Academy of Jurisprudence. Justice Holmes of the United States supreme court had said: "The importance, if it could be obtained, cannot be overrated."

Justice Brewer emphasized the need of such a jurisprudence and remarked on "the great blessing to the profession it would be to have such a work."

General Thomas H. Hubbard said: "Statutes are enacted by thousands each year in the federal and state legislatures. Judicial decisions do and must increase with bewildering rapidity, while courts are compelled to deal with multiplying statutes and the multiplying decisions of contemporaneous courts and the bulk of the earlier decisions which go to make up the common law, and must attempt to reconcile all these.

"Text books treat separate topics with little regard to their symmetrical relation of other topics that make up the entire body of the law. Lawyers, courts, legislatures and the public are burdened with the effort to find what is the law, and to apply it. It must be hunted through thickets of session laws and reports and di-

UNDER DEATH SENTENCE

FOR A GIRL'S MURDER.

Negro's Alleged Perjury Against Northern White, Manager of a Georgia Factory.

Atlanta, Ga., February 23.—A sensational development in the case of Leo M. Frank, under sentence of death for the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan, comes with the declaration that Albert McKnight, a negro who gave damaging evidence against Frank at the trial, has made an affidavit that his evidence was false and that he had been used in "a plot to hang Frank."

Albert McKnight is the husband of Mineola McKnight, who cooked for the Frank family, and his testimony regarding Frank's conduct on the night after the murder of Mary Phagan told heavily against the defendant.

McKnight when on the stand said that he had seen Frank on the day of the murder; that Frank had come home from the factory about 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and had returned without eating anything; that Mineola, the witness's wife, had told of Frank's coming home drunk on the Saturday night of the crime, and of Frank's remark to Mrs. Frank that he was in trouble and that he "didn't know why he should murder a girl."

McKnight in his affidavit is declared to set forth that he was induced to swear falsely to get evidence against Frank. McKnight's affidavit is quoted in part as follows:

"Deponent says that he did not see Mr. Frank at all on April 26 and that his evidence at the trial of Mr. Frank was the result of plan perfected to collect the reward offered for the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Mary Phagan.

"Deponent says that he is sorry for all the wrong he has done to Mr. Frank and that he wants this true statement of facts placed in the hands of L. Z. Rosser to be used by him with the hope that the same can in some way undo the great wrong he was led to do.

"Deponent again says that he did not see Leo M. Frank at any time or place on Saturday, April 26, 1913, and that he will so testify when called upon at any time."

McKnight is said to have furnished the affidavit to Captain C. W. Burke, who is employed by Arnold and Rosser, attorneys for Frank.

"They tried to make me think I would get part of the reward," McKnight is quoted as having said. "I didn't really believe that I would get any money, but I thought they would be good to me if I said what they wanted me to say."

A detective who procured McKnight's evidence for the state, says that McKnight is a liar. He declared that McKnight volunteered the damaging evidence against Frank.

FORTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

TIMES Mechanical Plant Visited by Devastating Fire Which Brought
Loss of $20,000.

Speaking of fires, just exactly forty-five years ago to-day—March 2, 1869—THE TIMES mechanical department was visited by a fire which broke out in the Wood building, in the rear, shortly before 5 o'clock in the morning, supposedly started by a forge, where work had been kept up the previous evening.

As is the case even now, the fire alarm sounded confused and incorrect numbers, which caused a delay in locating the blaze. After reaching the scene the apparatus discovered that the hydrants in the locality were frozen up, making it impossible to use them. Those in front of the post-office building, the Athenaeum and the state house were tried in vain and finally the hose was attached to the hydrant in Asylum street, near Main, and by long lines a stream was brought to the fire.

This, however, had little effect, and the entire two buildings, that of THE TIMES and the Wood building, were utterly destroyed, with their contents, only the walls remaining and those in a tottering condition.

Loss Was $20,000.

The property was owned principally by Mrs. W. W. Eaton, and the loss was estimated at $20,000, insured for $10,000. A number of firms and offices were included in the tenants of the buildings. On the first floor were the billiard rooms of Matt H. Hewlins. In THE TIMES printing office everything was destroyed except the cylinder press, which remained, not greatly damaged. The type cases and printing materials were destroyed or nearly ruined, and the loss was not covered by the insurance of $5,000.

Benham's machine shop, the spectacle manufactory of George Hibbard, Glazier's picture framing concern, the Hartford Thread company and the establishment for the manufacture of lamp shades were also among the losers.

It was reported. Watchers for the arrival of the song birds saw the advance guard Tuesday, and now they may be expected to appear in large numbers, while other song birds should follow in quick succession. The arrival of the ant En birds has been delayed a little beyond the on average this year because of the snow, account but even at that they were remarkably down a close to their schedule time, and it may be fairly assumed that the approach of were in spring will not be delayed much longer. John G. This makes the arrival of the blue bird Clinton March 3 this year, and at the natural Dow history rooms of the Science building they have kept a schedule for the last 14 years cation showing when the blue bird has put in his out the appearance. It is as follows: 1914, March 3; 1912, March 14; 1911, February 27; 1910, March 3; 1909, February 21; 1908, March 11; 1907, March 16; 1906, February 23; 1905, March 12; 1904, March 11; 1903, February 23; 1902, February 27; 1901, March 14.

On t ruary 23; 1905, March 12; 1904, March 11; of that 1903, February 23; 1902, February 27; friends 1901, March 14. eously offered assistance.

Governor Hawley of the Courant had at once offered the facilities of that office. Messrs. Hall and Sperry of the Evening Post had done likewise, and Mr. Lockwood of Case, Lockwood & Brainard, and the Calhoun Printing company, were also quick to place their rooms, type and offices at the command of THE TIMES.

Returning Thanks.

To all of these is written a sincere and graceful tribute of thanks and an assurance that their kindness would not be forgotten, while the readers were asked to accept the sheet as the emergency compelled it to appear. It appears, however, to have been a very complete and excellent issue, in spite of its difficulties, and one requiring no apology for lack of merit.

In another place on the editorial page a clever poem of six stanzas appeared, describing the fire, from the first alarm to the end, when its destruction had been completed. The concluding verse well expressed the condition of the paper and was as follows:

Our press is burnt, or type is "pl."
We only keep our spirits high,
But even yet to-day
We do in usual guise appear,
As we have done from year to year,
And hope to do alway.

In view of the two recent large fires of the past two weeks it is interesting to recall this one of nearly half a century past, and notice how some of the same difficulties encountered by the firemen then are still with us, although no mention is made of snow in the streets interfering with automobile apparatus. A number of companies in which the losers were insured were of New York or other cities, also an interesting fact.

Sixty Years Ago.

Sixty years ago to-day, at 7 o'clock on the morning of March 2, 1854, the large factory of Fales & Gray, car manufacturers, on Potter street, was wrecked by a boiler explosion. This was one of the most serious disasters ever recorded in Hartford. Nineteen persons were killed and twenty-one injured. Panic spread through the city rapidly when the great extent of the disaster was known, and wild scenes of excitement were enacted. The ruins took fire, and the service of the department were taxed to the utmost. The accident marked the beginning of the present Hartford hospital, as it was necessary to secure suitable quarters for the care of those who were hurt.

CROCUS IN BLOOM

AT TAINTOR HOME

March 4—1914
Crocuses are in full bloom at the home of Mrs. George E. Taintor, No. 129 Washington street, thus emphasizing the fact that spring is near at hand. The crocus is one of the earliest of the spring-blooming flowers, but on account of the heavy snows of late it was hardly expected to be in blossom at this time. The furnace in Mrs. Taintor's home may have warmed the ground and aided the crocuses in growing out, but it is considered remarkable that the flowers have appeared. Last year the crocus made its appearance in bloom, at Mrs. Taintor's home on St. Valentine Day.

William Tucker and Henry H. Goodwin, composing the firm of Tucker & Goodwin, wholesale grocers, celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary as partners last night with a dinner in the banquet hall of the Hotel Bond. Thirty-nine of their staff of forty-one employees were the guests. A handsome loving cup was the present that each of the partners received from those present, besides many telegrams of congratulations and floral offerings from other firms and friends in the city and elsewhere. One of the gifts was a bowl of carnations from Newton, Robertson & Co.

The two partners have been together in business since March 1, 1889, when the old firm of Keney & Roberts was changed to Keney, Roberts & Co., they being the "company." In 1896 the firm name was changed to Tucker & Goodwin, and a year later the location of the business was changed from its old place on the site of the present Keney tower to its present location. Mr. Tucker and Mr. Goodwin entered into partnership, in March 1889, when, on the death of Walter Keney, the old firm of Keney & Roberts became, Keney, Roberts & Co. In 1894, when Henry Keney died, the firm became, Roberts, Tucker & Goodwin. Ebenezer Roberts died in March, 1896, and the firm became ferred to the Lafayette street line, the predecessor of the Broad street line, and has spent twenty-four years on the latter route. As a trolleyman, Captain Buck is favorably known to the public of Hartford, and through his many years of service he has run his cars without material accident.

He was born in Dorchester, New Brunswick, September 21, 1848. He was one of six brothers, four of whom were sea captains. He was the fourth son of James and Sarah (Mitton) Buck, both of whom were born in England. When 14, he was a sailor before the mast on a trader bound from Dorchester to the West Indies. Eight years later he was captain of a West India trader. Subsequently he became owner of the Dobson, in which he was shipwrecked in March of 1876, off the Porto Rico coast. The vessel was lost but the captain saved every man of his crew, among the number being his cousin, Robert A. Mitton, the first mate.

He made his way to New York, bought another vessel and embarked again, as before in the West India trade. The second craft was named in honor of his wife and was called the Matilda Buck. After a few years in the trade, this vessel, too, met its fate off Long Island; was pitched upon a reef in a heavy gale and bitter snow storm and went down. As before, the captain saved every man and himself.

He then took command of a vessel for the Hickman Company of Dorchester, and on different merchantmen owned by the company, throughout succeeding years visited nearly every port of any consequence in the world. Good fortune followed him as commander of the company's vessels, until, when taken in tow in a port in Holland, the vessel struck a broken pier. He said then that if he ever succeeded in bringing his ship to port in New York he would give up a seafaring life. After safe arrival in New York, he carried out his determination, and retiring, came to Hartford and became a conductor. Except for a membership in the Baptist Church in his native town, he was not affiliated with any organization.

Australian Prima Donna At Foot Guard Hall.

March 3, 1914

An audience that packed Foot Guard Hall heard Madame Melba sing last evening. The crowd not only filled floor and gallery, but sat on the stage, as well, and the artists who sang and played certainly had no room to spare. The concert marked the first appearance here of the Australian prima donna these many years.

She was born Helen Mitchell, of rugged Scotch parents who were successful in a small way in Melbourne. Her aptitude for music caused some concern to her parents, who tried to head her off from any thoughts of a career, and once even sent around to their friends asking them not to attend a concert which she had organized for the pleasure of it. Her early training was in no way remarkable, and was probably not serious enough to do any harm. A few amateur or charity performances constituted her whole professional activity up to the time of her marriage to Captain Charles Armstrong, youngest son of an Eng-

"Melba was in this unfortunate position: Brussels, London, Paris, St. Petersburg, Nice, Monte Carlo, had all accepted her as an incomparable singer before she came to Milan, so there were those in the music world of the city who determined to make light of the fame she had won in other lands. It happened that this, perhaps excusable, little semblance of resentment was encouraged into an unusual measure of antipathy by one or two jealous individuals, such as acquire a certain amount of influence in the art circles of every large city, who had singled out Melba for a merciless attack. A cabal was raised against her, and everything

Hartford Young Man Takes Bride in Old Southern City.

Sydney N. Greenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Greenberg of No. 518 Prospect avenue, this city, and Miss Helen Julia Solomon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Solomon of Wilmington, N. C., were married at the Temple of Israel, Wilmington, Thursday evening, March 5. The Temple was filled with guests and was beautifully decorated with palms, southern smilax and flowers and these with the impressive background formed by the glow of many candles produced a most charming effect.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Joseph Bluementhal and Miss Deborah Shrier, dressed in deep rose crepe de chine and carrying baskets of deep pink sweet peas; Miss Helena Maxman and Miss Ethel Solomon, dressed in medium rose crepe de chine and carrying baskets of sweet peas of the same color; Miss Helen Greenberg, of Hartford,

TWO mighty interesting pieces of Colonial metalware, intimately connected with the history of Hartford for two years and bearing the mark of the most noted early metalworkers are now on exhibition in the room of the Morgan Library through the courtesy of Webster Stillman, to whom descended from lineal ancestor a great silver tankard made by John Cony of Boston and bearing touch in three places. The tankard is a large, highly polished pewster stick, made by Hugh Quick of Boston, and bearing his touch on the bottom. Both are nearly perfect in every respect, and both from the standpoint of art and of historical interest, and from their connection with two of Hartford's influential families.

The tankard was owned by John Cony and Abigail Lord, who were married in 1692 and were then called "the couple in Hartford." The tankard was the property of Phineas Cony and is considerably older than the cup. Miss Stillman, who in Europe, who after the death of her father, the late Henry A. Cony, gave many interesting relics to the Athenaeum, on breaking up the family, loaned these pieces.

The silver tankard was made by John Cony, one of the most noted silversmiths of the colony. John Cony, who was born in Boston, 1656 and who died in 1722. He was an eminently prosperous workman, who probably learned the trade from his brother-in-law, Jeremiah Drummer. He was a member of the Second Church, and one of the original subscribers towards the erection of King's Chapel in 1689. One of his tankards or loving cups, the gift in 1701 to Harvard by Lieutenant Governor Stoughton, who was also the presiding judge in the Salem witchcraft trials, is said to represent the highest art of American silversmiths.

John Cony also is said to have engraved the first plates for the first Miss Stillman writes an interesting account of this old tankard, and of how it was saved from the melting pot by a great-great-granddaughter of the first owner, Richard Lord. She writes:—

"It hardly seems credible, but it is really true that in the long ago days of the street was clean and pretty, with old-fashioned houses set near the sidewalk; back of them were gardens full of lovely flowers and fruit. Nearby was the Little River, crossed with stepping stones, and beyond was the great Connecticut River with only green meadows along its banks—the waters of both all unspoiled by factory and sewer.

"Some of us can remember the old white house with its great pear tree in front, occupied by the three Misses Skinner, who were about the last of the old families to leave the neighborhood, staying there long after the street had become crowded and dirty because they so loved the place. The land had come into the Skinner family in 1692, the deed of that date from Thomas Olmsted to John Skinner still being preserved. In 1870, though, the place was sold to strangers.

Jerusha Lord, who married Colonel John Whiting, the treasurer of the colony from 1717 to 1747, as his father before him had been from 1678 to 1717 and his grandfather, Major William Whiting.

"Their eldest daughter, Jerusha Whiting, married Daniel Skinner, and they were said to be the handsomest pair in town. He was called 'High Steppings,' because he built his house a few steps above the street level. One of their daughters sold the tankard and one of their granddaughters, Miss Harriet, daughter of their son, Elisha Skinner and Achsah Webster, rescued it. Since that day it has been a valued treasure of their descendants."

The Candlestick.

The pewter candlestick belonged to Mrs. Abigail Warren Lord, the wife of the Richard Long, the story of whose tankard Miss Stillman relates so charmingly. It is stamped "E. W." in two places, the initials of Elizabeth Wilson, her mother, and it was left to her by her father, Phineas Wilson, whose will, dated 1692, mentions "the large pewter candlestick in the hall." There are not a great many pieces of pewter in Hartford which have been mentioned in early wills, as has this candlestick.

The candlestick does not look like American pewter, and it is not. The familiar pewter which is collected so assiduously here, has a dead, leaden look, which is, of course, made by the high percentage of lead in the metal, the other constituent of which was tin. The English and continental pewterers on the other hand, used a great deal of copper, antimony and bismuth in their pewter, as well as using a high percentage of tin, and a low percentage of lead, so that the candlestick will take the polish of silver, and indeed much resembles Sheffield plate.

The candlestick was made by Hugh

George Gilman Spencer, Who Was One of the Pioneers of the Young Men's Institute.

TWO CHURCHES TALK OF CONSOLIDATION

JANUARY 7, 1914

The question of consolidating with the South Congregational Church will be discussed at the adjourned annual meeting of the Wethersfield Avenue Congregational Church, which will be held at the church tomorrow evening, when a committee will be appointed to take up the question of the merger, with a committee of the South Church, according to C. E. Jaquith, one of the deacons of the church. The standing committee of the Wethersfield avenue church has been discussing the question for some time, but only tentative plans towards consolidation have been made.

Mr. Jaquith said last night that as a member of the standing committee of the church, he was in favor of the merger, and that the majority of the members of the standing committee, as far as he could learn, were also in favor of the move. The sentiment of the church members leans toward consolidation, he said, and in all probability the first definite move in the matter will be taken tomorrow evening with the appointment of the committee to confer with the South Church committee.

The plan as it has been worked out is in effect that the members of the Wethersfield avenue church be taken into the South Church in a body; that the property of the Wethersfield avenue Church, including the new $25,000 parish house, be transferred to the South Church and that the Wethersfield avenue society terminate its existence as a separate organization at the conclusion of the necessary legal details.

That the sentiment of the South Church members favors consolidation is shown by the statement of George F. Hills, president of the State Bank & Trust Company, who yesterday said the opinion of many of the members of his church, with whom he had consulted on the question, was that the merging of the two churches into one large parish would be beneficial. He could not tell when a meeting of the South Church and the Second Ecclesiastical Society, which is the business name of the church body, would be called to discuss the question. Monday afternoon there was a meeting for the purpose of discussing informally the question, but no definite action was taken. The members of the standing committees of the churches were present.

Nothing definite has been done in the matter at the South Church, but it is expected that with the appointment of the committee at the Wethersfield avenue church tomorrow night something definite will be done. As far as can be learned there is no intention of giving up the work in the Wethersfield avenue district. The broadening of the territory in the South District seems to be the primary intent. It is understood that overtures came from the South Church, and nothing can be done until the Wethersfield avenue church takes action. The latter church is at present without a settled pastor and small debt and poor resources.

Wethersfield Avenue Church Appoints Committee On Conference.

The Wethersfield Avenue Congregational Church and the South Congregational Church will consolidate. This was decided last night at the adjourned annual meeting of the Wethersfield Avenue Church, when the report of the standing committee, which has been considering the plan for some time, was received and found to favor such a course. The report read as follows:—

"Whereas, The Wethersfield Avenue Congregational Church finds itself facing a remarkable opportunity for Christian service, and feels with its present resources unable adequately to carry the work to the largest conclusion; and

"Whereas, The South Congregational Church has, through its minister and committee, expressed a most cordial interest in the situation and suggested the possibility of a merger of our common work in a union of the two churches, Consummation, at Sunday Morning Service, of Wethersfield Avenue Church Merger.

Four hundred and seven new members united with the South Avenue Church on Monday Morning, March 9, 1914.

Mr. Barstow's acceptance for the Wethersfield Avenue church was as follows:

It gives me real pleasure, my brother, to accept in behalf of the Wethersfield Avenue church this right hand of fellowship. I am sure that the warmth of the grasp is a true expression of the genuineness and sincerity of your action in this whole matter. You invite us to become joint owners of this magnificent property; to join you in the worship of the Triune God in this beautiful temple; to share with you the noble heritage handed down from generation to generation that this church has accumulated for nearly 250 years—and it is a goodly heritage.

In return we invite you to become joint owners with us in a finely equipped parish home, church and gymnasium, already dedicated to lines of practical activity; we invite you to join us in the worship of our God as that worship finds expression in terms of real service to our fellow men; and we invite you to share with a heritage, not so illustrious as yours, not reaching back into the centuries as yours does, but one of which no people should be ashamed.

It will be only forty-eight years next June since the Wethersfield Avenue Congregational society was organized in an old schoolhouse on Wethersfield avenue. Two years later, a church building was erected, largely through the generosity of friends outside our membership. It

Prayer in Unison.

The following prayer was said in unison:

Almighty and everlasting God, we thank and praise Thee that Thou hast vouchsafed unto us, Thy servants, power and grace, to own and accept for ourselves Thy holy covenant, sealed and confirmed to us in our baptism. Strengthen us, we beseech Thee, with the Holy Spirit, the Comforter. Increase in us daily Thy manifold gifts of grace; the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord. Keep us from the evil that is in the world. Enable us to walk in the spirit, that we may not fulfil the lusts of the flesh; and so lead us in the knowledge and obedience of Thy word that we may obtain everlasting life; through Jesus Christ our Lord, who, with Thee and the Holy Spirit, liveth and reigneth, ever one God, world without end.

The hymn "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," was sung, followed by the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Through the efforts of Orford Parish Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and of other chapters of his patriotic society in this state, the tablet commemorating the state of Connecticut, which has occupied its place in the wall opposite the fifth landing of the Washington Monument in Washington, D. The granite has been cut by the Stephen Maslen Corporation and may be seen for a short time at the showroom at No. 40 High street. To the committee of the Orford Parish Chapter which has had charge of the work of replacing the stone, much credit is due. They not only aroused sufficient

STONE COST $164.25.

Old Ledger Brings to Light Price of Connecticut Contribution to Washington Monument.

State Librarian George T. Godard received to-day a document which is of much interest. It shows the cost of a certain stone for the Washington monument. It was originally sent to Governor Baldwin, by Annie Belden Sedgwick of this city, and the governor in turn Mrs. Jenn has sent it to the state library for the attention of the governor is substantially as follows:

"I noted an article stating that the old Connecticut stone in the Washington monument was to be removed. In an old account book of my father, Seth Belden, who was in the stone business more than sixty years, I find the enclosed clipping, giving the date of purchase and the cost of that stone. A little mistake occurs in the original footing, which was corrected in pencil, making the cost $164.25 and the date January 3, 1851. At the time of cutting the stone Portland stone undoubtedly represented an important Connecticut industry. I thought that at this time the clipping would interest you and those who are replacing the stone.

Governor Baldwin's letter to Mr. Godard is as follows:

My Dear Mr. Godard: I send you two documents for your files, an extract from a page of an old ledger and a note from the present owner of the ledger, Mrs. Annie Belden Sedgwick. I think both papers are worthy of preservation in our archives.

"A new stone, as you may have noticed, has been found necessary to replace the old, which was crumbling badly, and will be forwarded soon to Washington."

As there about the clerk at New Haven and those who have been urging the appointment of persons have seemed to think that the salary attached to the position was quite tempting and that it made the clerkship worthy the ambition of even lawyers in fairly good practice. As a matter of fact the compensation does not amount to much more than $700 a year. Mr. Pickett was able to supplement this by the salary which he received from his secretarial services to the circuit court amounting to $1,200 a year. He also did other work for the judges in the taking of testimony. The clerk, or native of Seymour.

Mr. Pickett worked his way through the law school. He studied in the office of Watrous & Day, lawyers, in New Haven, and while in the law school became secretary to the late Judge Townsend of the United States court. About that time he was appointed a deputy clerk of the court, a position which he had since held continuously. Upon the death of Judge Townsend Mr. Pickett became secretary to Judge Walter C. Noyes, his successor, and on the latter's retirement and the elevation of Dean Henry Wade Rogers of Yale to the bench of the United States circuit Mr. Pickett served Judge Rogers in the same capacity.

Mr. Pickett lives at No. 277 Elm street, West Haven. He is about 41 years old.

REV. E. K. MITCHELL FOR PARK BOARD

MARCH 10, 1914.

Theological Professor and En- thusiastic Golf Player.

Edwin Knox Mitchell, M. A., D. D., a member of the faculty at the Hartford Theological Seminary, and a well known golf enthusiast, and public speaker and author, was chosen a member of the board of park commissioners yesterday, to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of William A. Moore. Mr. Moore's term would have expired in 1917, and Dr. Mitchell's term will expire at the annual meeting in that year. Dr. Mitchell was unanimously elected by the other members of the park board at a secret session held yesterday afternoon in the commissioners' rooms. The appointment was sent to Mayor Cheney, who presented it to the board of common council last night for ratification.

Dr. Mitchell is known in college and literary circles in this, and other countries as he is a preacher, an author and an educator of more than ordinary ability. He was born in Locke, Knox county, O., December 23, 1853, the son of Spencer and Harriett (Howard) Mitchell. His paternal ancestors were soldiers in the colonial wars, and were settlers in Massachusetts, coming from Scotland. His parents were of the hardy stock which went to Ohio during the early part of the nineteenth century.

Vigorous, athletic and studious, Edwin Knox Mitchell made the most of every opportunity in his youth. He lived on his father's large farm and learned to do all kinds of farm work. The farm was of 250 acres, and at 17 years of age, Edwin undertook the management of it. He prepared for college while running the farm, attending the country school and studying at home. He entered Marietta College, and was graduated with the B. A. degree in 1878, and received the M. A. degree in 1881. He then entered Union Theological Seminary, New York, where he was graduated in 1884. The course was followed by two years of travel and study in Europe at the universities of Berlin, Giessen and Goettingen. Before completing his university training he taught Latin and mathematics in the Columbus, O., high school, from 1879 to 1881.

In 1886, after his return from Europe, Mr. Mitchell became the pastor of the Memorial Presbyterian Church in St. Augustine, Fla., and remained in that pastorate until 1890, when he again went abroad for further study in the University of Berlin, going later to Rome and the Orient. He returned to America in 1892 and was called to the chair of the Graeco-Roman and eastern church history in the Hartford Theological Seminary, which chair he still holds. In 1896 he received the degree of D.D. from his alma mater, Marietta College.

In 1894, Dr. Mitchell published his "Introduction to the Life and Character of Jesus Christ, According to St. Paul." He is also author of "Creeds and Canons," a well known work on theology. Dr. Mitchell is a trustee of Marietta College, and a member of the American Historical Society, the American Oriental Society, the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis, the Hartford Archaeological Society, the Connecticut Historical Society, the Religious Education Association, the Hartford Federation of Churches, the Municipal Art Society, the Hartford Club, the Hartford and Saratoga Golf clubs, the Hartford Charity Organization Society and the Twentieth Century Club, of which he was president in 1903 and 1904. In politics, Dr. Mitchell has been a republican. Golf is his favorite recreation.

Dr. Mitchell married Hetty Marquard Enos of Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1887. He has three children, and is a devoted family man. His summer home in Saratoga is considered one of the best planned and built homes in that part of New York state, on account of the beautiful arrangements of the trees, shrubs and gardens.

The reason Dr. Mitchell was chosen by the board, aside from his qualifications, was his natural knowledge of landscape gardening. Without being a technical man or a civil engineer, Dr. Mitchell is reputed to be one of the best landscape artists in his state. His grounds in Saratoga bear out this assertion, according to a member of the park board.

Dr. Mitchell was very much surprised to learn that he had been chosen a member of the board, as he had no intimation that BRINLEY LAKE—In Rye, N. Y., March 11, 1914, by Rev. Richard Henshaw, Miss Alice Lake and Edward C. Brinley of Newington.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Alice Lake, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Lake, to Edward C. Brinley, son of Mrs. George P. Brinley of Newington, at Christ Church, Rye, N. Y., Wednesday, March 11, by Rev. Richard Henshaw.

ONE "DISAPPEARANCE" ACCOUNTED FOR. Prof Mark W. Harrington, who was director of the United States weather bureau from 1891 to 1895, is coming back to a knowledge of himself after eight years of mental eclipse. In June, 1906, a man was discovered on a park bench in Newark, N. J., after a severe thunder shower. He had received an injury on the head, knew nothing of himself and carried no papers by which he could be identified. He was taken to a sanitarium, where he remained for several years as "John Doe." Whether the loss of memory had been caused by a stroke of lightning, or he had been beaten and robbed, could not be told. Meanwhile Prof Harrington had disappeared, and it was years after before Dr M. R. Harrington, the son, professor of ethnology and anthropology at the university of Pennsylvania, heard of this unknown man and sent word to his mother, who identified "John Doe" as the missing husband and father. Since then Prof Harrington has learned to recognize his relatives and friends, and gradually, through his notes and writings, has reacquainted himself with his past life. His memory of events after reaching the sanitarium is accurate. He now lives in New York city, and goes to Bellevue hospital at times for treat-

Asher Sheldon of New Haven Received Verses From Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

The story which appeared in "The Courant," March 12, concerning Asher Sheldon of New Haven who celebrated his 100th birthday anniversary that day at the home of his nephew, Edward D. Sheldon, on Howe street, in New Haven, attracted considerable attention. Residents of Branford, especially are pointing with pride to the achievements of the elderly gentleman who was born in Stony Creek.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox was one who attended the reception in his honor Thursday, and she has sent him the following verses composed in honor of the occasion:

"A hundred years are as a day
To one who seeks for God
That search has beautified the way
Your patient feet have trod.
Only a few more steps to go;
A few more smiles and tears;
Then you shall see against the dawn
The dream your heart has feasted on A hundred years, a hundred years."

Mr. Sheldon united with the Branford First Congregational Church, July 8, 1840, at the age of 26 years, and he was transferred to the College Street Church, New Haven, which is now Plymouth Church, in 1844, since which time he has been in constant attendance. He has also attended Sunday School since 1822, and a singular coincidence rests in the fact, that Rev. Mr. Pelton, who was for many years pastor of the church in Stony Creek, is now the teacher of the Bible class in Plymouth Church, of which class the centenarian is in attendance.

 MIDDLETOWN, Friday, March 13.

With three more cases of smallpox discovered here yesterday, making twelve in all, the local situation between to take on alarming proportions and a joint meeting of the town and city authorities was called late yes-charge of the cases, finds that the scattered location of the houses where they are ill makes the task of visiting them a particularly hard one. The three new cases reported to the au-

 of Mr. and Mrs. George O. Robinson, who live on the Haddam road, near the old toll house. Dr. J. H. Mac-informed by neighbors yesterday that the children had a suspicious looking rash, and accordingly he sent Dr.

To Organize Fisher Club Next Week

Former Alderman J. E. Connery who was chairman of the citizen party in the recent city election, announced yesterday that a meeting would be held next Monday night at which a boom would be launched for Professor Willard C. Fisher for the democratic nomination for governor.
 It is the plan of Professor Fisher friends to form a club here for the sole purpose of boosting his candidacy and then from Middletown an effort will be made to spread the movement to other cities. Already friends of Professor Fisher in various parts of the state have promised to organize club as soon as the local association is perfected, and Mr. Connery and his friends feel confident that the Fisher boom will soon take on the proportions of a landslide. It is their intention to make Monday's meeting a non-partisan affair all being welcome to attend the gathering, and take part in the discussion of ways and means. It is probable that one or two speaker will be present to boost the Fisher cause along, but from Mr. Connery's statement it will not take much oratory to enthuse the Middletown people regarding the former Wesleyan professor.

DR. BULL PHYSICIAN FOR FOOTBALL MEN

New Haven, March 14.

Dr. William Tillinghast Bull, Yale's coach of punters and drop kickers for a quarter of a century, has been named as the physician and surgeon who will look after the football player in the future and he will, to some extent, direct the medical attendance upon the other athletic teams after this year. ### TRINITY'S SENIOR ALUMNUS.

Son Is a Cornell Professor Who Resides at Ithaca.

The following letter from President Luther will be of interest to Hartford and to Trinity college men:

To the Editor of the Tripod:

As I returned from the west a week ago or more, I spent the greater part of a day in Ithaca, and had the very great pleasure of calling upon our senior alumnus, Dr. Samuel Porter Church, of the class of 1841. I found him deeply interested in everything pertaining to Trinity and with vivid recollections of his own undergraduate days. Of course, the college as he knew it was located on Capitol hill, and of course, also, he is very much alone except for his immediate descendants. There is no Trinity man living who was in college with him and perhaps, not a resident of Hartford or anywhere his time of life who was here in the years from '37 to '41.

"The mossy marble rest

On the lips that he has prest

In their bloom,

And the names he loved to hear

Have been carved for many a year

On the tomb."

Dr. Church is somewhat infirm and his hearing is impaired. Nevertheless, I had no difficulty in conversing with him.

It is our custom every year to appoint him honorary chairman of the reception committee, and he tells me that he always wears his blue and gold badge during commencement week. He is 92 years of age and resides with his son, Professor Church, of the civil engineering department at Cornell university.

His final words to me were, "Give my best love to the boys." From his point of view, I suppose that includes us all.

The church, which was filled, was tastefully decorated with palms and ferns with touches of pink and white azaleas. Edward F. Laubin, organist of the Asylum Hill Congregational Church of Hartford, rendered a fine program at the organ before the ceremony.

The ushers were Roger Wolcott Squire of Meriden, Yale, 1908, brother of the groom; Clayton Wolcott Welles of Wethersfield, Yale, 1904; Robbins Wolcott Barstow of Wethersfield, Dartmouth, 1913, cousin of the bridegroom; Howard W. Church of Meriden, Yale, 1904, instructor in German at Yale; Walter Bunce Spencer, Yale, 1904, principal of the West Hartford High School and Robert James Merriam, Wesleyan, 1901, of Meriden.

The bridesmaids were Miss Lucy Butler Squire of Meriden, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Helen Dudley Buck, Miss Viola Robbins and Miss Madeline Fay Dow, Smith, 1912, of Wethersfield; Miss Ruth Hartwell Colby, Smith, 1914, Delmar, N. Y.; and Miss Rachel Eugenia Bulkley of East Hampton. They wore dainty gowns of white charmeuse with tunics of pink chiffon and wore caps of silver lace and carried arm bouquets of pink roses. They entered from the two doors at the back of the pulpit platform, three from each door and proceeded down the two center aisles meeting the bride at the south doorway. Then, to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, they went back up the left center aisle, preceded by the six ushers and followed by the maid of honor and the bride with her father, to the altar. Rev. George L. Clark performed the ceremony, using the Episcopal service with two rings. The reception took place from 7 to 8:30 o'clock at the bride's home, No. 763 Main street, over 300 guests attending. The receiving party included the members of the bridal party, the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Francis Welles, the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur H. Squire of Meriden, the bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. William L. Squire of Meriden, and the bridegroom's grandfather, Robert Robbins Wolcott of Wethersfield. The library had yellow blossoms with the green, and the dining room color scheme was pure white and yellow, the table centerpiece being a basket of exquisite pale yellow roses and pots' narcissi. The floral decorations, both at the church and house, were under the direction of V. H. Olmstead from Coombs, the florist of Hartford. During the receiving hours the Beman and Hatch Orchestra of Hartford played. Habenstein of Hartford catered.

The bride wore an exquisite gown of white bride satin trimmed with rose point lace and pearl trimmings. Her veil was worn with a Dutch cap of rose point lace and caught with orange blossoms. She wore a platinum pendant, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was Miss Frances Southworth Welles, Mt. Holyoke, 1916, sister of the bride, and she wore a gown of pink taffeta silk with crystal lace trimmings and silver lace cap and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. The bride's mother wore a gown of white embroidered crepe with gold and blue lace trimmings. The bridegroom's mother wore lavender satin and the bridegroom's grandmother, black charmeuse. The best man was William Lord Squire, Yale, 1906, of Meriden, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride is a graduate of Mt. Holyoke college, class of 1910, and the bridegroom is a graduate of Yale, class of 1904. The bride's gift to her maid of honor was a pearl pendant, and to her bridesmaids pearl and coral pendants. The bridegroom's gift to his best man was a cameo stick pin and to his ushers, coral and pearl stick pins.

Mr. and Mrs. Squire left last evening for New York, from which place they will sail on Tuesday on the Caronia of the Cunard line for the Mediterranean and Egypt, returning home by way of Greece, Italy and Central Europe, the trip occupying about three months. On their return they will make their home in Meriden.

Mr. Squire entertained his best man and ushers at dinner Friday evening at the Hotel Bond. Later in the evening the entire bridal party were entertained by Miss Viola Robbins at her home in Wethersfield.

FIRE AT WELLESLEY

Girls Show Great Coolness—College

Blaze Due to Spontaneous Combustion.

March 27, 1914

Perfect discipline, coolness and bravery on the part of students and faculty members, prevented any loss of life or injury, when College hall, the oldest of the Wellesley college buildings, was burned at Wellesley Tuesday. Two hundred and fifty young women students, 50 instructors and 50 maids were in their beds when the fire was discovered. Everyone was saved, and none of the scores who marched in an orderly procession through smoky hallways suffered so much as a scratch.

The building was left a blackened shell by the flames. Within its crumbled walls was wreckage representing a loss of $900.

Moffat hurried along the halls, pounding on the doors of the sleepers. She did not yell "Fire," but commanded, "Put on your wraps." Miss Donnell then joined the other and together they roused those who had not already responded to the gong. Soon the halls were filled with startled young women, some carried personal effects in their arms, but the greater num-the laboratory on the fourth floor, where the fire originated supposedly from spontaneous combustion. Their room faced on the court around which the building was constructed and the glare of the flames aroused them. Miss Moffat saw a bright light reflected on the transom over her door, and springing from her bed rushed into the hall, where she met Miss Donnell. "There is a fire," she shouted. Miss Donnell replied, "I will ring the fire alarm if you will call the girls."

Suiting action to the word, Miss Donnell ran down a flight of stairs and sound-

from the depths of the seven seas by the famous Albatross expedition, and sent to her for identification. Not one of the specimens or notes was saved.

The fruits of three years' experiments with the brains of ants by Professor Caroline E. Thompson of the zoology department, and 4,000 slides, for use in her course in histology and embryology which she had been eight years collecting, were lost, together with a mass of notes soon to have been published in connection with her work with certain deep-sea forms dredged by the bureau of fisheries and the university of California.

THE RECORD OF CAPTAIN POLACK

March — 17, 1914
One Hundred Round Trips as a Captain.

When Captain And the man who uttered this had been four and a half days on the bridge without sleep, eating a bit of food as he could; and when at last his ship was safe in port they cut his boots from his swollen feet and carried him to his bed, where he fell exhausted.

Captain Polack received another decoration from the Kaiser in 1904, during which year he took his majesty on a trip from Bremerhaven through the Mediterranean aboard the Koenig Albert. The Kaiser was so well pleased with the work of the young commander that he decorated him with the Order of the Red Eagle.

Of the many medals that have been awarded him for bravery, the one most highly prized by Captain Polack was given him by Queen Victoria in 1890. He was then second officer of the steamer Ems. Off the coast of Newfoundland, Captain Sander, the commander of the Ems, sighted the British sailing ship Hebe flying a distress signal. The ship was sinking, but the sea was so rough that Captain Sander would not order his men to the rescue; but Polack volunteered, and, with five men, was lowered off. When near the Hebe a giant wave captized their frail craft and all six men were thrown into the sea. Polack rescued four of them, but the other was lost before he could reach him. They were forced to put back to the Ems, as night was approaching. The Ems stood by all night, but at dawn there was no trace of the unfortunate ship.

For taking 149 passengers off the burning steamship Abyssinia of the old Guion Line, on December 18, 1892, while he was an officer of the North German Lloyd Spree, Captain Polack was given a medal by the Liverpool Shipwreck and Humane Society. Just two days after this act of bravery, Captain Polack rescued two men adrift from the British steamer Iona and was given a medal by the German Humane Society. Those were busy days at rescue work for Captain Polack and in 1903 the Grand Duke of Oldenburg gave him a medal in recognition of his general bravery.

Captain Polack received a medal from the Chinese Emperor for taking troops to China in 1900, and another the Order of the Dragon, from the same Emperor for taking out the Chinese cruiser built in Germany, at the time of the Boxer trouble. When he took Prince Komatsu home to Japan after the coronation of King Edward, he received the Japanese Order of the Holy Treasure. A Spanish medal was conferred upon him in 1904 by King Alphonso, when he took the German Emperor from Germany to Vigo on the Koenig Albert; another by the King of Saxony, when he took the latter's daughter, Princess Mathilde on a cruise to the Mediterranean in the North German Lloyd steamer Princess Alice.

Captain Polack starts on his second hundred round trips as a captain with the sailing of the Crown Prince Cecille on Tuesday. "I had implicit confidence in him," said the Kaiser.

A Memorial on Lake Waban's Shores

Stone Seat, Erected on Wellesley's Tupelo Point in Tribute to Lucy Plympton of the Class of 1900

THIS picturesque memorial is the gift of Miss Plympton's classmates and friends. It is done in warm gray stone, and is situated in that stretch of woods below the library, overlooking Lake Waban. The situation was chosen because of its symbolic value; in Margaret Sherwood's words, engraved on a bronze tablet on the wall of the memorial: "In Memory of Lucy Annabel Plympton, Lover of Tree and Wind and Water, of Bird and Flower and Friendly Beast." It is paved in stone, and stone seats run on two sides, while an iron rail on the water side softens the lake effect. W. Leslie Walker was the architect, with Ralph Adams Cram of Boston as the consulting architect.

The organization of the Wellesley alumnae for the national drive, which opened last night at 9.30 was the subject of the address given before the Wellesley club yesterday afternoon by Miss Catherine Evans Hughes, daughter of Charles Evans Hughes of New York. Miss Hughes came from the national headquarters in New York to officially open the semicentennial fund drive in this city. The local club met in the home of Mrs. Justus C. Sanburn of Florentine gardens.

"Winning Wellesley workers" was the subject of Miss Hughes's talk, and during the course of her address she outlined the work of the committee which has been organizing the alumnae for the two-weeks' drive in such a way that each solicitor would employ only five persons and no individual raise by 1925, when it will celebrate its 50th anniversary.

In addition to telling of the organization of the alumnae, Miss Hughes explained how the fund will be expended. According to the explanation she presented it is planned that $1,000,000 will go to increase the salaries of the professors, the maximum earnings of whom are now $3500, while the minimum is only $1300. The rest of the money will be appropriated as follows: $100,000 for housing the faculty, who at present, she said, are sometimes forced to walk the streets in search of shelter; $200,000 for a student alumnae building that will contain and furnish a hall large enough to accommodate the entire student body, and $300,000 for new dormitories.

Miss Hughes also gave a detailed explanation of the New York organization and named the following prominent people who are

Brian Hooker Recreates Cyrano in Translation for Walter Hampden

Dramatist Gives New Vision of Bizarre Don Quixote Character Famed for Nose.

If Brian Hooker had not been steadily and rapidly finishing the last rungs on the ladder of fame during the past few years, as he was doing, he would have awakened to find himself very close to the top, anyway, one morning last November, when lovers of the best traditions of the stage learned that he had at last made it possible for them to see that bizarre, idealistic, fantastic fellow with the remarkable nose and magic sword, whom Rostand made famous overnight—"Cyrano De Bergerac"—on the English speaking stage. With the exception of one or two matinees "Cyrano" had not been shown in New York in nearly twenty-five years and now, after seeing Walter Hampden who had forsaken his Shakespearean characters for a whole season in order to play "Cyrano," we realize the debt the English speaking people owe Brian Hooker who has given us a translation which Mr. Hampden is willing to use. And this translation, too, by the way, makes an excellent story to read and has been a surprise to both author and publisher by the way it has sold.

It all came about in this way. Clayton Hamilton wanted to see "Cyrano" again but he wanted to see it presented on the American stage. Seeing Coquelin as the original "Cyrano" had been an unforgettable experience and he asked Walter Hampden if he would produce and personally appear in the play, "for" he said to Hampden, "it is an experience which I remember as one of the most tingling of my teens. But not only do I want to see it; I want the thousands of younger people to have a chance to do so." Hampden consented upon condition that Mr. Hamilton should find him a satisfactory translation. But the best he could find lacked the zest, the fire, the spontaneity, the brilliance, the lyric rapidity of the original Rostand production. "The original Rostand production," went to Brian Hooker," says Mr. Hampden, "and asked him if he had ever seen it. He said he had and upon his receiving the expected negative response, assured him his state was the more gracious and that it was his duty to retire to the country for a couple of months and translate 'Cyrano' for Walter Hampden." Mr. Hooker had, of necessity, a twofold duty, that of not translating the main characteristics of the great French dramatic live; and as dramatist, to fit these characteristics to the style and ability of the English speaking actor. Percy McKaye said in the Literary Review, "He happily, then, here is a work the publication and production of which will serve to educate a wide public in the values of translation. Few readers or actors are aware of these values until they are revealed by a highly sensitive craftsmanship."

"The education of public insight may, therefore, do much good. For in literature valued translation is a kind of thoroughbreeding. This fine English 'Cyrano' is thoroughbred because its author has transmuted the image of the original into authentic prototypes."

Makes Cyrano Live.

The task of translating another's work is full of difficulties and pitfalls, and is seldom done. There is no doubt, however, of the full acceptance of this thrilling play in its new dramatic form, by stage, public and critics. Mr. Hooker wrote this translation with certain principles before him. It was written of course primarily for the stage and only incidentally for publication, and therefore it is written by the ear and for the ear. The story is in blank verse and is always brisk and clear, carrying one on with an unusual blending of stimulation and satisfaction.

"Mr. Hooker's thought was all of the theater, the actor and the audience."

Will Go to Moses Brown School at Providence

Local friends will learn with regret that Mr and Mrs G. Donald Pinnie of Firglade avenue are to leave the city in the fall to make their home in Providence. Mr Pinnie, who has been teaching in the upper grades in the Forest Park school for the last three years, and before that was with the Springfield business school for a year, is now to go to the Moses Brown school in Providence, leaving for his new duties the latter part of September. The school to which Mr Pinnie is going is one of the oldest "prep" schools in the country, boasting an existence of more than 100 years. It was founded by the son of the founder of Brown university, and, according to the terms of his will, was always to be open to both boys and girls, although at present the former greatly outnumber the latter. Mr Pinnie is to continue his voice study in Boston during next year. Mr and Mrs Pinnie have been paying a recent visit in Providence to view the school and also the house which they are to occupy at the edge of the school grounds. Their address in Providence will be 286 Lloyd avenue.

MACDUFFIE-PIRNIE WEDDING

March 25, 1914
Well-Known Young People United in This City.

One of the most interesting early spring weddings took place Saturday evening, when Miss Jean-Challis MacDuffie, eldest daughter of Dr and Mrs John MacDuffie of 182 Central street, became the bride of George Donald Pinnie, eldest son of Mr and Mrs George Pinnie of 112 Magnolia terrace. The ceremony took place in the home of the bride's parents, and is of unusual interest to local society, since both the young people are popular members of the younger set. The parents of the bride and groom are also prominent Springfield residents, being well known in local as well as broader educational circles.

The hour appointed for the ceremony was 6.30, and the officiating clergymen were Rev A. P. Reccord of the church of the Unity, of which the bride is a member, and Rev Dr Neil McPherson of the First church, the groom's pastor. The bridal party was composed of Miss Beth MacDuffie, a sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and Miss Alice Pierce, a classmate of the bride in Smith college, Miss Frances Chapin of this city and Miss Jane Roessler of Brooklyn, N. Y., as bridesmaids. Mr Pinnie's attendant was his brother, H. Malcolm Pinnie, while the ushers were W. Bruce Pinnie and Roderick Pinnie, brothers of the groom, James P. Gifford, a cousin of the bride, of New Haven, and Theodore Ellis of this city, all friends of the groom at Harvard. Only the immediate relatives and close friends of the bride and groom witnessed the ceremony, but some 175 invitations were issued to the reception which followed in the MacDuffie home.

Mrs. S. Maria Cooper.

Southington, April 4.—"Aunt" Maria Cooper of Berlin avenue will be 91 years old on Monday, April 6. She was born in Westfield, Mass., in a log house and went to a nearby school until 1833. Then she married and moved to New Haven and after moving back to Westfield again, moved to Whitneyville, where she kept a boarding house for Ely Whitney until 1865. She remembers very well of traveling in the old canal that runs over near West street, with her father when she was about 6 years old. Another time she and her father drove from Westfield to New Haven and remained over night at Dunham's tavern, now the old Dunham place on Queen street.

Mrs. Cooper moved to Southington in 1869 and lived where William Johnson now lives on Center street. She says that beyond the river at that time there were no roads; that it was all pasture and woodland. She then moved to the old Cooper house opposite the cutlery shop, where she kept a boarding house. She took a trip to California with her husband, and on her return moved into the election parade house belonging to Clarence Langdon, on the corner of Berlin avenue, where her husband died.

Mrs. Cooper enjoyed good health and was able to walk around until a year ago, when she had a sick spell. Since then she has not been able to get out.

With election cake and there were numerous bottles of brandy and wine, rum and gin for the refreshment of the ministers. The bottles were missing on the day of the wedding, but the wedding cake was pronounced very grand and was most excellent.

Mrs. Cooper Celebrates 91st Birthday Anniversary.

Mrs. S. Maria Cooper, Southington's oldest citizen will quietly celebrate her 91st birthday today at the home in Berlin avenue. Mrs. Cooper has lived here since 1869 and has enjoyed good health since coming here. At the present time, however, she is unable to get around as well as she has in the past due to her advanced age and because of this fact she will undoubtedly be showered with letters and postcards from her many friends in this town and other towns where she is well known.

Mrs. Cooper, better known as "Aunt" Cooper, has a very pleasant disposition and talks freely. She remembers things that happened when she was but a small child and tells many interesting things about this town and its early history. She is one of the few who traveled the entire length of the old canal by boat drawn by mules and who is now able to tell of it.

PITTSFIELD.

March 29, 1914
The Tilden homestead, the little white house opposite the church in Lebanon, N. Y., was burned to the ground Sunday morning entailing a loss of about $5000. Elam Tilden built the house in 1789 and it was there that his son, Gov Samuel J. Tilden of New York, was born 100 years ago last month. The homestead was occupied by Mr and Mrs Harold Bjerk, the former a chemist at the Tilden company of that town. Mrs Bjerk's mother was awakened by Mr and Mrs Ross Rider who live in the next house, and barely escaped in her night clothes. The family lost $75 in money. Gov Tilden in his will left the homestead to two nephews, Samuel J. Tilden who died in Lebanon several weeks ago, and George H. Tilden of Pittsfield.

RICH IDLER WELL SNUBBED.

April New York Times. 1914
Justice Cohalan of the supreme court rejected yesterday the report of Referee Charles E. Lydecker, who recommended that Marshall R. Kernochan, the nephew of Justice Frederic Kernochan of special sessions, should receive an annual allowance of $3,000 a year from the estate of his aunt, Miss Marie Marshall who is incompetent. Her estate is estimated to be worth $3,142,035.

In his application for an allowance of $12,000 a year Mr. Kernochan explained that his annual income was only $3,750, and that he was spending more than $4,700 a year. He said that unless he obtained a larger income he would be obliged to sell his automobile and to resign from all his clubs except the Union and the Knickerbocker. He gave this list of his annual club dues, $150 to the Brook, $125 each for the Union, Racquet and Knickerbocker, $100 for the Tuxedo. "The petitioner, an only son, was born unto and is now surrounded with large wealth. His mother's estate was summarized as of January 1, 1913, in the sum of $1,154,594. Her gross annual income in 1913 was $39,660. In her city home twelve servants are employed, and in her country home in Pittsfield, Mass., there are twenty-five. Martha M. Wysong, another of his aunts, and a widow 67 years old, is without issue and is possessed of an estate of $2,525,000, which produced an annual income of $21,000.

When the local board of aldermen went into official session Monday at the sound of a sharp rap of the mayor's gavel, a gray, keen-eyed little man, sitting at a desk in front of the mayor, took off a fuzzy brown slouch hat and opened his books to begin his work at the 1155th city government meeting of his career. The gray little man is the originator of the famous sig-

The genial city clerk, who has been a political opponent for office seekers and socialists who had to run for party requirements, began his career in this city delivering 40 daily Republican to the scat in the Crescent-hill district 60s. The troubles of a badly divided city council also demands much patient paternal attention from the city clerk, but nobody in the world knows the business better than does Elijah Newell, and in spite of the introduction of new fangled notions into the affairs of this city of late and internal strife in the government, things move placidly along in the city clerk's office and will no doubt continue to do so as long as Elijah Newell and his fuzzy brown slouch hat are among those present.

Elijah A. Newell, City Clerk

 Sixty-four years ago this young man heaved carefree, y-waddled Republicans at front doors in the Crescent hill district every morning. Since then he has carved wood, warred against the "rebs" with the 15th Massachusetts, served in the common council, edited copy on a local newspaper, and 1000 other things. For 27 years he has been city clerk and confidential adviser of mayors of Springfield.

"The recommendation of the referee appears to be the mere impulse of benevolence. It matters not that the incompetent is incurable, 65 years of age, without issue, never having been married, and has been insane since 1872; that her surplus income annually amounts to $100,000. The mere fact that an incompetent has an ample fortune, that her income is large, and greatly exceeds her personal requirements, afford per se, no ground for giving away her property."

Justice Cohalan refused to allow the attorneys of Mr. Kernochan any pay out of the estate of the incompetent. They asked for a fee of $5,000.

Principals in a Wedding of More Than Usual Interest.

George Cornwallis West.

Mrs. Cornwallis West (Mrs. Pat Campbell).

George Cornwallis West seems to have retained one of the fancies of youth. He began matrimonially by falling in love with a woman old enough to be his mother and now that she has divorced him he has promptly married another elderly charmer—Mrs. Pat Campbell. According to some authorities Mrs. Cornwallis West (formerly Mrs. Campbell) is more than 60. She does not look that age when on the stage or off. The former Mrs. Cornwallis has resumed her better known name of Lady Churchill. Campbell was an officer who got killed in South Africa. It is generally understood that domestic unhappiness drove him to put his life in danger on the field. Mrs. Pat was at that time on the stage where she has remained since. She has visited America several times and made a good impression as an actress.

tain the hollow notion of a union for appearance's sake. They continue to travel life's common way together, not because their affections constrain them, but merely to avoid the scandal of a separation. If the habit of divorce increases, the day may come when there will be no scandal, nor even polite surprise. It is for earnest men and women everywhere to set their faces sternly against the degradation of the highest and holiest of human relationships, that the sweeping tide may be stemmed ere it is too late.

—An Important Neighborhood.

MEN OF FIFTY YEARS AGO.

The old two-and-a-half-story brick house, which for many years stood at No. 29 Main street, opposite Barnard park, has been razed to make way for a modern apartment house with stores. The building was known as the Newton homestead and was erected by Philo S. Newton in 1845. Mr. Newton was the father of Philo W. Newton of the Newton Drug company.

The Newton family occupied the dwelling until the death of Philo W. Newton's mother in 1911. At that time it was sold to Goldberg and Kaplan, who are erecting the new building on the site.

Mr. Newton's father was a well known business man in his day. He was a gunsmith and conducted a shop and sporting goods emporium at No. 26 Kinsley street, which was

Mr. Williams telegraphed to Washington for instructions. Miss Tyler received orders to vacate. President Wilson has promised to inquire into her case.

A granddaughter of a President of the United States who loses her place as postmaster on which she is dependent for a living, is only human if she declares republics are ungrateful. Such is the hard fate of Miss Mattie Tyler, whom competitive examination has displaced from the fourth class post office at Cortland, Va. Miss Tyler would not present herself for examination, relying on her record for efficiency, but an ungallant Virginian who "wanted the job" took the test and got the appointment. The position must be better than it looks, for once before Miss Tyler was ousted but was reinstated by the order of President Roosevelt. ## Marriage to H. C. Drayton Big Surprise to Friends.

CEREMONY IS AT PALM BEACH

Legal Separation From Broker Disclosed by Wedding.

PALM BEACH, Feb. 7.—Mrs. Catherine Hinckley and Henry Coleman Drayton, each member of an old and wealthy New York family, will be married here to-day by the Rev. Dr. George Morgan Ward of Poinciana Chapel. Word of the approaching marriage surprised the fashionable winter colony to-day, as it brought the first news of the divorce of Mrs. Hinckley, the former Catherine Livingston Hamersley, from Samuel Neilson Hinckley, New York stock broker, to whom she was married on October 22, 1914. Rumors of differences had been current, but it was not known that they had resulted in legal action.

Mrs. Hinckley has been at her cottage here. Mrs. Herbert C. Pell, who has been her guest, will be her attendant at the wedding. Mr. Drayton has been occupying a cottage on North Lake Trail, which he took over after spending some time as the guest of Pierre L. Barbey.

Bride Now 30 Years Old.

Mrs. Hinckley, who is now 30 years old, and her brother, Louis Gordon Hamersley, a year younger, were orphans, and lived in the large house at 1030 Fifth avenue, New York. They inherited the great fortune of their father, J. Hooker Hamersley, and later the brother received more than $7,000,000, left by a relative, Louis Hamersley. The contest over this will, which devised the estate to "any male children who may be born to a Hamersley," attracted much attention at the time.

Mr. Drayton, who is 29 years old, was divorced in 1907 by Mrs. Mary Constance Knower Drayton after less than three years of wedded life. The name of the correspondent was never made public. Mr. Drayton, the grandson of Mrs. William Astor and the son of J. H. Coleman Drayton, was graduated from Harvard in 1904. He has lived in the Union Club at New York in recent years.

The widow of Louis Hamersley, whose fortune descended to Louis Gordon Hamersley, became the Duchess of Marlborough and later married Lord Childless. A William Beresford. Fortune.
The widow of Louis Hamersley, whose fortune descended to Louis Gordon Hamersley, became the Duchess of Marlborough and later married Lord Childless. A William Beresford. During her life she had an interest in the estate. Despite strenuous efforts to break the will, the fortune was awarded the boy, one of the "Hamersley twins," as he and his sister were known.

The widow of Louis C. Hamersley after her death was married to the Duke of Marlborough, and upon his death to Lord William Beresford, by whom she had a son, now 18 years old. She died at Dorking, England, in January, 1909. Following her death numerous suits went through the lower courts, and it was not until last year that the court of appeals sustained the validity of the odd trust created by Louis C. Hamersley for the unborn son of James Hooker Hamersley in 1882. In the meantime the fortune had grown immensely.

James Hooker Hamersley died suddenly at Brookhurst, his house at Garrison, N. Y., in September, 1901. He had made many successful real estate investments, and built the house at No. 1,030 Fifth avenue, in which his children live. Mrs. Hamersley, who was the daughter of the late William E. Chisholm, died in January, 1904, and the responsibility of rearing and educating the children fell upon Mrs. Lowrie.

Miss Hamersley's Debut.

Miss Hamersley developed into a vivacious, highly accomplished, beautiful young woman, of slight but athletic physique, with a fair complexion, large blue eyes and a wealth of golden hair. Her inclinations are musical and she is an excellent pianist. Four years ago her aunt, Mrs. Charles D. Stickney, introduced her to society at a tea which was one of the most brilliant events of that season.

The marriage is expected to take place in the autumn.

Miss Katherine Livingston Hamersley's marriage to Samuel Neilson Hinckley of New York and Cedarhurst, L. I., which is to be solemnized on next Thursday in Grace Church, New York, is one of the important town weddings of the autumnal season. Miss Hamersley is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Hooker Hamersley. Her brother, L. Gordon Hamersley, who is a senior at Harvard and who announced her engagement last May, came into the estate of his father's cousin, the late Louis C. Hamersley, over a year ago, after a legal battle waged by other relatives, including the late Lily Warren Beresford, formerly Duchess of Marlborough, and who was the first wife of Louis C. Hamersley. After the church ceremony a large reception is to be held at the home of the bride, No. 1030 Fifth avenue.

Today is the 114th anniversary of the birth of "Aunt" Mahala Ayer, who lives at the Home for Aged and Infirmed Colored Persons, at Girard and Belmont avenues. ## BISHOP NILAN TELLS OF

HIS TRIP TO HOLY LAND

Easter - 1914

Also Gives an Account of His Audience With His Holiness, Pope Pius X.

There were solemn vespers in St. Joseph's cathedral, Sunday afternoon. Bishop Nilan addressed the congregation, it being his first appearance in the pulpit since his return from the Holy Land and Rome.

The celebrant at vespers was the Rev. J. B. Dougherty, chaplain of the seminary at Hamilton Heights. The Rev. William O'Shea and the Rev. J. Clement Martin were deacon and sub-deacon respectively. The bishop occupied the episcopal seat and was attended by the Very Rev. Thomas S. Duggan, V. G., rector of the cathedral, and the Rev. John G. Murray, chancellor of the diocese. The Rev. W. H. Flynn, assistant chancellor, was also in the sanctuary. There was a large congregation present, the spacious edifice being comfortably filled.

Mission to Rome a Success.

Bishop Nilan said his mission in going to the Holy Land and to Rome was a success. He thanked the people for their prayers for him during his absence. He said the places in the Holy Land connected with the incidents in the life of Our Divine Lord were of great interest to him. He visited Bethlehem, now a city of 15,000 or 17,000 inhabitants, one-third of whom are Catholics, the others being their separated brethren of the Greek church and Mohammedans. He saw the site of the stable in which Jesus was born. He referred to the Sea of Galilee, and said that the ancient cities built on its shores are very much decayed. A synagogue has been discovered in the work of excavating and it is believed that this synagogue was built by the centurion referred to in the gospels.

Visited Nazareth.

The bishop visited Nazareth, where the Blessed Virgin, the mother of Jesus, lived when the angel announced that she was to become the mother of the Son of God, and addressed her as being "full of grace." He was shown the site of the home of Mary and the well from which women obtain water for domestic use. He saw women filling their jars of water and carrying them on their heads same as was done in the time of Mary. He visited Jerusalem, which is a city of about 100,000. He went to the garden of olives where Jesus suffered His agony before He was apprehended. The bishop referred to other places in the Holy Land which he had seen.

Went to Rome.

After leaving the Holy Land he went to Rome and had an audience with Pope Pius X. He asked the pope about his health and His Holiness replied: "My health is very good, but I am an old man. I am ready to go when the Lord calls me, trusting in His mercy." Bishop Nilan said there is humorous twinkle in the eyes of the pope but there is also a shade of sadness. The pope told him to ask the people of the Hartford diocese to pray for

BURGOYNE HOME BURNS.

Mansion at Great Neck, L. I., Filled With Revolutionary Heirlooms, Is Destroyed.

Great Neck, L. I., April 16.—The country home of Stephen H. Bur- goyne, a great-grandson of General John Burgoyne, of Revolutionary distinction, was burned to the ground last night, affording a spec- tacular illumination of the sound and many miles of Long Island.

Mrs. Burgoyne, who was at dinner with Mr. Burgoyne, when the alarm was sounded by servants, started upstairs to save many priceless heir- looms of the Revolutionary period, and of their English ancestors, but she was dragged back by her hus- band just as the flames shot down the stairway.

The treasures which she sought to save and about $30,000 worth of her jewels were destroyed in the fire. These were in a locked cabi- net in the boudoir adjoining Mrs.

Sound Illuminated.

When the flames shot through the roof the reflection spread far out over the Sound. The steamer Rich- ard Peck, on her way up the Sound, stopped off Elm Point and for an hour her passengers lined the rail.

A northeast gale was blowing and it carried sparks and burning shin- gles and planks over a wide area. Seeing that they could not prevent the destruction of the Burgoyne home, the firemen drenched the Wineburgh and Mayhew residences and outbuildings.

Many of the wealthy neighbors, who reached the scene before the firemen, tried to enter the home to save the rare pieces of furniture and the paintings known to be in it, but the fire, fanned by the gale, spread so rapidly that they were driven back and practically nothing was saved.

Mrs. Burgoyne, overcome by her failure to save the heirlooms and her jewels and by the destruction of her home, was taken to the home of J. S. Phillips, a neighbor. She was almost at the top of the stairs when her husband reached her and drew her back. Had she entered the second floor it is believed that she would have lost her life, as a sheet of flames swept through the hall almost at that second and cut off any possibility of escape.

Most of the residents of Great Neck, Douglaston and Bayside saw the flames and the red reflection in the sky, and many of them hurried to Elm Point. In Flushing the reflection in the sky caused rumors that the business section of Great Neck was burning.

Collinsville, April 16.

The storm of last night caused a formation of ice on the trees on the upper part of the hills but not in the valleys. Part way down the side of each hill ran a line as straight as though made by a surveyor. Above this line the hill was covered with ice and below the line not a bit of ice was to be seen.

The rain of yesterday was unwelcome to many people including, of course, the baseball fans and members of the Hartford Eastern Association team, who had just arrived in the city. In fact, it's hard to find anybody who did welcome the varieties of weather that were crowded into the hours between dawn and evening. The rainfall was 1.22 inches. Some snow fell, too, but melted when it struck the ground. Over in Collinsville, there was a heavy hailstorm and in the hills of Norfolk, several inches of snow fell.

Snow in the air in Springfield Thursday and heavy falls of snow in Berkshire brought to mind the question. If April showers bring May flowers, what do April snowflakes bring? In Springfield the snow melted as fast as it struck the ground, but a fall of five inches was reported at Hinsdale, four inches at Lee, and heavy snows throughout Berkshire.

Sunday was one of the hottest April 19ths in the records of the weather bureau, the official thermometer at the United States armory on State street registering 86, while many unofficial thermometers went as high as 90. The effect on the residents of the city, in view of the cold spring which has been experienced, was uncomfortable, to say the least, especially to the churchgoer who started out in the morning wearing his overcoat, but nevertheless welcome. Crowds took advantage of the

The news that Harry L. Bradley, cashier of the Hampden national bank, has accepted a position as treasurer of the Springfield safe deposit and trust company in Springfield came as a great surprise to his many Westfield friends. Mr. Bradley had come to be regarded as a fixture in Westfield affairs, and at the Hampden bank, and his decision to move to the county seat is keenly regretted. Mr. Bradley has been with the Hampden bank for 23 years, 14 of which have been as cashier. He has been invariably courteous and considerate to the patrons of the bank, and prompt and businesslike in executing the affairs of that institution. Mr. Bradley will also be missed from the community affairs of Westfield, to the promotion of which he has given freely and cheerfully much time and effort.

The board of directors of the Springfield safe deposit and trust company, at a meeting held Friday, elected Harry L. Bradley, cashier of the Hampden national bank of Westfield, to the office of treasurer to succeed George H. Kemater, who leaves that office to assume the more responsible position of vice-president, to which he was elected in January. Mr. Bradley has been identified with the Hampden national bank of Westfield for 23 years. He served his apprenticeship of three years in the Hampden bank under the late Charles L. Weller, who was cashier at that time. Mr. Bradley was for a time purchasing agent for the United States whip company, and upon the death of Mr. Weller and the promotion of Frederick H. Sackett to become cashier of the Hampden bank, he was invited to return to the bank as teller. He served in this position for six years, and upon the death of Mr. Sackett the directors elected him cashier. Mr. Bradley has served in the latter capacity for 14 years. Mr. Bradley is held in high regard in Westfield, and his departure from that town will be regretted by a host of friends. Irving S. Pulcifer, heretofore assistant treasurer, has been promoted by being placed in charge of the trust department with the title of trust officer. He has been associated with this branch of the com-and Judd's Orchestra rendered music during the reception. Brief exercises were held. Judge John Coats on behalf of the church, presented the pastor and his wife with a purse containing over $300 from the people of the church and a few outside friends, who asked the privilege of contributing. Judge Coats referred to the pastor's happy married life and his splendid service as pastor for ten years. Rev. Dr. Brown gracefully responded.

Herbert Randall of Hartford, an old time friend of Rev. Dr. Brown, read an original poem. Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Brown and their children received. The ushers were William T. Sloper, R. C. Gremond, Dr. C. W. Vivian, Albert Scripture, Gardner Weld and Joseph C. Andrews.

The committee in charge of raising the purse was E. M. Wightman, chairman; E. R. Hitchcock, J. C. Andrew, Albert Scripture, William S. Judd, A. O. Washburn, B. H. Spencer and Edward Connelly.

THE THOMAS-DAVIS WEDDING

Ceremony Performed in St Paul's Church Yesterday Noon.

Miss Dorothy Cuthbert Thomas, daughter of Mrs George Cuthbert Thomas of Stockbridge, and Edward Mott Davis of Shirley, a son of Prof William M. Davis of Harvard university, were married at noon yesterday in St Paul's Episcopal church in Stockbridge. Rev George Grenville Merrill, the rector, read the service. It was an important wedding for Stockbridge, about 700 invitations having been issued for the ceremony. Half an hour before the ceremony the beautiful memorial church was filled. Yellow and white were color tones of the decorations. Jonquils, daffodils, lilies, carnations and roses were used in abundance with potted palms for a contrasting note. It was all most effective and pleasing. The decorations were the work of the altar guild of St Paul's, led by Miss Grace Parker.

An elaborate organ recital preceded the ceremony. Mrs Charles Eugene Evans, the organist, who had played at the wedding of the bride's mother, was in charge. On the program were Wagner's "Sigmund's Love Song" from "Die Walkure," selections from "Rheingold," some parts of "Faust," Kipling's "Gypsy Trail," and "Believe me if all those endearing young charms." This recital occupied a half-hour. While it progressed the guests arrived and were seated. For the processional march to the chancel Mrs Evans played the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin," and the Mendelssohn wedding march was the recessional music. When the matron of honor and the brides appeared from the chancel and marched to meet the bride at the door of the church, passing down the main aisle, the choir of St Paul's sang "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden." The organist played De Koven's "O Per-

Mrs Davis is the only daughter of Mrs Thomas, her father having been a member of a prominent Quaker family of Philadelphia. She has passed most of her life in Stockbridge, where she has been socially prominent. She is a member of the Tuesday club, the Casino and other village organizations. She has been a teacher in the classes for village children, established by Mrs Oscar Iasigi of Boston. Mrs Davis's gifts to her matron of honor, maid of honor and bridesmaids, were brooches, circles of friendship, of topaz surrounded by pearls. Mr Davis gave his best man and the ushers, pearl scarf pins. Mr Davis was graduated from Harvard university, in the class of 1909. He is owner of a fruit farm in Shirley, where he and Mrs Davis will live. Mr Davis is a member of the Harvard and other Boston clubs. He is a grandson of Mrs Charlotte E. Mrs. Hilliard was Olga Everard and in 1909 she created a sensation by eloping with Williams, who was her father's chauffeur. The father, the late James Everard, the millionaire New York brewer, forgave his daughter, but her marriage did not prove a happy one.

The marriage in Denver, Monday, was a surprise to the theatrical profession in general and to Mr. Hilliard's close friends in particular. Mrs. Hilliard is 23 years old and the actor is 37.

EDWARD B. MORRIS BECOMES ACTUARY

PLACE OF LATE

H. J. MESSENGER

Has Been In Actuarial Department Since 1898.

APRIL 20, 1914.

Edward B. Morris of No. 228 North Oxford street, connected with the actuarial department of the Travelers Insurance Company since 1898, has been appointed actuary of the company's life department to succeed H. J. Messenger, whose death occurred last December.

Mr. Morris was born in Hartford, August 16, 1875, and was the son of John E. Morris, former secretary of the Travelers Insurance Company. He was educated in the public schools of Hartford and graduated from the mechanical engineering course of the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University in 1897. He was in business in New York for nearly a year but, in the summer of 1898, entered the employ of the Travelers Insurance Company, becoming connected with the actuarial department. In 1906 he became assistant actuary, which place he has since held.

The work of the actuarial department, since Mr. Morris went to the company, has kept pace with the growth of the insurance business and is well illustrated by the fact that the department today has forty-four clerks whereas it had but four in 1898. In the early days of the company, the actuarial function of all departments was combined but later a division was made and actuarial heads were appointed for each department.

The first consulting actuary the company ever had was Elizur Wright of the Massachusetts insurance department. After that came Edwin W. Bryant and George Lester. George Ellis was actuary from 1874 until 1898 and was succeeded by Mr. Messenger.

Mr. Morris is widely known in Hartford's business and social circles. He is president of the Hartford Golf Club and a member of the following clubs and organizations: Hartford Club, University Club, Yale Club of New York, St. Elmo Club of New Haven, Connecticut Historical Society, Sons of Veterans, American Statistical Association. He was made a fellow of the Actuarial Society of America by examination in 1906 and is a trustee of the Loan Fund of Yale Alumni of Hartford County. He is married and has one daughter.

'97 S.—Edward B. Morris has recently been appointed actuary of the life department of the Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn. He has also lately been elected president of the Hartford Golf Club.

From those of her pupils who were unable to be present, Mrs. Tuttle received many remembrances, wishing her joy on her birthday and expressing their regret at not being able to attend. She is a well-known woman

Mrs. Tuttle first went to the Hartford Hospital in 1873. The training school was organized in 1877 and she became its first superintendent. Her activities in that department were extremely valuable, and as a result it grew steadily. She was the teacher, adviser and friend of hundreds of young girls who desired to enter the profession of nursing, and she saw them safely through the first few months of uncertainty to an ultimate successful graduation under her efficient generalship. In 1890, she resigned her place as superintendent, and has since lived with her daughter.

WHO THE CASTLES ARE.

The Young Couple Whom the Modern Dances Have Made Wealthy.

"It is great fun to be the fashion while you are 20 and to be at the same time amassing a fortune that will help you to retire when you are a middle-aged woman of 25 and live in the country and have a houseful of children and a garden full of flowers and a kennel full of dogs and no worries. For that, you must know, is the sober ambition of a girl whose brain is not so light as her feet, not by many and many a—whatever is the unit of brain weight?"

In these words a theater magazine interviewer expresses the ambitions of Mrs. Vernon Castle, who, with her husband is to give an exhibition of the modern ball-room dances in the Auditorium on the 28th, afternoon and evening. It would have seemed that there was nothing less probable than that this slim woman would have become the rage of Paris and New York two years ago, continues the interviewer. Then the future Mrs. Castle's interests were bounded by New Rochelle, by the outdoor life her physician father had prescribed, and by the dogs that always tumbled devotedly at her feet. It was the accident of an actor's happening to spend a vacation at New Rochelle that widened the horizon of the pretty villager's life.

Vernon Castle had intended to become an engineer. At 20 he was graduated from the Birmingham (Eng.) university of engineering. Before taking up his "life work" as an electrical engineer he arranged to spend a vacation in the States. After signing a contract for a position with a famous English engineering concern he set sail. It happened—things "happened" seem to so surprisingly control our lives—that when Mr. Castle, aged 20, arrived in New York his brother-in-law, Lawrence Grossmith, was appearing with Lew Fields in "About Town." Mr. Field's eye of a manager measuring the lank youth, saw possibilities of comedy in him. "Better understudy your brother-in-law," he suggested. "Are you making fun of me?" drawled the British youth. "I want you to make fun for my audiences," corrected the American manager. "There might be sport in it," said the future electrical engineer, I say, I believe I'll try it."

Several times when his brother-in-law was indisposed or tired, the young man played his part with success. Mr. Fields offered him a part in "Behind the Counter." If your memory is good you will recall the long thin waiter in that production who chaffed Mr. Fields and was chaffed by him in dialect.

He next joined "The Midnight Sons." "I had more fun every night in that stag banquet scene than in all the 20 years I had lived in England," he said.

Now the doctor's daughter approaches. Or more strictly speaking, Mr. Castle approaches. He heard that the swimming and boating were good at New Rochelle. He fixed his abode for the summer in that pretty suburb of New York. He saw a slim, reed-like girl dive off her father's yacht. He asked to be presented to the dripping maid who rose so smilingly from the sea. I may not say that they became friends at once, for it is not in the leisurely British temperament nor is it the staid small town custom. But, those hindrances considered, they did remarkably well. It was but a fortnight before he called for her at her dancing school, and saw that she was as graceful and apparently as weightless as a puff of thistledown coquetting with a sleepy breeze. They danced together at some of the New Rochelle houses.

They knew that they danced together most agreeably, but dancing was not then in the foreground. Cupid relegated it to a minor consideration. It assumed prominence again when, wedded, they visited Paris and the review for which they had been engaged failed after a week.

"We wondered whether we couldn't make a living dancing. The proprietor of the Cafe de Paris gave us a chance. The rest you know," said the doctor's daughter, as she whirled away to dance the graceful Maxixe. It is a long cry from the village of Long Island sound to national fame, but Mrs Castle, with the help of her girlish personality, achieved it. From the English town of Norwich, and a house teeming with memories rather than promise, for it was the house in which Lord Nelson had lived when a boy, to the conquest of New York and a fortune made before 30, is the difficult distance that Mr Castle has traversed with ease.

The two bleeding hearts are to be torn asunder, in fact they were torn asunder after the concert, for she went on to Pittsburg and he back to Newport's News where he takes his diploma as licensed flier on Saturday and at once sets out for France and glory.

We have heard a great deal about the new fashions and seen them in the fashion magazines, but never before were styles so discussed and so little adopted by the women at large. We have looked at the exaggerated flounces, the plaits, the eccentric hats, the wide draperies and we have withdrawn, like Fear in Collins' Ode, hand on chord bewildered laid, and withdrawn, afraid to try. For we simply couldn't make of our everyday selves such shrieking guys. But Sunday night Mrs. Castle was dressed precisely as Bakst intended the average woman to dress. She wore three different costumes any one of which, if we had the sand and the courage you and I, (if of the right sex) could wear with self respect and unconsciousness and she looked perfectly beautiful and danced as the breath of a summer wind dances over the bank of primroses. I hope there is no harm in saying that it was the privilege of a friend of mine to see the parting between this much discussed pair and tears rained and sobs, sweet female tears and manly sobs. We can only hope that in the case of Mr. Castle there will be immunity from wounds, at least from wounds in the legs, because he is like Achilles and a hurt in the heel means destruction. Mr. Castle by the way, is a brother-in-law of George Grossmith and a first class comedian, besides being the first of all male dancers except Mordkin. The Hippodrome audience of 10,000 people Sunday night all seemed to unite in wishing him good luck and a safe return, but like other people, it enjoyed the belief in a divorce and when, with high moral purpose, I denied it to the grim lady behind me, who had remarked "they hate each other like poison." I got a sniff which made me feel as if I had told a connoisseur his Raphael was a Guido Reni.

Vernon Castle, with an aviator's license in his pocket, has sailed for Europe ostensibly to enter the flying service of the British army or navy. That is very much to Mr. Castle's credit—very much more to his credit than his excellent dancing. Perhaps for one reason or another the British government may not care to avail itself of Mr. Castle's services. Perhaps he anticipates this. Or perhaps it is only that he anticipates the war will not last very long after he gets into it. Or perhaps he intends to get out when he gets ready. Anyway, he has signed a contract to do some more dancing for Charles Dillingham when he gets back.

Seventy-six years ago today the first vessel to cross the Atlantic all the way under steam arrived in New York harbor at 10 o'clock at night. It was the Sirius, a coastwise steamer chartered from an English company by Junius Smith, a Connecticut Yankee, to beat out another British vessel, the Great Western, for the glory of being the first real trans-atlantic steamship. The Great Western, which had left Europe three days later, arrived in New York only a few hours behind the Sirius. The Savannah had crossed the Atlantic nineteen years before but she had used steam only during three days of the voyage. The Sirius made the trip from Cork, Ireland, in eighteen days, making the last of her historic run by burning her extra spars and forty-three barrels of resin. A great crowd gathered at Jones' wharf to celebrate the arrival and huge bonfires were built along the waterfront to light up the boat.

placed on the retired list on May 9, 1898. Since that time, he served for several years on the military examining board which determines the qualifications of officers for appointment and promotion.

Colonel Cone is inclined to disagree with the present theory of military service. "It is too much, 'get there no matter how,'" he says, "and it seems to me that a stricter drill would create a discipline which would better stand the brunt of heavy action."

An Officer and Gentleman.

Those who served under him know him as a student of tactics, and a firm believer in discipline administered in the correct way—but for all this, he was an essentially human officer, and often in censuring an officer or man, took especial pains that no stigma was attached thereby, to the record. He was unique among the officers of the older military school in sparing his men all the exertion and fatigue possible, and is still a courteous and kindly gentleman, with a decided interest in matters political and military.

He is the head of the Asylum street hardware firm of J. H. & W. E. Cone, and is to be found there the last days of each week. For the week end, and during the first of the week, he is to be found at his shore cottage near New London, where he spends many

Colonel Cowles has seen much Indian warfare, in the Philippines, in Philippine insurrection, in the pacification of the Philippines as a second lieutenant in the campaign against the Indians in western Kansas; and in 1880-1881 he went upon a mission to the Uncomphagre Utes, at the time of the White River massacre in Colorado. In the Spanish war he was with the Seventh army corps at Jacksonville, at Savannah, and at Havana, Cuba. Colonel Cowles was afterward in campaigns against the insurgents in the Philippines. From 1906 to 1909 he commanded the First infantry in the army of pacification in Cuba.

Among the special duties assigned Colonel Cowles were those of the supervision of internal revenue in the Philippines, department of Northern Luzon, 1900-1902; the command of the army of Cuban Pacification at the inaugural ceremonies, March 4, 1909; the command of troops at the dedication of the monument to the regular soldiers at Gettysburg, May 27 to June 3, 1909; the command of the regular troops, the National Guard, and the Canadian troops at the Champlain tercentenary celebration at Plattsburg, N. THE PARK CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.
As It Appeared, Snow Enshrouded, This Week.

It is intimated that persons interested in the establishment of another moving picture or vaudeville theater venture are looking at the property. The church would require little alteration, it is said, to be turned into a theater. A real estate agent said today that at least one other church in town is desirous of acquiring the property for religious purposes. While the name of the congregation wanting the property has not been disclosed, it has been suggested by outsiders that a certain Christian Science church is considering the purchase of the building.

would be supported as long as he lived, whether able to work or not. His health needed building up, however, and he insisted on entire release from the work. During the remaining seventeen years of his life he engaged in the production of a number of great religious books, many of which are still considered among the choicest literary efforts ever produced in this state.

In describing him, Dr. Nathaniel J. Burton, one of his successors in the North church pulpit, writes as follows: "He was a great writer, but did not in any way neglect his duties

The Farmington Avenue Congregational Church, like the Park Church, was formerly a downtown church, being known as the Pearl street Church until it moved west and located on Farmington avenue about a dozen years ago.

FARMINGTON AVENUE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Those received included more than 90 per cent. of the membership of Park Church, a number of absentees and non-resident members having withdrawn.

Professor E. H. Knight of the Hartford School of Religious Pedagogy formerly received the new members with the reading of the covenant of the church. He then gave an address of welcome, in which he dwelt upon the opportunity for service presented by the union; upon the divine guidance in bringing it to consummation, and upon the increased efficiency which was hoped for as a result. He added a special and personal greeting to the new pastor, Dr. Carter, assuring him of the cordial support of the people.

Dr. Carter's Message.

Dr. Carter responded, expressing his appreciation of the personal welcome and then followed with this message:—

We come to you with a treasure that we greatly prize. An ancient term describes it better than any other. It is the fellowship in the gospel, a warm, vital, friendly relation. It speaks of the mutual attraction of those who love the household of faith.

We have proven that "the fellowship of kindred minds is like to that above," and it is altogether welcome here below. We would share with you and by you we would have it augmented and enriched, until our combined fellowship shall create an ampler blend.

We come to you already enlisted for service and eager for larger opportunity. The normal activities of the church we prize and its expanding scope we appreciate. The dearest fate would be to have nothing to do. If the pace is fast and strong we shall try our best to keep up with it, but we shall crave the touch of shoulder to shoulder.

In response to this welcome we are concerned not so much with what we are as what we represent. Only under the impulse of faith are we warranted in undertaking this important union. ## Keney Fund Will Probably Be Divided.

The special committee of the Farmington Avenue Congregational Church appointed to meet with the special committee of the Park Congregational Church regarding the proposed merger of the two churches will report at a meeting of the Farmington Avenue Church Thursday night and it is expected that the report will be favorable.

The proposition is understood to be for the Park Church to move out to the Farmington Avenue Church, which is to be the home of the two. Rev. Charles Francis Carter, pastor of the Park Church, is to become pastor of the combined churches, and the property of the Park Church is to be sold. In this connection it is interesting to note that if the Park Church enters into the plan it loses a fund of $30,000 provided by the late Henry Keney, in his will, and which the church has had since 1894.

The bequest to the Park Church was made by Mr. Keney in the twenty-second paragraph of his will, drawn December 23, 1893, and is as follows:

"I give and bequeath to the Park Church Ecclesiastical Society, formerly the North Congregational Church and Society, the sum of thirty thousand dollars ($30,000); the same to be known and called the 'Keney Fund'; the interest and income thereof only to be used and appropriated for the support and maintenance of public worship in the Park Congregational Church, according to the forms and usages of said church and society. If, however, said society and church shall at any time remove said church from its present location to any place west of the present line of the track of the Consolidated Railroad, then, and in that event, I give and bequeath said sum of thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) to the Hartford Hospital, Hartford Orphan Asylum, and Old People's Home, to be equally divided between said corporations, and added to the bequests hereinbefore made to each of said corporations."

The Park Church will also forfeit any right it may have to share in the provisions of the thirty-third paragraph, which says, in part: "If, after the purchase, completion and conveyance of said public park to the city of Hartford, anything remains in the hands of my said trustees of said rest, residue and remainder of my said estate, I order and direct, and my will is, that the same shall be divided, in the ration and proportion in which I have hereinbefore given legacies and bequests, to the following named institutions and corporations, viz: Trinity College, Hartford Hospital, Hartford Orphan Asylum, Old People's Home, Park Ecclesiastical Society, Hartford Charitable Society, Union for Home Work, City Mission, Good-Will Club and Wadsworth Athenaeum; to be added by said corporations to the legacies and bequests hereinbefore made to them; and to be held, used and appropriated under the same terms, conditions, and limitations as is hereinbefore provided in respect of said several legacies and bequests."

IMMANUEL CHURCH PASTOR INSTALLED

SEPTEMBER 23, 1914.

EVENING SERVICE

TRIBUTE TO HIM

Rev. Dr. Charles Francis Carter, former pastor of the Park Congregational Church, was last night installed as pastor of the Immanuel Congregational Church, which is the united church resulting from the amalgamation of the Park Church and the Farmington Avenue Congregational Church. The exercises were in the usual Congregational form and held in the evening, after the ecclesiastical council had met in the afternoon at 5 o'clock and examined Dr. Carter and listened to his statement of faith and outline of the church's ministry. A supper followed at 6:30 o'clock, at which delegates to the council and officials of the church, with their wives, were present.

The ecclesiastical council approved of his installation as pastor-elect of the Immanuel Congregational Church. The resolutions were drawn up by Rev. Dr. Edwin Pond Parker and were as follows:—

Dr. Carter was not examined by the ecclesiastical council in the usual theological subjects. The council, instead, passed the following resolution, presented by Rev. Dr. Edwin Pond Parker, pastor emeritus of the South Congregational Church:—

Resolution Waives Examination.

Whereas, Rev. Charles Francis Carter, pastor-elect of the church, in whose name and behalf we are convened, came to Hartford only four years ago, and after an examination by an ecclesiastical council was installed pastor of the Park Church with the approval of said council; and

Whereas, In the course of his ministry in this city he has given no cause or occasion for questioning his soundness and fitness for the Gospel ministry, but, contrarywise, has greatly commended himself to the confidence and affection of his fellow-preachers and to the Christian public; and

Whereas, He comes before us as the pastor-elect of a church composed in a considerable part of those who were members of the flock, of which he was the last and the faithful shepherd; therefore, in view of these facts and of the altogether peculiar circumstances of this case, in honor of him and of ourselves,

Resolved, That this council hereby waives the customary personal and theological examination of Rev. Charles F. Carter; approves his installation as pastor of the Immanuel Congregational Church in Hartford, and will gladly participate in the services of his installation.

The evening service was jointly conducted by a group of seven ministers. After the invocation and reading of the minutes of the council, Rev. Dr. P. Miles Snyder, pastor of the East Hartford Congregational Church, led a responsive service. Rev. Dr. William Douglas Mackenzie, president of the Hartford Theological Seminary, preached the sermon. He opened with references to the present war in Europe and its effect upon the Christian religion, expressing a thorough optimism for the future of the churches throughout the world.

Dr. Mackenzie on War.

"Belgium is like a little boy being ground under a giant's heel," said Dr. Mackenzie. "When I think of that country's refusal to give in to her enemies without a stern resistance, I thrill with the thought of something we call patriotism. France recovered from her awful humiliation years ago and when I think of her again rising up I say that one must surely answer that there is something noble. Like all great human events, war is made up of good and evil, and now when we ask ourselves what this great hour in history means we should realize that it means as never before a supreme challenge to the Christian and the Christian faith. The supreme challenge on the outward side of man's history was never before of such vast significance. The great question that will stir a man's heart will be: What do I mean by loyalty and what will supreme loyalty do for the soul of a human?"

"It is said that in the beginning the interests of the individual are subordinated to the interests of the nation. Whether or not the nation has a conscience is the question that is being asked now. Is there a conscience by which nations may rise up? Is

Prayer and Address to Pastor.

Immediately afterwards Rev. Dr. William DeLoss Love, president of the Connecticut Humane Society and formerly pastor of the Farmington Avenue Congregational Church, gave the prayer of installation. After the anthem, "Hearken Unto Me," by the choir, Rev. Samuel C. Bushnell, pastor of the Congregational Church of Arlington, Mass., made the address to the pastor.

"There is no institution that has a higher aim than the church or a higher business for its object," he said. "You have had a royal succession of pastors in this church, great men whom Dr. Carter follows. I congratulate your pastor tonight and you, members of the church. God's blessing rest on him and us for evermore."

Address To People.

Rev. Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, pastor of Center Church, delivered the address to the people, saying in part:—

"We rejoice in the union thus happily consummated, we rejoice that this happy event is the last of a series of events that have taken place in the Congregational churches of this city, and which have aligned, equipped and trained church members for the service of Christ. I am here to speak in the name of the ministers, in some sense of the churches of the city and in some sense of all churches Catholic. Furnish your pastor adequately with the means for a useful service."

Rev. Dr. John Brownlee Voorhees, pastor of the Asylum Hill Congregational Church, then in a few fitting words extended the right hand of fellowship to Dr. Carter. The installed pastor pronounced the benediction, closing the service.

IS DANNY MAHER TO RETIRE FROM TURF?

MARCH 26, 1914.

London Story Lends Color to Belief That Hartford Boy's Health Is DANNY MAHER'S WORK.

The report that Danny Maher is about to retire from his long career as an English jockey affords an opportunity to say that his work in riding race horses has been no more brilliant for horsemanship than for honesty. In the famous law suit of the elder Wooten against Robert Sevier Maher appeared as an expert witness as to what is correct conduct in the business of riding race horses. It was impressive to read his testimony on this relatively unknown branch of human effort, and to observe with what

Here This Summer.

Danny Maher of Hartford, foremost of American jockeys, and the premier jockey of England since he began riding there, was married in London yesterday to Miss Dora Frazier of that city. The news was received yesterday in a cable dispatch to Danny's mother, Mrs. Mary J. Maher, and Louis J. Kilby, his brother-in-law, notified "The Courant."

This is Danny's first venture in the field of matrimony, but his friends were not surprised, as they had known that he had been in Miss Frazier's company considerably of late. He had known her for a long while, Mr. Kilby said yesterday. They will make their home at Danny's country estate at Nottingham, Eng. Mr. Kilby said that this estate comprised at least eighty acres and has on it a large residence and many other buildings, including hot houses, dog kennels and the like. The avenue leading up to the house is shaded by a double row of elms and the house sets far back from the road. Danny raises fruit and flowers and has considerable prize stock.

Although they will make their home in England, it is probable that the jockey and his wife will visit his relatives in this country not later than midsummer. Danny has been sick all winter. He contracted malaria and grip, which developed into pneumonia, and only left a nursing home a week or so ago. The London papers say that Danny will ride again next season.

The marriage took place at St. George's Church, Hanover Square. The Earl of Rosebery attended the wedding and presented the bride with a diamond and sapphire pendant.

VINCENT ASTOR ENGAGED TO HELEN HUNTINGTON

1913—Bride-To-Be Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Huntington.

New York, Nov. 8.—Vincent Astor confirmed, through his secretary today, the announcement that he was engaged to marry Miss Helen Dinsmore Huntington, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Huntington of Staatsburg, N. Y. The wedding, it is understood, will take place next spring.

Young Astor inherited about $65,000,000 from the estate of his father, the late Colonel John Jacob Astor, who perished on the Titanic. He will be 22 years old this month. The bride-to-be is 20. The Astor country place, Ferncliff, adjoins that of the Huntington's at Staatsburg, which is a few miles north of Poughkeepsie.

The young people have known each other since childhood. Miss Huntington is rather tall, with brown hair and blue eyes. She is the granddaughter of the late William B. Dinsmore, a millionaire resident of Tuxedo. Her mother, who was Miss Helen Gray Dinsmore, is well known in New York, Newport and Tuxedo.

Because of her engagement to marry Vincent Astor, Miss Helen Dinsmore Huntington, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Huntington of Staatsburg, N. Y., has become a very prominent figure in the day's news. Miss Huntington is known to several Hartford young women who with her attended Miss Masters's School at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., namely, Miss Julia Allen, Miss Helen St. John, Miss Emily Collins, Miss Eliza Cheney and Miss Esther Lyman. Mr. Astor is probably the richest young man in the world, since he inherited about $65,000,000 from the estate of his father, the late Colonel John Jacob Astor, who perished on the Titanic. Miss Huntington is 20 years old and belongs to a family of great social prominence in New York.

ASTOR INCOME FOR TWO YEARS WAS $24,794,000

New York, April 28.—The income from the estate of John Jacob Astor since the death of Mr. Astor, when the Titanic foundered two years ago, has been more than $24,794,000, according to a report of the executors filed with the surrogate here today. The disbursements have amounted to more than $24,715,000, leaving a balance of not quite $78,900.

The report sets forth the holdings of the estate, and shows the amount of the transfer tax of the various legacies, and that all of the bequests made in Mr. Astor's will have been

Stricken at Home of Fiancee With Congestion of Lungs —Condition Serious.

New York, April 14.—Vincent Astor is seriously ill at the country place at Staatsburg, of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Huntington, whose daughter, Helen, he is to marry on April 30. He was stricken last night and his temperature rose to 105. He was much better today, but Mr. Huntington said that physicians still regard his condition as serious, although there was such a marked improvement in comparison with last night that they hoped the crisis had been passed. He added that it might be necessary to postpone the wedding.

In addition to local physicians two doctors from New York were summoned. It was said that Mr. Astor had not been in good health for several weeks. Recently he exposed himself boating on the Hudson, and congestion of the lungs developed. Phy-

THE STORY OF HENRY

Mechanic, Engineer, Mr. and Philanthropist

(Engineering Magazine)

The father of Henry Ford, although of English ancestry, was born in Ireland and bred a farmer. In 1847 he emigrated to America and began work on his own estate west of Detroit, Mich. In his 35th year he married. Six children were born to him. Before the untimely death of his mother at the early age of these six the eldest, Ford, born July 30, 1863, was a lad, unlike either parent, with a passion for mechanical construction.

Henry Ford's mind and hands were drawn to things mechanical while his father wished him to become a farmer, the result of which was that the boy decided that he was complete at the age of 16. He went against his father's command to Detroit, where he entered the Brothers' machine shop.

COSTELLO FOR POSTMASTER.

Mr Costello will be the 22d postmaster appointed to the local office. His tenure will doubtless depend upon the success of the democratic party in the future. Mr Hyde, who will relinquish the duties of the office, has served as postmaster for four terms. A perusal of the record shows that the only other man to hold the office for an equal number of terms was Daniel Lombard. Mr Lombard was first appointed by President Thomas Jefferson and received subsequent appointments from Presidents Madison, Monroe and John Quincy Adams.

10 HOW CUPID ENTICED 'A NO. 1' FROM ROAD

MAY 2, 1914.

Wanderer Who Had Tramped Half Million Miles Surrenders to Pretty Girl.

HARTFORD POST-OFFICE.

Now a Sedate Citizen With Money Enough to Pay Income Tax.

A No. 1, the most noted tramp the world has ever known, who has visited Connecticut again and again, and, on his last visit, became the subject of a federal warrant because somebody—he denied it was he—printed his famous monaker on the Hartford post-office building, is no longer A No. 1, the rambler. He is A No. 1, benedict and solid citizen of Erie, Penn., where he has settled down to prosperity and the companionship of a charming wife. Last year it was reported from one end of the country to the other that he had been killed on a Texas railroad, but, similar to a report of the kind in Mark Twain's case, that was a huge exaggeration.

Instead, the dreams that never could come true were even then in a fair way to become realities and to-day this incorrigible king of hoboes, who for thirty years tramped five continents and traced his sturdy monaker in every quarter of the globe which he has girdled seven times, pays an income tax and sits by his own fireside o' nights.

Ended are the aimless days of the brake beam and the blind baggage and of the distant past the lure of the side-door Pullman. In his heart of hearts the wanderlust has been replaced by the love of woman and these bright spring days the broad highway calls in vain. The work of turning the footsteps of wayward boys back toward threshold which they never thought to cross again and to the warmth of a mother's love which has given him such distinction goes on through the medium of his books.

A Victory for Cupid.

Cupid's is the victory over the instinct to be ever moving and the story of love's regeneration a romantic one. Time and again the world wanderer has endeavored to locate and stay, but without success. With the exception of the burial plot at Cambridge Springs, Penn., where he before he Meriden Wednesday and in N ain on the same day. If he of the state before the federa get him it is a question who hoped to be laid to rest at last, no spot on earth was dearer to him than another. The little blind god one day sped a swift shaft unerringly toward its goal and in a twinkling the wanderings of this restless nomad were at an end and A No. 1, who has traveled more than half a million miles on less than eight dollars, was to gypsy no longer.

It is three years and more since the cold and stormy winter's night when the renowned hobo was routed from a boxcar in Erie, Penn., his lips blue and his teeth chattering. The rough but kindhearted car inspectors who had disturbed him noted his condition and took him to their shanty to warm himself at their fire. Their chief even shared with the rover the good home cooking in his dinner pail.

He Didn't Forget.

"I shall not forget this," said A No. 1 as he left them. "You will see me again some day." Last fall they did—or, at least their chief did—when A No. 1, since grown prosperous through the sale of his books, made his way to Erie and looked up the railroad man, whose name is Trohoski. He took a present to show his appreciation of the latter's kindness and his erstwhile host invited the hobo to sit at the family table at supper that night and partake of the Trohoski fare in a more comfortable manner.

A No. 1 accepted and in that changed the whole course of his life. For in the Trohoski household was the charming girl who was to be the one woman in the world for him, Miss Mary Abigail Trohoski, the pretty 20-year-old daughter of the railroad man, a graduate of the Erie high school and a musician of promise.

Love at First Sight.

One may scoff at love at first sight, but such a one has never had the experience of an A No. 1. Next day the greatest of all rovers was that no longer, his footsteps chained to Erie by a force which he had never before encountered. No longer the open road beckoned, and vanished was the zest of vagabond freedom. A No. 1 was in love.

Nor were Miss Trohoski's dreams that night free of this strange Great-heart who must ever wander up and down the earth to save others from the same fate. His kindnesses to the boys could but win her good will while the dangers he had come through and the adventures which had tried his spirit fired her imagination.

No Weakling.

A No. 1 is no weakling and quick to follow his diagnosis of his affection was the decision to put his fate to the touch, win or lose. He won. Convinced of the manhood of her lover, furthermore, Miss Trohoski gave him a thoroughbred loyalty which resisted all efforts to shake her decision. For these were made. When their renting a flat let their secret be known every female relative she had fearfully besought her not to throw herself away on a common vagabond and for a time only her father supported her judgment.

Her fiancé silenced the outburst to an extent with an engagement ring for which Miss Trohoski had no need to blush, furnished the home they had chosen with $2,000 worth of mahogany furniture, $1,000 who has traveled 526,000 miles in thirty years on $7.61, which is my record, ought to be listened to as an authority when he says there's nothing in it.

Ran Away at 11 Years.

"I ran away from home in San Francisco when I was eleven and have never failed to regret it. Pride kept me away at first and later the old home wasn't there to go back to. For half a lifetime home to me has been wherever night overtook me. There's hardly a water tank or a dead wall in any corner of the globe where English is spoken—and many where it isn't—on which I haven't left my monaker.

"I got my name on the road. When I first started out as a road kid a much older hobo and myself made a hard trip together, and at the end of it he said to me, 'Kid, you're all right. You're A No. 1,' and the name stuck. My real name I've always kept a secret and the few friends who know it keep it to themselves. My monaker is a part of one of my two mottoes: 'Wherever you are and whoever you are and whatever you do—be A No. 1,' that's one, and the other is: 'Never associate with anyone with whom you wouldn't be willing to pass your parents on the street in broad daylight.'"

Always a Gentleman.

Cleanliness is also a cardinal principle with this remarkable man, who has been bobbing it for years in a $40 suit of clothes and with a gold watch in his pocket, wearing overalls and jumper on the road and doffing these at a convenient barber shop when he stopped off. In his pockets also have been carried tooth brush, comb, soap, shoe polish and polishing cloths and other toilet necessities which he could do with behind a boxcar when a barber shop didn't offer—and he has never been without a Webster's pocket dictionary.

Every railroad official in the country knows A No. 1, and more than one made his acquaintance when in a more humble position on his road. Often the famous hobo has done them favors, a score of times he has prevented wrecks and he has been in five himself without serious injury. Dozens of roads would gladly have carried the man on velvet had he wished. Since his marriage he has received scores of letters from high and low railroad circles congratulating him on his good fortune and wishing him well.

Autographs of Presidents.

A No. 1 has autograph letters expressing similar sentiments from President Wilson and ex-Presidents Taft and Roosevelt, as well as Admiral Dewey, Luther Burbank and Thomas A. Edison and others, and also from Jack London, with whom he has made several trips on the long trail.

His every quality making for success in this world, this strange man was driven to roam ceaselessly by the resistless impulse never yet explained until the light that lies in woman's eyes flashed on his pathway and the sudden transformation became a fact. Realizing to the full how barren was his existence, it selling high-grad

...cousins and aunts that A. No. 1 was a member of the chamber of commerce of Cambridge Springs and had a bank ac-envy.

Some of the Presents.

Among the wedding presents when they were married were loving cups from citizens of that place and also of Erie on which were engraved sentiments in recognition of the new made benedict's work among the boys he has met on the road. The couple deferred their wedding trip till the coming summer and then they will ride "on the velvet"—the first time that A. No. 1 has ever taken a protracted trip in this way—to San Francisco for the exposition.

Quit Road for Good.

"I have quit the road for good," says the former prince of tramps, "and am settled down to spend the rest of my days amid the comforts of home. With a wife like mine there could be no attraction in the hobo life; and there's nothing in it anyway. A million dollars wouldn't tempt me back to it, and I'm only sorry to discover at 42 how much of life I have missed. Ours was a love match, but Providence had a hand in it.

"I have had my mettle tried by many an experience, but none ever got to me as it did when I had proposed to my wife and didn't know what my answer was to be. I'd hate to go through it again."

"Oh, I don't think it was as bad as that. You had an idea what I'd say," interposed Mrs. A. No. 1.

"My dear, you're wrong. A man who has followed the road for thirty years takes nothing for granted, and the vision of heaven opening before me, who could never dream of such a thing, only with the possibility that the door would close in my face, was something to try the soul.

A Loyal Wife.

"My wife is a church member, however, and the fact that I don't smoke, drink or gamble had its effect on her decision. And how loyal she was to me when every woman busybody in Erie was doing her best to prevent her marrying a common vagabond! She knew I was no common hobo, that I have made some money with my books and am on my way to make more, but it took sheer nerve to stick it out in the face of almost unanimous disapproval.

Wedding of Suffrage Joan of Arc And Mr. Beach of West Hartford Occurs in July; Just Announced.

Guilford Girl, Daughter of Mrs. William H. H. Murray, and Thomas C. Beach Married in New York
—She Was in Winter Garden Company.

A wedding of wide interest, which came as a surprise to many friends of the couple, was made known today when Mrs. William Henry Harrison Murray of Guilford announced the marriage of her daughter, Miss Ethel Esther Murray, to Thomas Coffing Beach of West Hartford, younger son of Charles Edward Beach of Vine Hill farm, which took place at the city hall in New York, July 27, Magistrate Scully officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Beach are now in Florida, but are to live in Hartford. Although she had known of their engagement, Mrs. Murray said to-day their marriage was a surprise when she was informed of it a few days after it took place, no relatives of the couple having been present. The announcement was deferred until now because of the youth of her daughter, she said, who is not yet 21.

The bride's father, the late William H. H. Murray, who died in 1904, was widely known as an author and clergyman, and his writing on the Adirondacks gave him the sobriquet of "Adirondack" Murray. He was a native of Guilford, and his family live at the old Murray homestead in that town. W. H. H. Murray was graduated from Yale in 1862 and was pastor of churches in Greenwich, Meriden and Boston. He delivered lectures in various cities, and his books, which included "Camp Life in the Adirondacks," "Music Hall Sermons," and "Adiron-

Seldom has a parade of any character in Hartford attracted a greater number of spectators than did that of the Connecticut Woman Suffrage association on Saturday. There were thousands of people on the sidewalks all along the line of march. The novelty of the affair and the fine weather contributed to bring out this great crowd. The neighborhood of the capitol was thronged with interested onlookers and when the procession had passed that point many of these hurried across the park to Main street and helped swell the crowd in waiting there.

Mrs. Hepburn Sends Letter to Chief Garrett J. Farrell.

The following letter has been received by the police department:

Chief Garrett J. Farrell, Chief of Police, Hartford, Conn.

Dear Sir: In the name of the Connecticut Woman Suffrage association I take pleasure in expressing to you our appreciation of the work done by the police force of the city of Hartford during the votes for women parade, on Saturday, May 2d.

The great crowds that lined the two and a half miles of the line of march were quiet and respectful and were kept in perfect order by your men. No parade could be handled more efficiently and, although I have marched in many of the suffrage parades that have been held in this country, I have never seen one handled as efficiently.

Yours very truly,

Mr. Ford entered the hotel to learn the business in 1883, when it was managed by W. D. Garrison, one of the best-known hotel men of his day. At one of his after-dinner speeches Mr. Ford described the occasion.

"Mr. Garrison looked me over," he said, "and took in the details of my Gothic style of architecture, and then added: 'Nature has not been very lavish with you, Mr. Ford, in the matter of fleshly charms, but she was evidently intended you for some purpose.'"

Mr. Ford said yesterday that he believed he was the oldest employee. Both of the proprietors have had hobbies, and they have given the benefit of them to their patrons. Mr. Ford collects old New York prints, and the corridors and walls of the lunch-rooms are covered with them. Mr. Shaw inclines to high art, oils, water colors, and those masterpieces by the artists known as the "Fakirs." The hotel has at times been facetiously called "the Academy for the study of the ruffles."

Sixty-three years ago today Albert Butler Pitkin and Martha J. Lyman were married in Manchester. Mr. and Mrs. Pitkin, now living at No. 422

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Pitkin of No. 41 Whitney street celebrated yesterday the sixty-seventh anniversary of their marriage. No special observance of the event was held, owing to the long illness of Mr. Pitkin. Flowers, tokens of remembrance, letters and postcards were received from friends.

ESDAY, MAY 4, 1921.
 They will go about their accustomed daily tasks and if their friends want to congratulate them on their remarkable record they will receive the congratulations and wish their congratulators good luck and a long life.

Mr. and Mrs. Pitkin were married by Rev. Frederick Perkins, pastor of the Center Congregational Church in Manchester. The greatest known freshet of the Connecticut River was then in progress and the high water spoiled the wedding trip plans, so the couple had to go by team to Somers, take a train for Springfield, and then go to New York from Springfield instead of from Hartford, as planned.

Mr. Pitkin was born in East Hartford, April 11, 1833, a son of John Owen Pitkin and Lucy (Morrow) Pitkin. The family moved to Hartford seven years later, and he attended the Stone School on Market street, the North School at Ann and High streets and the high school when it was in its first home at the corner of Asylum and Ann streets.

Mr. Pitkin came from a well known family. His first American ancestor was William Pitkin, who settled in East Hartford in 1659. He was an attorney general for the Connecticut colony at one time and was later treasurer of the colony. He and Mrs. Pitkin will do so and extend sincere congratulations to the worthy couple and express the earnest wish that they may celebrate many more wedding anniversaries. The real anniversary comes on Sunday, but chosen for the suitable and a

Alfred Butler Pitkin of No. 41 Whitney street, is observing the eighty-fifth anniversary of his birth to-day. Mr. Pitkin is one of three living graduates of the Hartford High school class of 1848. The other two are James W. Hale and Theodore Lyman.

Mr. Pitkin told of his earlier school days, previous to the erection of the high school. He attended the old North school, a two-story building erected at the junction of High and Ann streets in 1817. When he went to this school in the 40's the population of the city was less than 15,000. The city limits then extended only as far north as the tunnel, south to Jefferson street and west to about the junction of Park and Washington streets.

The year 1847, Mr. Pitkin said, witnessed a notable revolution in educational matters in Hartford, for the public high school was established. A site on the northwest corner of Asylum and Ann streets was finally decided upon as a good location. The school was built, a three-story affair, fifty feet fronting on Asylum street and seventy-five feet on Ann street. There were few conveniences. There was no system of drainage or city water. There was a large well of water near the front of the building and each cloak room was equipped with an old-

Business in Manchester.

In 1849 Mr. Pitkin went to Manchester Green and became a clerk in the store of Keeney & Woodoughized and in 1850 he went to Mansfield and took charge of the store of the Merrow Manufacturing company. In 1853, after a trip to the west, Mr. Pitkin returned to Manchester and bought the store of Keeney & Woodbridge, in connection with Milton Keeney. In 1857

An occasion of much pleasure was the informal reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Butler Pitkin in observance of the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage, Monday afternoon. The apartments of Mr. and Mrs. Butler at the Highland Court hotel were beautifully decorated with roses, carnations, tulips and other flowers, the gifts of relatives and friends. Especially noticeable was a vase of sixty carnations and a vase of sixty roses. Flowers were sent from Pittsfield, Mass. Several of the gifts of flowers were in fancy baskets, tied with ribbons. All of the immediate relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Pitkin were present, the youngest being a great grandson, Robert Needham Ferry, of New Britain, 10 months old. Two Years, But is Happy and

She d Aug 15, 1914,
NATIVE OF GLASTONBURY.

Grandma Smith, who has been at the Hartford hospital a little over two years, is 99 years old to-day. BRISTOL, Tuesday, May 5.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Iraenus Bradshaw will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary today. From 3 to 5 o'clock this afternoon they will receive their neighbors at their home, No. 19 Prospect street and tonight from 7 to 10 o'clock they will receive friends. Guests will be here from Meriden, New Britain and Hartford.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw were married May 5, 1864, in New Britain at the home of the bride, 17 years old, by Rev. C. H. Bond, pastor of the Baptist Church there. There are two persons living today who were present at the wedding then and they are Miss Mary Allen of New Britain and Mrs. Thomas Vensale of Meriden. Both of them expect to be here today.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw lived in New Britain a few years after their marriage and then came to Bristol, where they have spent the rest of their married life. The couple have lived for thirty-five years in Prospect street.

Mr. Bradshaw was born sixty-seven years ago in West street, Bristol, and is the son of Charles Bradshaw. He attended the schools of the town and at the age of 17 years went to New Britain to learn the trade of a needle maker in a factory long since out of existence. The year following, at the age of 18 years, he was married, and the union has proved to be happy. He returned with his young bride to his native town. He has worked in the movement departments of the E. Ingraham Company, the E. N. Welch Clock Company and is at present employed at the Sessions Clock Company in Forestville. He has long been a member of Ethan Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and also of Franklin Lodge, A. F. & A. M. He has never held public office, though efforts have been made to try and have him accept an office which he didn't care for. Mrs. Bradshaw was born in Nottingham, Eng., sixty-six years ago, the daughter of Solomon Smith. At the age of 10 years she came to this country and was adopted by her aunt, Mrs. Henry Wright, of New Britain, with whom she lived at the time of her marriage. Since coming to the United States she has made ten trips back to England to visit her relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw have four children, three daughters and a son, as follows: Charles E. Bradshaw of Waterbury, Miss Belle C. Bradshaw, Mrs. William Bryce and Miss Ruth I. Bradshaw, all of Bristol. The daughters are interested in the Bradshaw millinery store in Main street.

In 1898 the Sage-Allen building (the very commodious quarters at first tallest in Hartford at that time) was erected.

MRS. SUMNER'S GIFT TO MORGAN MEMORIAL.

Mary 9.1914
Court Suit Worn by Her Ancestor, Metcalf Bowles to Continental Congress in 1774.

EXQUISITE BIT OF WORK.

Mrs. Frank C. Sumner presented to the Morgan memorial, this morning, a unique and beautiful French court suit, worn by Metcalfe Bowles of Newport, R. I., when congress first assembled at Philadelphia in 1774. He was commissioned to carry to congress the message that Rhode Island would join the union forming the thirteen original states. He was descended from Roger Williams, the recognized founder of the colony, and his ancestry is traced to Hugh Capet, of France, A. D. 987. He built and occupied the house used during the Revolution by Rochambeau, which became the headquarters of Washington in 1781, and still stands at Newport. Mrs. Frank C. (Mary Catlin) Sumner, who presented the suit, is his great-great-granddaughter.

Exquisite.

The costume is a wonderfully exquisite piece of embroidery and sewing. It is in three pieces and is unique, not only for its wonderful state of preservation, but because such handsome costumes belonging to notable American men are very rare. It is made of finely corded silk, almost a poplin weave, in a delicate shade of grayish cream, and adorned with extremely beautiful embroidery in silk of the same color, in a pomegranate design. The long, full skirted coat fastens up to the neck with about twenty buttons, each embroidered, and has lavish embroidery on the front, skirts, back and cuffs.

The latter are very wide and flaring. There are two pockets with fanciful flaps and with buttons below for ornament. The inside of the pockets are lined with white silk and it seems probable that the entire garment was originally lined in the same way, but that it has been since ripped out, as a sort of flannel now remains inside. The coat appears a trifle incomplete as the lace frills which originally finished the neck and cuffs are missing.

Waistcoat and "Smalls."

To wear under this handsome garment there is a waistcoat, hardly less elaborate. This too is long and has much embroidery on the front and two pockets, and smaller embroidered buttons as fastenings. The under coat has long sleeves also, with a bit of embroidery on the cuffs, and is silk lined. There is a pair of small straps at the neck.

The third part of the suit is what was called "the smalls" or "small clothes" and this original ancestor of the modern trousers deserved its title. These of Metcalfe Bowles were plain and extremely short.

From the proportions of the suit it can be imagined that Mr. Bowles was a short and stout gentleman.

The "smalls" have two pockets placed horizontally and fastening securely. Narrow straps are provided to fasten at the knee. This costume was probably completed by white silk stockings, shoes with large buckles and a three-cornered hat and the splendid and impressive figure which the wearer made can be easily visualized. The workmanship on the costume is delicate and fine. Not a stitch is visible and the embroidery, although in the same color, is shaded and arranged beautifully. When one considers that every stitch was made by hand and with needles far from as fine as are obtainable nowadays, the work in this suit may be realized.

Mrs. Bowles' Gown.

There is also on exhibition a breadth of the gown worn by his wife, Ann Fairchild Bowles, who accompanied him to Philadelphia, and a slipper and ornament that matches. The dress material is a sky blue French brocade with a woven design and also a pattern of flowers, much resembling the "futurist" designs of to-day, in crimson, rose, yellow and green. Imitation jewels of blue glass and rhinestones which were worn with it and a tiny slipper of blue satin, very short and high, with a narrow high French heel and straps which crossed in front, completed the examples of Mrs. Bowles' costume.

Their daughter, Ann Maria Bowles, married John Lippitt of Newport, who fought in the Revolution. The court costume was shown at the great sanitary fair in Chicago in 1862 and at the time of the Chicago fire it was preserved by being cast into Lincoln park with other household goods. Frank B. Gay says nothing like it exists in Connecticut and it is wonderful, rare and valuable. At present it is shown in a flat case in the memorial.

AT THE ATHENEUM.

The remarkable gift made yesterday to the Wadsworth Athenaeum by Mrs. Frank C. Sumner is described elsewhere. In brief it is the unique suit which was worn by her ancestor, Metcalfe Bowles when he bore to congress at Philadelphia the formal announcement that Rhode Island would join the union of thirteen states. It is assumed that the Athenaeum trustees will eventually prepare a lay figure to wear and thus fully exhibit the wonderful outfit with its marvelous embroidery and other attractions.

Mrs. Sumner's gift is another illustration of the growing interest of the community in the Wadsworth Athenaeum, to which Mr. Morgan has made such a splendid addition. Our people are coming more and more to realize that at the are center which the Athenaeum affords belong the choice things which have general and public interest. The gifts increase each year and the attendance is steadily increasing. It is interesting to see how many visitors attend on Sundays during the three hours of the afternoon, when it is thrown open.

There is a continuous stream of people and they are by no means all visitors who come to see if the paintings and other exhibits are equal to their own. They come from those who have not of their own and come to see what others have given. The good influences of such an institution cannot be measured.

Hartford gave a luncheon of twelve covers on Wednesday at the Hartford Golf Club in honor of Miss Ruth Stanley of New Britain who was married to Harry Milton Bates on Saturday. The table was prettily decorated with pink sweetpeas and the favors were bunches of the same flowers. The luncheon was followed by bridge. Those present were Mrs. C. W. Griswold of Rochester, N. Y., Mrs. William H. Booth, Miss Flora Humphrey, Miss Frances Whittelsey, Miss Helen Clapp, Miss Dorothy Pease and Miss Ruth Stanley all of New Britain; Mrs. Harrie Hart and Mrs. George E. Kohn of this city, Miss Elizabeth Bassett of Enfield and Miss Nan Webster of Colchester.

NEW BRITAIN, Saturday, May 9.

New Britain and Hartford society people are interested in the marriage of Miss Ruth L. Stanley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Stanley, to Henry Milton Bates of Hartford, which takes place this evening at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride, No. 272 West Main street. The bride will be given away by her father, and the Episcopal ring service will be used. The best man will be Albert W. Bates of New York, brother of the bridegroom, and the ushers Kenneth Adams and A. H. Merrill of Hartford. Mrs. Clarence W. Griswold of Rochester, N. Y., formerly of this city, will be matron of honor, and Miss Elizabeth F. Hubbard of West Hartford will be maid of honor. Beeman & Hatch's Orchestra of Hartford will play the wedding march. A reception will follow. The young people will leave on an extended wedding trip and will reside at No. 80 Russell street upon their return. They will be at home after October 1. Mr. Bates is with the firm of Thomas E. Perkins, the Hartford broker.

Miss Stanley is the daughter of Treasurer C. B. Stanley of the Stanley Rule & Level Company.

This announcement was issued at the White House by Secretary Tumulty tonight, after a day of speculation in capital official and society circles over the prospects for another White House wedding in June.

Mr. McAdoo is fifty years old, while Miss Wilson is twenty-four. He is a widower and has six children, one son and one daughter being married. Recently a son was born to his eldest son in Arizona. When his second son, Francis H. McAdoo, was married, last spring, President Wilson and his family motored to Baltimore to attend the wedding.

Mr. McAdoo, who is the builder of the Hudson tunnels, knew the Wilson family before his entry into the cabinet and has been an intimate friend of the president since early in the pre-convention campaign.

Miss Wilson was educated in the private schools at Princeton, N. J., and during the last few years has been making frequent trips to Philadelphia to an art school where she painted.

The Next White House Bride and Groom

Miss Eleanor Wilson, the president's daughter, and her fiancé, William Gibbs McAdoo. It is said that the wedding will take place some time in June, and that Miss Nona McAdoo, the future step-daughter of the present Miss Wilson, will act as bridesmaid. The bride-to-be admits that she loves weddings with fuss and feathers and intends to have one of that kind.

UNUSUAL CHANCE GIVEN TO M'ADOO.

First Holder in U. S. History of Two Such Important Offices.
New York Consensus Also Favors Appointment of Secretary.

BY HOLLAND. 1918

New York, January 1.—"Success is the criterion," was the only comment which a man whose opinion is upon matters of national importance often sought and usually heeded permitted himself to make two days after announcement came from Washington that the president had taken over the American railroad and that the secretary of the treasury, Mr. McAdoo, is to stand in preme authority under the president over the roads. It was evident from the manner in which this man spoke that he is already inclined to believe that Secretary McAdoo will be successful so far as it is possible for no one man to be in the administration of this new and stupendous power. If he should be successful no one could tell what the future of Secretary McAdoo as a public citizen may be. Certainly there is no record since the establishment of the government which tells of the reposing in a man of the responsibility of wise administration of the treasury department while at the same time he is the exclusive directing force in another executive and administrative work. Some cabinet officers have served well in one department and later served even better in another. Secretary McAdoo is to serve at the same time in what are to be substantially two great departments, the government's administration, the treasury and the railroads.

Since the announcement by proclamation that the president had taken over the railroads and also the statement that Secretary McAdoo is to be exclusive administrator of them, sufficient time has passed for those who are experienced in great affairs to reach a judgment respecting the action. It should be reported that on the whole in this city this judgment is in cordial approval of the president's action and for the most part in equally cordial approval of the selection of Mr. McAdoo as exclusive head of the American railroads until such time as they are returned to their respective private ownerships, if they ever are.

Mr. McAdoo's Qualification.

Secretary McAdoo has one especially strong qualification for administering both the treasury department and the American railroads at the same time. His is a master mind for organization. This is a quality which was not generally recognized when Mr. McAdoo became secretary of the treasury.

The Bridal Procession Enters.

The guests, relatives and close friends of the two families were grouped in a semicircle. There was a hush as the clergyman entered slowly from the main corridor and ascended the little altar, with its predieu covered with white satin, in the south bay window of the blue room. The marine band struck up the wedding march. Miss Sallie McAdoo, 10-years-old daughter of the secretary, led the procession as a flower girl followed by Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, sister of the bride and matron of honor, and Miss Margaret Wilson, eldest daughter of the president, maid of honor. Miss Nany Lane, 12, another flower girl, daughter of Secretary Lane of the interior department, directly preceded was recognized and acknowledged by the president. These who were associated with Mr. T. Grayman, who met the Washington, Aug. 7.

WILLIAM GIBBS MCADOO for President! Not yet quite that, to be sure, or even an avowed candidate, but in the opinion of Washington so near a candidate that if war were not absorbing popular attention McAdoo boomers would already be recognizable figures in the political world. A candidate for the Presidency, the experts allow, never starts out with an avowal. He starts with symptoms. Mr. McAdoo, according alike to friend and foe, has symptoms oozing from every pore.

It is observed by the gossipers that Mr. McAdoo has been uncommonly active in keeping before the public eye of late. To many of them his speaking tours of the country in behalf of the Liberty Loan took on at times the aspects of a personal campaign. Most politicians in Washington have already begun to figure on the basis that the war is going to bring out a new factor in national politics three years hence in the form of the "soldier vote," and there are those who go so far as to sense an appreciation of this factor in Mr. McAdoo's extremely earnest advocacy of the plan of Government insurance for those who go into the Army and Navy.

The press printed long before Mr. McAdoo became active in behalf of this insurance proposal a digest of a similar proposition prepared by Edwin F. Sweet, Assistant Secretary of Commerce. Since Mr. McAdoo took a hand in the movement friends of Mr. Sweet have not hesitated to charge Mr. McAdoo with having appropriated Mr. Sweet's ideas. As this charge, however, has nothing to do per se with Mr. McAdoo's reported candidacy, it is interesting merely as showing that Mr. McAdoo will by no means have all the politicians in Washington pulling for him. Quite the contrary.

The gown is white. It has braided straps of gabardine over the shoulders, with 12 rows of braid over belt of blue gabardine. There is a white organdie vestee and collar edge with a rose and green flowered narrow ribbon, fastened in front by three ribbon buttons. There are long blue sleeves over white chiffon ending in a wide cuff of 16 rows of narrow black braid.

The short skirt is of gabardine with three circular flounces starting at sides of skirt. These are fastened at back with a strap of gabardine attached to which are four small black silk tassels. Between the flounces, corbeau charmeuse, to which they are attached, showing about one inch of charmeuse between each flounce. Flounces and bottom of skirt are edged with black silk braid.

Rare Chinese Samarkand Rug Woven 200 Years Ago—Good Luck Symbols.

The wedding gifts received by Miss Eleanor Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, who was married on the 7th to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, were enriched by the receipt of a rare old Chinese Samarkand rug, sent with the good wishes of a group of friends from Princeton university.

The Princeton friends of Miss Wilson were particularly fortunate in their choice of a wedding gift, for the Persian women, who over 200 years ago wove the rug, put into it not only the colors but also the symbols of everlasting happiness. The selection of this beautiful rug was due to the expert assistance of S. Kent Costikyan, who has traveled extensively in the Orient and who has made a special study of all things oriental. The rug was woven in Samarkand, which means "The mirror of the world," and from whence all beautiful things are supposed to come. Its colors are rose, emblem of happiness in Persia; blue, for the repose that comes from all things celestial, and gold, symbol of nobility to the Chinese. Most Samarkand rugs are half Persian and half Chinese. The rug chosen is more than half Chinese.

In the center of the rug is a Swastika fret and floral medallion, and this emblem of luck is repeated on the golden background of the border. The central medallion is in dark blue, light blue, rose, and dull gold. Surrounding it are circles of happiness made up of rings of rose, gold, and old ivory. The ground of the rug is a shimmering one of deep blue. The Swastika design of the border is in blues and tan. The center border is rose, bearing conventionalized cloud forms in blue and ivory. Separating this border from the field is a narrow rose band, on which is a golden meander line. The meander typifies that which is everlasting. Combined with rose, it stands for everlasting

Washington, May 6.—The White House tonight was the scene of a family reunion and the gathering of close friends who are here for the wedding tomorrow of Miss Eleanor Randolph Wilson, youngest daughter of the President, and Mrs. Wilson, to Secretary McAdoo.

The wedding party rehearsed the ceremony today. Miss Wilson's six girl chums who would have been her bridesmaids had the wedding been an elaborate one, were guests at the White House tonight. They are Miss Helen Hunter of Portsmouth, Va.; Miss Henrietta Stadelman of Wilmington, Del.; Miss Marjorie Brown of Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Susan Fine and Miss Elizabeth Duffield of Princeton, N. J., and Mrs. Charles Kellogg of Athens, Pa. After dinner the young folks went to the theater.

White House Bride At Harlakenden For Honeymoon

Cornish, N. H., May 8.—William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, and his bride, who was Miss Eleanor R. Wilson, daughter of the President, arrived today to spend their honeymoon at Harlakenden, the summer White House. They had come by train as far as West Deerfield, Mass., where they were met by an automobile. Part of the journey along the banks of the Connecticut River to Cornish was made with the bride on the front seat giving the chauffeur road directions and with Mr. McAdoo sitting alone behind.

Three servants preceded them here by only three hours, and the great house which had not been occupied since last fall, had barely been opened when the couple entered its doors.

LARGE FORTUNES IN GIFTS SENT TO WHITE HOUSE BRIDES.

QUANTITIES OF SILVERWARE AND OTHER THINGS WHICH CANNOT EVER BE USED—WHAT MISS ELEANOR WILSON MAY EXPECT.

It was not until the marriage of Nellie Grant, in May, 1874, that foreign governments and potentates adopted the practice of sending wedding gifts to White House brides.

Even the Sultan of Turkey on that occasion made a handsome contribution, and the total value of the presents received were stated at $100,000. Alice Roosevelt's gifts were estimated at a total value of two times that amount.

When Maria Monroe, in March, 1820, married her cousin, Samuel Laurence Gouverneur, at the White House, she was only 16 years of age—the youngest bride whose nuptials were ever celebrated in that historic mansion. The king of France sent her a splendid piece of tapestry—thus establishing a precedent which has been followed ever since by the French government.

Thus Mrs. Cleveland, when she was married, received a piece of tapestry from the government of France, as a token of that nation's good will toward the United States. A gift of tapestry was sent to Miss Jessie Wilson, when she became a bride, and her sister Eleanor will doubtless be the recipient of another. The present of tapestry bestowed by the French republic upon Alice Roosevelt was a superb specimen of Gobelin, worth not less than $25,000.

Mr. Cleveland let it be known that he would rather that foreign governments and potentates did not make contributions of the kind on the occasion of his marriage, and consequently there were very few such. When Frances Folsom became a bride, in June, 1886, the wives of the cabinet officers gave her jewels and silver, and from the groom she received a very handsome most costly and beautiful gift of all was from the republic of Cuba—a string of perfectly matched pearls, with a diamond clasp, bought in Paris, and valued at $25,000.

It may be said, indeed, that a White House bride, even if she has no other dowry, begins married life with a considerable fortune in the shape of wedding presents. If she be driven to dispose of them by sale, they will fetch enough at any time to keep her and her husband handsomely for the rest of their lives. Alice Roosevelt on the occasion of her marriage received twelve chests of silver, ten sets of fancy dishes, two complete sets of cut glass, twelve Oriental rugs, and twenty-five clocks were a few among other contributions.

The trouble is to know what to do with all these things. There is literally an embarrassment of riches. How is a married lady going to make profitable use of twelve chests of silver? She cannot do it. Most of the presents bestowed upon young Mrs. Longworth are now in storage, having never been taken out of the cases which originally contained them.

It has never been customary in the past for the house of representatives as a body to buy wedding presents for a president's daughter. This was done for the first time in the case of Miss Jessie Wilson some months ago. Likewise it was with the senate and supreme court. But, the precedent having been thus set, it is likely to be followed in future, and every young woman married at the White House may expect something handsome from the senate and contributions of value from the house and the justices of the high tribunal.

A reasonable objection to wedding gifts from foreign governments and potentates is that they cannot in

M'ADOO TO SETTLE IN LOS ANGELES

Shingle. 1922

New York, March 1.—(By the Associated Press).—William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury under President Wilson announced tonight that Friday he will leave New York; his home since 1892, and settle in Los Angeles, Cal.

His son, Francis H. McAdoo, will succeed him as a member of the New York law firm, McAdoo, Cotton & Franklin, of which he was senior member.

Asked whether he meant to retire from the practice of law, Mr. McAdoo said:—

"I'm simply going to Los Angeles to make my home because Mrs. McAdoo and I like the climate and the country" he said. "I expect to hang out my shingle and practice law."

It is in answer to "the call of the wild" that he will go west, Mr. McAdoo confessed—"the great open spaces where one can ride and climb and swim whenever the heart desires—and still keep on with the business of life."

Just a few minutes before the press conference, Mr. McAdoo had called in his treasury advisers and began the news to them.

Mr. McAdoo explained to the correspondents that he had "absolutely no other reasons" than those specified in his letter for the retirement. He said he realized many varied reasons usually accompanied the resignation of an official, but he emphasized that he had no motive or purpose except those mentioned.

He said he hated to "quit the job" just at this time and disliked personally to disassociate himself officially from the president, but added that necessities of providing a living for his wife forced him to do so.

Jealous—Sargent Nuptials

May 9, 1914
One of the prettiest weddings in Leicester for may a day was that of Lionel Frederick Jealous of Vassalboro, Vt., to Miss Evelyn Sargent, daughter of Mrs. Henry Edward Sargent, at 6:30 p. m. Saturday.

About two hundred invitations were sent out for the affair and over a hundred guests were present. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Louis V. Wilson of the American Unitarian association of Boston, an old friend of the family, who was pastor of the Leicester Unitarian church over thirty years ago. The double ring service was used.

Chaffin's orchestra of Worcester, directed by Frank Chaffin, played the wedding march from Lohengrin and other wedding music during the ceremony and reception.

The maid of honor was Miss Mar-roommate of Miss Sargent's at the Mc-

The Sargent residence was handsomely decorated for the affair by Midgley, a Worcester florist. There were mounds of white sweet peas and ferns on the mantels and bookcases of the east parlor and in the west parlor or library, where the ceremony was performed, palms and spirea predominated in the decorations. These were massed in one corner where stood the bridal party. The bookcases in the library were also adorned with mounds of white sweet peas and ferns. The dining room was decorated with Richmond roses and these flowers with feathering ferns formed a center piece for the table. The front veranda was decorated artistically with bay trees, fir trees and rubber plants. Zahonyi of Worcester catered for the affair.

The going-away gown of the bride was of modish green radium silk. She wore for a hat a Watteau model of mustard straw garlanded with cubist roses. The wedding trip was to New York City and other places, after which the young couple will live in Waterville, Me., where the groom is owner of a large lumber business.

The wedding gifts displayed a very elegant collection of silver, cut glass, china, works of art, checks for goodly sums of money and many other articles, showing the popularity of the young couple. The gift of the groom to the bride was a string of exquisite gold beads and the gift of the bride

Charles F. Lewis Retires From Ownership of Historic Grist Mill.

Today will mark the retiring from business of one of Windsor's oldest and most prominent business men, Charles F. Lewis. Yesterday he sold to his son, Charles T. Lewis, his feed and grist mill, which he has conducted here for the past thirty-six years. On May 23, he will be 76 years old, having been born in Chester, May 23, 1838.

In 1878, he took charge of the mill in this place, which occupied the oldest mill site in Connecticut, having been started by John Warrenton, one of the early settlers of Windsor. Mr. Lewis first took charge of the mill in 1878. He conducted it under a partnership with his brother-in-law, George Lewis, and it was conducted under the name of Lewis & Hastings until 1881, when the latter retired. Lewis bought out his partner and conducted the mill himself. In 1888 he remodeled the mill and installed new machinery.

He was instrumental in the formation of the Windsor Business Men's Association, which has come to be a prominent organization in Windsor. In the first few years of its existence, it took an important part in the life of the town. Lewis is a veteran of the Civil War, having been a member of the Thirtieth Company, Heavy Artillery, Massachusetts Volunteers. The new owner of the mill, Charles T. Lewis, is at present town treasurer of Windsor, having been the successful republican candidate for the office at the last town election. For the present he will conduct the mill the same as it has been conducted in the past.

with a fellow patron, questions a waiter about your food orders and even follows you to your room. I heard several agents giving a chambermaid the third degree in the hall outside my room two minutes after I came in. I passed down the stairway and walked through a line of them, bumped into them on the turning and put my hand on one who was leaning over the banister.

"I went to Esteva Ruiz, the foreign minister, for relief. It was a futile visit. Ruiz is a striking example of the kind of man Huerta is putting in power now. He is undersized, blond, ladylike, of the weak male type and lisps. He could tell me very little because he is allowed to know very little. He thought that as long as I confined my cables to messages for a morning newspaper I was safe; he only thought so. I left him and went to the Brazilian minister, who advised me to get out of the country. I attempted to send a cable to the 'Sun' but the company would not accept it.

"Finally I besought the aid of an army officer, who was very distant until I employed a method familiar to those who desire to stand in well with waiters, whereupon he relaxed enough to say to me that it would be well for me not to disregard any warning I received in Mexico. He cited the case of the head of 'El Buen Tono' Tobacco Company in Mexico, a popular and powerful man. He received a polite warning at 8 o'clock in the evening and he was out of the city by 7 o'clock the next morning.

"I bought a ticket for the 7 o'clock train for Puebla at once and left the hotel at 4 o'clock in the morning, giving a direction to the taxi driver in a loud voice to take me to the station. This was changed en route and I got to another station, where I bought a ticket for Vera Cruz, paying $4 more than the scheduled price to keep the ticket agent from remembering that he had sold it to me.

Camera and Money Taken.

"I hid in a Pullman car with an Englishman, who was getting out after having been arrested twice. All went fine until we reached Cordoba. There we were visited by a detail of soldiers heavily armed. I handed them a French passport and they withdrew. They returned shortly afterward and announced they had proof I had taken photographs of the fortifications. They wanted the camera, films and everything else I had. They finally compromised with me, taking the camera and films and my money, but left me the lens. After that they permitted me to go on with the train.

"When the train reached Soledad there was a reception of a different nature. A weird looking individual entered the car and greeted me as a long lost brother. He was a local newspaper man and said he had heard of me and had seen my picture in Mexico City papers. He insisted that I call on the military commandant, Colonel Soure, which I did. The colonel was most affable, and to show his hospitality took me out on the plaza, where he compelled the military band to give a concert. I am a little sorry for that colonel. He had not been informed of my fall from grace and he may suffer for it.

"Correspondents are not safe in the interior of Mexico now. Salvador Diaz Miron, owner of El Imparcial, the government organ at Mexico City, told me last week that in retaliation for the occupation of Vera Cruz Americans would be held as hostages. They would be well treated, but would be made to pay for the war."

Will Assume Duties As Water Board President.

Walter S. Garde, who was confirmed as president of the water board at the last session of the court of common council, returned to Hartford yesterday afternoon from his trip with the Shriners to Atlanta, Ga., and this morning he will take up his duties as president of the commission. Mr. Garde said yesterday that he would be at his desk during the day and that the first thing he intended to do was to familiarize himself with the department work.

"I have only one object," said Mr. Garde, "and that is to run the department on the best business basis, believing that, in so doing, I shall best be serving the interests of the city. If I find, upon thorough investigation, that the present system is the best that can be devised I shall make no changes. I only desire to do what is right by the city, by myself, and by the mayor who appointed me."

"I suppose," said Mr. Garde, "that I shall find the business a good deal different from the hotel business, in which I have lived all my life. But, then, I imagine that it will be a pleasant change. I am intending to devote all of my time to the place, and have so arranged my outside interests that I can do so. It will be a relief to take up another line of work for a while, and I am going to try to give the city the very best that is in me."

Hotel Man by Birth.

Mr. Garde might be said to have been born a hotel man, for he was born in a hotel in Meriden, of which his father, the late William H. Garde, was the manager, and has always, until his retirement a year ago, lived in hotels. He early began hotel work and, during odd times and vacations, while in school, assisted his father, and his mother, who was also actively identified with the hotel projects of her husband. Mr. Garde attended the schools in Meriden, the Southington High School, the Clinton Liberal Institute, a military academy at Fort Plain, N. Y., the Hopkins Grammar School in New Haven, and the Yale Law School.

Making 'Em Feel at Home.

Since leaving school he has devoted himself to his hotel interests and he worked with his father to give the hotels he was connected with that touch of personal interest so necessary to a homelike atmosphere in a hotel. "I don't care how grouchy the man is, or how amiable," said Mr. Garde, "they all like to be remembered and have a pleasant word said to them. From the start I have tried to make the patrons of our hotels feel at home, and a large number of them I know personally. Only on this last trip to Atlanta I ran across a number of people who have stopped with me at the Garde in Hartford and in New Haven and it was a distinct pleasure to meet

Work in Hartford.

Mr. Garde came to Hartford in 1905 and May 23, 1906, the Garde at the corner of Asylum and High streets was opened. Mr. Garde said the hotel had given him some of the pleasantest and yet saddest memories in his life. It was here that his father and brother died, and it was

New Haven Interests.

Besides his hotel interests in this city, Mr. Garde, with his mother, Mrs. P. Davis Oakey, is the owner of the Garde in New Haven, recently re-modeled and sub-leased, and the Hotel Volk also in New Haven. Mr. Garde is a believer in outdoor life, is an enthusiastic automobilist, and a lover of travel. Only recently he was planning a trip to Europe, with a view to visiting some of the baths, but on

THE WATER BOARD PRESIDENT.

President Walter S. Garde of the water board will, beginning today, assume the duties and responsibilities of that office, which is today more important than ever before owing to the large Nepaug undertaking. The work requires nothing less than the full time and attention of a capable energetic, executive manager. To Mr. Garde has come the opportunity to serve the city and we have the confident belief that he is just the man for the place. He has executive ability, he is a shrewd business man taught in the best of schools—that of experience—and he appreciates that he is up against a full-grown man's job. The interview with him, printed elsewhere this morning, shows that he is sensible of the situation and will give the best service at his command. We look to see him make a conspicuous success of the work

NINETY-TWO YEARS OF "MAKING GOOD."

"Uncle" Horace Johnson of Middle Haddam, on Birthday, Reviews Past.

WEATHER PROPHET FORESAW BLIZZARD

Scientific Studies and Prediction Which Brought Him Fame.

Died Jan 19, 1917
Middletown, May 13.—Horace Johnson of Middle Haddam can span a period of 92 years to-day, his birthday—back to May 13, 1824, when there was no telephone, no telegraph, no anaesthetic and no great cities. People lived moderately then, and knew comparatively little about the people and countries removed from them. During the years that have elapsed since Horace Johnson was born, in the fine old house where he now makes his home, the world has progressed tremendously, till the men and women of to-day find themselves living in an era of unusual intenseness and unrest. But during all the years of progress and remarkable development since 1824, Mr. Johnson has kept up with the general advance—but always a little ahead of the procession.

Let the young men of to-day hear how Horace Johnson started his career as a clerk in the general store of John G. Smith, at Middle Haddam, at a salary of $30 a year. He slept in the store on a shelf under the counter, and was up with the sun to start his day's work by trimming forty oil lamps before breakfast. At the end of the year he was in debt to his employer to the extent of $3.60, which caused the young man to reply, when his employer asked him if he would stay another year:

"I must stay awhile to work myself out of your debt."
"You have served well," said Mr. Smith. "I will balance the account."

Thus was Horace Johnson, the munificence of his employer. It was several years later that he went to Hartford and entered the employ of Lieutenant-Governor Catlin at a salary of $150 a year. At the end of seven years his salary had been raised to $500 a year. The increase is somewhat easier to understand in view of a conversation which Mr. Johnson could not help hearing one day, in which Mr. Catlin remarked that he had one clerk who earned his salary before breakfast the young man to apply himself more diligently.

With the money he had now saved Mr. Johnson made his first speculation; and he chose needles. He made enough out of it to buy a house. Little by little he accumulated a modest capital and broadened out in the real estate business, owning finally seventeen houses in Hartford. The young man who had early learned how to be so useful to his employer that he was able to make his salary before breakfast was coming on the world.

When the Civil war commenced he was able to buy a steamboat, which was big enough to make coast line voyages to the southern states. This vessel had the distinction later of serving General William T. Sherman as a dispatch boat. In the troubled days that followed Mr. Johnson traveled considerably and was able to lay the foundation of that practical education which has served him so well in the years that followed. Upon one occasion Mr. Johnson was the only civilian on a train with President Abraham Lincoln.

But this unusual man has many sides. It is not strange, then, that the man who was ever making a dollar, putting through a good deal, buying up a derelict and disposing of it as a floating palace, studying his fellows, traveling about the country, should be found delving into science; and that he should discover an anaesthetic—before Horace Wells, he claims—and should have been ready to have given to a wondering world all the essential features of the modern telegraph, even before the science was made known. And yet, Mr. Johnson claims these discoveries and some others.

But it is as a weather prophet that Horace Johnson is best known. His prediction of the blizzard in 1888, brought him renown, and after that he added many laurels. His predictions are based upon the science of meteorology, and are carefully deduced.

Mr. Johnson is in good health for a man of his years. Only this week he journeyed into this city, and had his picture taken for THE TIMES, the first photograph he has had since he was 75 years old.

AT FULL SPEED

THROUGH THE FOG.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Towne of No. 610 Farmington avenue, Mr.
Towne's mother, Mrs. Isabella Towne, and the maid, arrived home Tuesday afternoon from a trip to Europe that was filled with incidents and furnished several exciting Ate Griddle Cakes.

Griddle cakes were the food that the Townes and other passengers subsisted on for the last three days of the ship's run. The Cedric had been provisioned for a seven days' voyage, and was out twelve days.
The stop at Halifax did not replenish the larder as the Maure-tania which arrived there before the Cedric, pretty well cleaned out the available provision supply and also obtained about all the railway train service to the states. The captain and officers of the Cedric were fine to the passengers, say Mr. and Mrs. Towne, and did what they could for their comfort under the circumstances.

Sailing in May for Italy, the Towne party disembarked at Naples and their unusual experience began right there. They left Naples on the last train to Rome, June 5, just before the tieup of rail transportation by a big trolley strike. An incident to make the trip memorable was the holdup of their driver on the forty-five mile carriage ride from Sorrento where they were suddenly stopped by an apparent highwayman. It developed that the belligerent one in the road nourished some old grudge against the Italian driver and proposed to settle it right there. The carriage party secured other accommodations for the completion of their ride.

Trouble in Ireland.

The travel sights of Switzerland,
Germany and the British Isles were thoroughly enjoyed by the party, but the members were supplied with more excitement in Ireland. They were in Dublin the Sunday of the riot in which the Scotch troopers and the populace took part. England's Scottish soldiers were doing special duty in trying to detect smugglers, and in making a capture of a supposed smuggler's boat, the soldiery took prisoner what was apparently a woman, but which turned out to be a man. Circumstances of the arrest aroused great numbers of the inhabitants of the city and a mob stoned the troops. The riot surged in the streets, and up to the veranda of the hotel where the Townes were stopping. The soldiers retaliated on the mob and beat them over the head with bayonets and finally, as the melee grew fiercer, the soldiers charged, killing three of the citizens.

SERVED IN CO. B, 20TH REG'T.

Enlisted in 20th Regiment.

As a soldier his record is notable.
When Company B, Twentieth Regiment, Connecticut Volunteers, was formed in Derby at a meeting on July 22, 1862, he was one of the first to volunteer.

The company was mustered into the state's service with one hundred and six names on the roster, eighty-four being from Derby, and on August 12, 1862, under command of Captain S. E. Chaffee, left for New Haven and was encamped at Oyster Point. On September 8, 1862, the company was mustered into the service of the United States for three years or during the war. The company received its baptism of fire at Chancellorsville in January, 1863; was in the battle of Gettysburg, taking part in all but the last of the three days of fighting, and was captured by Colonel Moseby's cavalry.
Mr. Hubbard has a most cordial autograph letter written to him by Col.
Moseby years after the battle.

Mr. Hubbard was in the battles at Cemetery Ridge, Culp's Hill and Little Round Top. He served with the Army of the Potomac and of the Cumberland and Tennessee, and with General W. T. Sherman marched through Georgia and
"From Atlanta to the Sea," covering one hundred and fifty miles in one hundred and fifty-one days, with constant fighting. He also participated in the battle of Peach Tree Creek under General "Fighting" Joe Hooker. After the battle, General John Newton, the commanding officer of the Fourth corps, sent an officer over to inquire the name of the regiment next to him on his right, and bade him say that this,
the Twentieth Connecticut, was deserving of great praise, saying that he never before saw a regiment advance with such steadiness in the face of so fierce a fire as did that regiment on that occasion. The last fight was near Bentonville, N. C., from whence the company was ordered home, marching through Goldsboro, N. C. At Raleigh, N. C., orders were received to proceed to Washington. Richmond, Va., was reached on May 11, and at Washington the company took part in the grand review in June.

Mustered Out.

On June 13, 1865, the company was mustered out and left for home June 18, 1865. Mr. Hubbard attended the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg, when he revisited the scenes of his service.
While always in the thick of the fight, he received no wounds, although he experienced some narrow escapes.

Mr. Hubbard kept a diary during the war, and has several interesting souvenirs, which he showed to visitors to-day, including over a hundred dollars of Confederate money, which he picked up during the famous march through Georgia of the rifles.

Almost insuperable obstacles have stood, in the opinion of practiced observers, in the way of evolving a state out of Albania. The race is divided into three large factions by adherence to the Mohammedan, Catholic and orthodox religions, and there is a further tribal and clannish subdivision, with the blood feud in full force, and little power of cohesion in a language

In 1836 he married Margaret White and after her death he again married, his second bride being Miss Mary Hubbard. He lived in Yalesville for a short period and when he returned to Meriden he was employed at the Charles Parker company and the Edward Miller company. At the latter factory he labored for a period of twenty-eight years, being employed in the annealing department. He retired from active labors the year after the blizzard of 1888. Mr. Atwater's mother lived to be 94 years of age.

WILLIAM G. ATWATER.

Sprightly.

Mr. Atwater "waked on the morning of his hundredth year" to pursue his usual duties in the usual way. He called his family together for the morning devotions which he has conducted for about eighty years with hardly the loss of a day. He read the Bible himself and offered a prayer. He met all the callers without apparent weariness, and then walked into the yard, where he was repeatedly photographed. He has been a member of the Baptist church for over eighty years, most of the time of the First church, Meriden. The Rev. B. N. Timble, his present pastor, and the Rev. William G. Fennell, a former pastor, met there at just the time when most relatives and friends were present, and conducted a short devotional service into which Mr. Atwater entered with evident joy.

The Family.

Mr. Atwater was born in Cheshire, or near Meriden. His first wife was Marietta White, who died sixty years ago. His second wife was Mary Hubbard, who died thirteen years ago. He has a son, George Atwater of New Jersey, and a daughter, Miss Ellen Atwater, who has hardly left her father in twenty years, giving him a true devotion and wonderful care. There was another daughter, Mrs. G. F. Snow, who died some years ago.

William G. Atwater of Meriden will celebrate his 100th birthday anniversary today. He is from a long lived family, his mother living to be 95.

The marriage of J. Herbert Steane and Alice Curtis Mott took place at the home of the bride, No. 61 Imlay street, last evening at 6:30 o'clock, Rev. William G. Fennell officiating. Owing to the recent bereavements in the bride's family, none but immediate relatives were present.

Meriden seems to be quite a healthy place to live in, judging from the number of centenarians who have passed much of their existence here. One of them, William G. Atwater, will celebrate his 102d birthday on May 22. His health has not been such the past few years as to permit of leaving his home on Gravel street and recently he has suffered an illness which threatened to end critically, but he is now on the road to recovery. His birthday is celebrated in a quiet manner but it is always made a matter of moment by the local press. Meriden does not claim Mr. Atwater as a native but he has lived nearly 90 years of his life here. When one considers that Mr. Atwater was born on May 22, 1814, just two years after the war of 1812, the great length of his life is appreciated. He was born in Cheshire and when a young man went to Hartford and attended school near the corner of Main and Talcott streets. Solomon Phelps was the teacher. Since coming to Meriden in 1831 Mr. Atwater has been a farmer except for the twenty-eight years he worked in the Edward Miller & Co. factory. He is a strongly religious man and has been a member of the First Baptist Church since 1834. During his active days he showed commendable thrift and accumulated enough money to keep him through his prolonged old age. Among his rules of longevity is total abstinence from the use of liquor and tobacco. He eats only plain wholesome food and is careful to secure plenty of sleep. Throughout his old age he has been tenderly cared for by his daughter, Ellen. His eyesight is still good and he reads the newspapers regularly. As an example of plain living, native thrift and religious convictions, Mr. Atwater could well invite imitation from the younger generation. All his life long he has been a staunch democrat, voting for every democratic nominee for president since his majority.

has been engaged entirely in administrative work, and has handled the key but little. Asked by a reporter from "The Courant" yesterday whether he had forgotten the code by not having made use of it for so many years, Mr. Ryder replied, "I have not forgotten it a bit. I could do a better day's work at the key now than I ever did when I was an operator."

Spent Early Life in Massachusetts.

Mr. Ryder was born in Rochester, Mass., March 25, 1849. In February, 1862, when 13 years old, he was employed as errand boy and clerk of the depot restaurant, at Tremont, Mass., the junction of the Cape Cod and Fairhaven branch railroads. While here he learned the telegraph business.

In September, 1880, he was agent on Western Union's entire character and telegraphed the books of the builders.

In November, 1880, when the shops were closed, Mr. Ryder turned telegraph business and was appointed agent on Western Union telegraph.

Remained in the office of Charles F. Ryder until the company was transferred to the telegraph company. He remained in the telegraph company until the company was transferred to the telegraph company.

Business.

Mr. Ryder and took over the company's business. He had been in the telegraph office at that time for five years.

The telegraph company now has twelve telegraph operators, five women telephone operators, eight women clerks and one woman cashier.

Third in New England.

Under the management of Mr. Ryder, the business of the company has more than doubled in receipts and Hartford now ranks third in New England in the number of messages sent. Only three or four of the men who were with the company in Hartford when Mr. Ryder took charge are still in the employ of the company. More than 50,000 messages are sent from the Hartford office each month, and over 300 messages are dictated over the phone each day.

The resignation of Mr. Ryder takes effect June 1. He plans to take a rest for the summer, but has no definite plans as to his course afterward. With Mrs. Ryder, he will go to Quincy, Mass., early in June to visit his son, Dr. George H. Ryder, who is a physician and has offices both in Quincy and Boston. The Ryders will spend July in a summer camp in Maine, and the first of August they will join their son at a camp in the woods of New Hampshire.

Mr. and Mrs. Ryder have one daughter, Mrs. William H. Witter, who lives with them at No. 71 Pearl street, where they have lived ever since coming to Hartford.

The day was propitious for a glad gathering of Colonial Dames and members of the Society of Colonial Wars in Connecticut, members of several local historical societies and invited guests, at East Lyme, yesterday afternoon, to celebrate the purchase of the old Thomas Lee House for its restoration and preservation. The

THE OLD HOUSE AT EAST LYME.

Having given in yesterday's paper a brief account of the notable gathering at East Lyme on Wednesday afternoon, we now present a further and fuller account of the ancient building there, known as "The Thomas Lee House," in whose precincts the Wednesday afternoon party as celebrate the accomplishment for its preservation. We account from the excellent read on that occasion by M. E. Bush, president of the Historical Society, in which the building rests.

Thomas Lee, a man of godly character and large left England for Saybrook died on shipboard, leaving of his family and fortune friend, Matthew Griswold. Thomas Lee, 2nd., took up fertile fields of the Bride-Brook and there, according to experts about 1660, built the east end of this ancient house, adding in some time later, in 1713 the house was remade to face about from north, looking to the new from Lyme to New London additions were then made, the interior has never been much since the days of the second Lee. This building, the timber structure now standing in Connecticut, is a most interesting historical monument. When its builder arrived at Saybrook, a lad of 7 years, he was as near the times of Columbus as we are to those of Washington. While he was growing to manhood the Long Parliament was sitting in England, and the Puritan Revolution was sweeping that country. When this building was in progress the commonwealth was drawing to its close and the restoration of the monarchy under Charles II. was accomplished. This house has been subject to seven English sovereigns and under every form of government known in our land. Its builder was a member of the Legislature in 1676, constable when Sir Edmund Andross was governor of New England, and a justice of the peace, the old east room being his judgment hall. It was an old house when Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown, and it still sheltered members of its original family when General Lee sur-

It was deeply felt by many conversant with these facts that a house coeval with 250 years of American history, should not be dismantled nor left to further dilapidation and decay, but should be properly restored and religiously preserved. In order to do this, the property must needs first be purchased. How could a small and poor society, like the Historical Society of East Lyme, acquire such a property and carry out such a patriotic, praiseworthy, but expensive enterprise? This problem was finally solved by the generous co-operation and contributions of three patriotic societies—the Colonial Dames and Colonial Wars of Connecticut, and the society for the preservation of New England antiquities. By these societies the purchase

Essex, June 3.

Amid a wealth of floral decorations and in the presence of 250 or more guests, Miss Ruth Enid Dickinson and Louis Merritt Brooks were married at the home of the bride in this town, Tuesday evening. It was the most elaborate wedding which the village has seen in years, both the bride and groom being prominent socially and the family names on each side representing large business interests known the country over. The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Dickinson, and the groom is the eld-every wing and cornice. The broad verandas sheltered a profusion of palms and ferns and vines. Within, the house was a veritable bower of green and white, the prevailing color scheme.

Particularly attractive was the parlor, where the ceremony was performed. Smilax, asparagus ferns, maidenhair fern and palms were everywhere with white snapdragons peeping forth here and there. Under a lattice-work pergola, backed by a great mirror from floor to ceiling, the whole bearing a wealth of decoration, the bride and groom plighted their troth. Leading to this, the length of the long double room, were white chiffon ribbons with satin bands, forming an aisle for the bridal party.

Library and dining room and hall were similarly decorated, bows of white chiffon ribbon being brought into prominence by the green background. The stair rail was wound with asparagus fern and smilax. The dining table centerpiece was a huge bouquet of white sweet peas.

The Gowns.

The bride's gown was of ivory white satin, trimmed with duchess lace, and tulle Catherine de Medici collar. It bore a court train of white satin caught with pearl ornaments at the shoulders. A tulle veil extended the whole length of the train, caught at the head with a band of orange blossoms and with the same flowers at the waist. At the bottom it was fastened to the train by aeroplane tulle bow. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids.

The semi-hostesses were in white evening dress and wore corsage bouquets of purple orchids, and lilies of the valley and maidenhair ferns.

Mrs. Dickinson, mother of the bride, was gowned in white satin with crystal trimming and emerald green chiffon. The mother of the groom, Mrs. Brooks, wore white satin with silver trimming and lavender chiffon. Both carried double Killarney white roses.

Diamond Cross for Bride.

The groom's gift to his bride was a large cross of diamonds set in platinum attached to a golden chain. To the ushers he gave walking sticks. The gifts to the semi-hostesses from the bride were unique. Each received a tulle neckband caught with a pin of white enamel and pearls on gold, and each pin was in a white satin bag made from material from the bride's dress and tied with tulle and orange blossoms.

The bride received a great number of wedding presents, one large room being devoted to them. They included gold coin, a silver set, a set of crystal, a gold-banded dinner set, house and table linen, separate silver pieces and others.

Reception and Supper.

A reception and wedding supper followed the ceremony. The supper was served by a Hartford caterer, and a small army of servants was sent down for the purpose.

To each guest was given a box of soap, Is Carried.

Mr. Brooks has already purchased land not far from the home of his parents and his place of business and will erect a handsome house upon it when he and his bride return from the continent.

Beautiful Home of Leonard D. Fisk, Bloomfield Avenue

The question was propounded to the real estate man the other day, "Are there ever any of Hartford's show-places on the market?" At that time he could not answer. After a visit to W. A. Sanborn's office yesterday afternoon, however, he can reply in the affirmative and point to the beautiful residence of Leonard D. Fisk on Bloomfield avenue as a shining example of the fact. Mr. Fisk has decided to sell his home and has selected Mr. Sanborn as the agent through whom he will dispose of his property, a beautiful place with everything there a person could desire. There are ten acres of land with a pretty pond and a stream adding natural beauty. The house was designed for Mr. Fisk to permit of every comfort and convenience, there being probably eighteen rooms in the house. A garage provides for three cars. Everything about the estate has been well kept up and Mr. Sanborn does not expect the property to be on his hands very long.

The reception given by Mr. and Mrs. George G. Williams of Farmington and Miss Mary Crosby Dimmick of Scranton at the Williams home, "Overdale," Tuesday afternoon, was one of the most beautiful events of the year. The handsome house and grounds formed an ideal setting, masses of pink and white peonies and other summer flowers against the dark house, colorful trees and shrubs, and masses of flowers of the magnificence of blue hills, unnecessary. The reception was called during the afternoon and received in the living room and dining room and dance, and the canvas covered the lawn, with orchestra. To introduce Dimmick, daughter of Jamlin Dimmick and niece of Dimmick has Westover, and girls were at and Mrs. Williams received Mrs. Ansel G. Dunham, Miss Julia H. W. Page, Mr. Miss Mabel I. Stearns and Williams. A nun assisted, including Miss Katherine C. Brewster.

Cyrus H. Brown, Westerly, R. I., Graduate of C. L. I. in Class of '51.

Miss Mary Case, daughter of Judge and Mrs. William S. Case, was the only Hartford debutante of early summer and was introduced at an informal reception given by her mother Wednesday at her home on Highland street. The reception was kept suitably simple. The guests were received in the living room, which was decorated with cut flowers, most of them bouquets sent to the debutante. Early summer blossoms were used in the other rooms and several hundred guests called during the hours from 4 to 7 o'clock. Miss Case wore a simple white dress and carried various flowers during the afternoon. Assisting in receiving and pouring were Mrs. Thomas Brownell Chapman, Mrs. Russell Lee Jones, Mrs. John Henry Rose, Mrs. Flavel Sweeten Luther, Mrs. Edward King Root, Mrs. James W. Bradin, Mrs. Charles N. Gregory, Mrs. Gerald W. Hart, Mrs. Hiram Percy Maxim, Miss Gertrude E. Baker, Miss Emily M. Brace and Miss Genevieve Stark of New London. Miss Case was also assisted by a number of the recent debutantes and some who will be introduced next season. These included Miss Marion Middlebrook, Miss Priscilla Chapman, Miss Margaret and Miss Irene Thompson, Miss Marion Down, Miss Ruby Tuttle, Miss Margery Parker, Miss Mildred Corson and Miss Helen Walker. Mrs. Case entertained a small party at dinner at the Golf club for the band concert following the reception.

C. L. I. GRADUATE OF

THE CLASS OF 1851

Cyrus H. Brown of Westerly, R. I. Attends Commencement Exercises.

(Special to The Courant) 174
Suffield, June 7.

Probably the oldest graduate of the Connecticut Literary Institute is Cyrus H. Brown of Westerly, R. I., graduated in the class of 1851. He is attending the commencement exercises here this week.

Cyrus Henry Brown was born in North Stonington, November 24, 1829, the son of Cyrus W. and Elizabeth Stewart (Babcock) Brown. His early education was obtained in the schools of his native town and in private schools. From May, 1849 to July, 1851, he took a preparatory course for teaching at the Connecticut Literary Institute in Suffield, after the completion of which he taught for six years in the schools of Connecticut and Rhode Island. For one year he traveled in Louisiana as a book agent—1853 to 1854—and he had a good opportunity for studying the country and the people.

Mr. Brown was married in Ashaway, R. I., March 23, 1858, to Sarah Catherine Maxson, whose ancestry is traced back to the first white child born on the Island of Rhode Island. Soon after his marriage he moved with his wife to Brighton, Mass., and followed the provision business in Boston and Brookline, Mass., until 1889. In 1897, in the summer, the family moved to their farm in Dover, Mass., but retained their home in Allston, Mass. In March of the same year, because of

The marriage of Miss Gwendolen Blodgett, daughter of the late Judge Blodgett of the supreme court of Rhode Island, to Fred Donald Carpenter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Carpenter of this city, was solemnized at the home of the bride's uncle, William E. Blodgett, in Woburn, Mass., yesterday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. B. Williams of Woburn, the wedding taking place on the lawn. The bride was attended by Miss Helen Edwards of Providence, R. I., while the best man was Clinton J. Backus of St. Paul, Minn., a graduate of Trinity College in the class of 1909, and a fraternity mate of the bridegroom. Mr. Backus was a well known Trinity quarterback in his day. The wedding was a quiet one, only the relatives and near friends being in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter left for New York, where they will sail on the Pretoria for Hamburg, and will spend the summer abroad.

The bride is a graduate of Pembroke College, in the class of 1910. The bridegroom was graduated from Trinity College in 1910. He was a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity at Trinity, and won a fellowship providing for a year's residence abroad. Mr. Carpenter has spent two years in study in Leipzig, but the past year has been a member of the faculty in the German department of the Sheffield Scientific School. Mr. Carpenter was a resident of Hartford for many years moving to this city about four years ago.

The first Springfield wedding of special importance in the month of June is that which took place Wednesday evening last week, when Miss Eleanor Bliss Southworth, daughter of the late Charles H. and Caroline Bliss Southworth, became the bride of Ralph Sherman Hopkins, eldest son of Dr. Frederick E. Hopkins. Although the guests attending the wedding included only the members of the immediate families and a few intimate friends, those bidden to the reception which followed took in a larger circle, plans for the wedding being accordingly simple, while the reception was made more elaborate. Both the young people have been popular in the younger set, having a large circle of friends and acquaintances throughout the city. For some time past Mr. Hopkins has made his headquarters in New York, but he has returned often to the city to take part in many social functions of interest. Miss Southworth, although educated away from Springfield, has made this her home city since the completion of a tour of Europe, and has joined in the social life of the city.

The hour appointed for the wedding on Wednesday evening, which took place in Miss Southworth's home on Mill street, was 7 o'clock, and the officiating clergymen were Rev. A. H. Bradford, formerly assistant pastor of the South Congregational church, and now holding a pastorate in Rutland, Vt., and Rev. Dr. Philip S. Moxom, pastor of the South church. Rev. Mr. Bradford is a close friend of both the bride and groom, and he came from Rutland Wednesday in order to officiate at the evening's ceremony. For her maid of honor Miss Southworth chose a classmate at Miss Spence's school in New York, Miss Martha MacNaughton of Calumet, Mich. The four bridesmaids chosen by the bride are all from this city and include Miss Geraldine Dutton, Miss Constance Fowler, Miss Catherine Chapin and Miss Frances Chapin. The younger brother of Mr. Hopkins, Fred S. Hopkins, served as best man, while the ushers included two local young men, Arthur L. Besse and Howard Lincoln, and three of Mr. Hopkins's classmates in Harvard, Chessman Kittredge and Kenneth Day of New York city and Harold Webber of Harvard.

The bridal gown was an exquisite creation of white satin brocade, made along simple, effective lines and having a long train. On the bodice were touches of point lace, while lace of similar design was also used in the cap from which the bridal veil of tulle fell softly over the gown, being fastened to the cap with orange blossoms and to the satin train also with orange blossoms. A dainty cluster of orange blossoms was worn on the corsage of the gown. The bride's bouquet was composed of lilies of the valley and orchids, combined with asparagus fern.

BIGELOW - WRISTON WEDDING June 6, 1914 WELL-KNOWN YOUNG PEOPLE

United at Home of the Bride on State Street, Springfield

The last of the large weddings of the first week in June took place last evening, when Miss Ruth Colton Bigelow, only daughter of Mr and Mrs William Dwight Bigelow, became the bride of Henry Merritt Wriston, son of Rev and Mrs H. L. Wriston of Somerville. The ceremony, which was performed in the home of the bride's parents on State street, took place at 6 o'clock in the presence of members of the two families and many intimate friends, those invited to the reception being also bidden to witness the ceremony.

The bride chose as her maid of honor Miss Mary Wright of Great Barrington, a college friend, while her bridesmaids included Miss Dorothy Menner of Honesdale, Pa., Miss Marjorie MacCoy of Philadelphia, Pa., Miss Lucy R. Mallary and Miss Eunice Avery, both of this city. Mr Wriston chose the brother of his bride, William Walter Bigelow, as his best man, and his ushers were chosen from among his brothers in Delta Tau Delta and included Henry Crane of Boston, Leonard Maynard and William Anderson of Plainfield, N. J., and Edward Miller of Madison, N. J.

The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of white crepe meteor, with trimmings of maltese lace, which was used upon the bodice and also draped upon the skirt. The bridal veil was of tulle, plaited to form a cap, and falling softly down upon the crepe meteor, the gown being made with a short pointed train, while the cap of tulle was held in place with a slender rope of pearls. The bride's bouquet was of lilies of the valley with a shower of the same flowers.

The gown of the maid of honor was of a pink crepe de chine with trimmings of lace ruffles. A delicate touch upon this gown was received from the girdle, cap and slippers, which were all of silver. The bouquet to match this gown was of white double marguerites and asparagus fern tied with white chiffon. The four bridesmaids were gowned in similar fashion, the gowns being of pink taffeta, with ruffles of figured chiffon. Their bouquets were all of pink sweet peas, tied with pink chiffon.

The bridal procession formed on the second floor, moving slowly down the stairs to the lower hall and from there through the parlor into the living room; first came the ushers, then the four bridesmaids, followed by the maid of honor, and lastly the bride, leaning upon the arm of her father. They were met at the chancel, which had been fitted up in the living-room by the groom, his best man and the ministers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Logan-Heppe.

The wedding of Miss Rae Ruth Heppe, daughter of Mrs. Katherine Heppe of Venice, Cal., and James Alexander Logan took place Wednesday evening at St. Augustine's Episcopal church, Santa Monica, Cal.

The bride is a graduate of the Hartford Public High school and the New Britain Normal college, and a sister of Miss A. Elizabeth Heppe, for several years principal's assistant of the Brown school in this city. Mr. Logan is an ensign in the United States navy.

Jacobs's orchestra played during the ceremony and during the reception, being stationed in the bay window of the dining-room.

The decorations throughout the house were carried out in a color scheme of pink and green. The bannister of the front staircase was heavily garlanded and twined with laurel, which was just showing the faintest and most delicate pink flowers in among the smooth green leaves. The chandelier in the hall was also garlanded with the laurel leaves. In the living-room the fireplace had been banked with green hemlock branches, while from the mantel to the ceiling was a wall of laurel, also with the pink blossoms just appearing among the green leaves. On the mantel itself were three baskets of lady slippers, still further carrying out the color scheme of pink and green. On either side of the altar-like arrangement palms were banked. The window in which the musicians were placed was also decorated with laurel. From the wide folding doors between the parlor and the living-room were hung baskets of flowers combined with green. In the bay window of the living-room were festoons of smilax, and a large basket of red roses.

A room upon the second floor was set apart for the wedding gifts which were both numerous and rare, and including costly oriental rugs, linen, silver and cut glass in great profusion, in addition to several pieces of fine mahogany. Mr and Mrs Wriston left last evening for a wedding trip, the destination of which was guarded as a secret from their friends. They will make their future home in Middletown, where Mr Wriston has received an appointment to the Wesleyan faculty.

Both Mr Wriston and his bride are well known in this city, having both been graduates of the central high school in the class of 1907. Mr Wriston's father was a member of the CUPID IN THE NAVY.

Young Lady Well Known in Hartford to Marry Lieut. Logan.

The following from the Los Angeles, California, Herald, refers to a young lady who formerly resided in Hartford while a pupil in the New Britain State Normal college:

With Cupid perched on a big black gun of the United States warship Cheyenne, a new thrill will be given to Venice and Los Angeles society tomorrow night with the naval announcement of an engagement which began a month ago on the same warship deck, and which grew from jesting to earnest through the perils of impending war.

Cupid's captives are Miss Ruth Heppe, beautiful and popular Venice girl, and First Lieutenant J. A. Logan of the Cheyenne, who, a month ago, startled local society by figuring in a mock marriage aboard the Cheyenne "just for fun," on Sunday afternoon.

At that time the young officer and pretty girl were practically strangers. Following the jest Miss Heppe flashed a wireless message to her mother, Mrs. Katherine Heppe, on shore, which read:

"Mother, dear, I was married this afternoon on board the Cheyenne. When I return I shall be Mrs. Logan."

The mother thought this incident merely a joke that was closed when the warship was ordered to Mexican waters almost immediately afterwards.

But the participants forgot the jest and became much in earnest and when war orders came the pretty bride of the mock wedding gave an earnest promise that when "her lieutenant" should return she would really become his bride.

The announcement will be made at a dinner to be given aboard the ship tomorrow night by Lieutenant Logan's fellow officers.

A naval wedding to be celebrated on June 10, will cap the romance in regal fashion. It will be preceded by a number of fashionable society events in honor of the young couple.

The wedding being a rather small affair, the fact that the invitations were limited to the relatives and intimate friends of bride and groom, being invited for both the ceremony and the reception which followed the marriage Thursday evening at 6 o'clock, the ceremony taking place in the large bay window of the Besse home. The bridal party advanced on the second floor, advancing across the broad stairway across the hall to the drawing-room, crossing the hall to the drawing, where Mr Burbank waited. An aisle through which the bride moved was formed by broad cushions which were carried by making an address on the same Rev Dr Philip S. Moxom, pastor of the South church, performed the ceremony during which time "Liebestraum" was played by Hatch's orchestra. The bride, which had previously given her wedding march, the bridegroom stationed on the porch.

IN BUSINESS STREET.

High School Girl, Book and Suit
Case Deposited Rudely in Display of Laces.

Springfield, Mass., June 10.—Miss Agnes Nichols of 67 Euclid avenue, a member of the central high school senior class, was propelled through a plate-glass window in the front of the Smith & Murray store by a rampant automobile yesterday afternoon, and came out of the crash unscathed. The unmanageable car was a touring machine in the hands of Charles Davis of No. 31 Elm street, West Springfield. With Mrs. Davis in the rear seat, he was driving south on Main street at 2:25 o'clock on the street car rails. In front of the Smith & Murray stores the front wheels wedged into the rail grooves, the rear end of the car skidded viciously toward the opposite side of the street, wrenching the front wheels loose.

Then the machine, traveling at a good clip, bore straight at the curb, where Miss Nichols stood with a suitcase in one hand and a school book in the other. She saw it coming, and backed toward the store front, but the car did not stop at the curb. Across the sidewalk it charged, sweeping up the high school girl, her book and her suitcase, and drove them all through the huge glass window, depositing them rudely in a carefully-arranged display of laces.

Miss Nichols climbed out of the wrecked window, shaking broken glass litter from her clothes, but suffering not a scratch, by a seeming miracle. She walked into the store, and was taken home a few minutes later.

A half-hour after the accident Miss Nichols answered a telephone

KERMIT ROOSEVELT TO WED MISS WILLARD

Ex-President's Son Engaged to Ambassador's Daughter. 1914

Richmond, Va., Jan. 3.—Personal letters received here from Madrid by friends of Ambassador Willard reported the engagement of the ambassador's daughter, Miss Belle Willard, to Kermit Roosevelt, son of Theodore Roosevelt. The wedding, it is said, will take place in the spring, probably here in Richmond, the home of the Willards.

Miss Willard, Kermit Roosevelt and his sister, now Mrs. Richard Derby, were guests of the Willards on a long motor trip through Virginia and ending at Hot Springs a little over a year ago. Miss Willard was one of the guests last winter at the wedding in New York of Ethel Roosevelt to Mr. Derby, but the romance between the Virginia girl and the bride's brother was not suspected.

New York, April 3.—Charles Weeks, town clerk of Oyster Bay, sent to Madrid yesterday the birth certificate of Kermit Roosevelt, required of resident foreigners by Spanish law before a marriage can be performed.

Kermit Roosevelt, at present with his father in South America, will upon his return, as announced some time ago, be married to Miss Belle Wyatt Willard, daughter of the ambassador to Spain.

Dear Mother and Father: I have not written for some time on account of having been continuously on the move. Since I last wrote I have been on the front line twice. To-day I am in one of the large American hospitals with Spanish influenza, having been brought from my dugout in an ambulance. I don't believe I am seriously ill, at the same time I have a temperature of 102 or more. I am receiving excellent care here and ought to be out on duty within a week.

The last time my battalion was in the trenches it received one of the most terrific mustard gas bombardments that any in the division had yet experienced. This mustard gas is certainly a work of the devil, for wherever it falls upon a man, directly from an explosion, it causes blisters and great irritation.

This is only a note to tell you where I am and I hope to be able to write more later. Love, Warren.

CROSSED GERMANY DURING THE WAR

George B. Thayer of West Hartford, who has acquired somewhat of a reputation as a globe trotter, returned from a nine months' trip Saturday evening after having covered 22,000 miles and having walked 1,500 miles alone over the Alps, in England, Scotentire trip out of the country to make by apother and longer pass. The trip through this country covered 500 miles of walking, on short rations. He received permission from the German consul at Lucerne in September to pass through Germany for Amsterdam, and with his passport, which was stamped with the designating mark "Good Gut," he experienced no difficulty in reaching Holland. When asked what the "Good Gut," signified he said it might have meant before his journey, or possibly at the present time a description of his physical qualifications, but it certainly did not at that time. It meant that the passport was good and both languages were used. Rates were obtained to South America from Amsterdam, and he here traveled "intermediate" at "first-class" prices. He landed at Buenos Aires. He expected to spend a few days there and go over the Andes to Chili, but the pass had been blocked for about four months by the extraordinary heavy storms, and unusual amount of snow, and he was detained in Buenos Aires weeks. Others had attempted the experience of one man instead of the donkey carrying he had literally to carry the times, and the price of the donkey was $18 at that. On September 15 the second train boarded and after two days he was in reaching the other Valparaiso. When at the top he was told that the train would remain over night, and that he desired to pay $5 could go for a distance, to a railroad put up, and that those who remain in the cars could Mr. Thayer remained; there e, and the passengers almost death. As was announced in "The Courant" some time ago Frank J. Achatz of Burnside stood the highest in the preliminary civil service examination for appointment to West Point Military Academy.

BURNSIDE BOY WINS WAY TO WEST POINT

Nominated By Lonergan After Taking Highest Rating In Tests.

Frank J. Achatz of Burnside has won the nomination as principal in the selection of a candidate to fill a vacancy from the First District existing in the United States Military Academy at West Point. This comes as a result of the report of the civil service commission, which examined the applicants, giving the highest grading in the tests to Frank Achatz, with John J. Reihan and Raymond Brinkman, both of Hartford, as first and second alternates.

The plan of examining the candidates was decided upon by Congressman Augustine Lonergan, when he saw that he would have the appointment to make. He announced that this course would be taken in order that the appointment might go to the best man. The tests were given at his own expense.

Young Achatz is only 19 years old, is a graduate of the East Hartford High School of 1912. He was a student at Trinity during the following year, and later went to the City College of New York to study law. He gave this up later, however, and hearing that there was a vacancy in the military academy, wrote to Congressman Lonergan, with the result that he took the preliminary examinations.

This is not all that he must do, however, before becoming a full-fledged "pleb" at the academy. He must go to Fort Banks, Washington, on March 31, and take the mental tests for entrance, given by the board of army officers. Later come the physical tests, given by the board of army surgeons. If he is successful in these, as he expects to be, he will be sworn into the academy on June 15, and im-
