Simsbury, June 3. Simsbury real estate has shown some activity within the last few years. This spring, among the more important sales has been that of the property formerly known as the W. W. Mr. Ensign contemplates the erection of a business block, in which there is the possibility that the quarters of the Simsbury Bank and Trust company might be located.

The C. A. Ensign place in Weatogue has been sold to Louis J. Kopper, of Hartford, who is a member of the Capitol City Lumber company. The house is a fine one, which has recently been remodelled, and is planning to make

A BIT OF HARTFORD FIFTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

PHOTOGRAPH WAS TAKEN IN 1860 OR PRIOR THERETO. ITS PROMINENT FEATURES ARE THE ALLYN HOUSE, UNITARIAN CHURCH TOWER AND THE SPIRE OF OLD ST. PATRICK'S.

On another day there was sent to me by a reader of the paper a photograph of which the printed above is as good a reproduction as the photo engraver is able to make. The photograph represents a view of a section of the center of Hartford as it appeared more than a half century ago. It is believed to have been taken by J. Bill, a member of the one-named Bill family of Lyme, in 1859, established a photographic gallery at No. 281 Main street, the corner of Pearl, in this city and in April, 1861, ceased to be a photographer by enlisting in the Connecticut volunteers under the call for troops. His effects were later sent to the old city and a few days ago this old photograph came to light when the finder happened to be rummaging about the attic.

The view is toward the northwest and was doubtless taken from the roof of the building in which Mr. Bill had his gallery, or studio, as such places are now designated. There were no skyscrapers in the Hartford of those days. The highest building in sight in the extreme background, is the Allyn House, the square section on the right being on Trumbull street and that on the left on Asylum street. The building on the extreme left, three windows of which are to be seen on the end is probably that on the southwest corner of Asylum and Trumbull, now occupied in part by Sedgwick & Casey and the Brunswick bowling alleys. The spire in the left distance is that of old St. Patrick's church, dedicated in 1851 and destroyed by fire on the night of January 23, 1875. The present church was dedicated in November, 1876.

The square tower on the right surmounted the First Unitarian church, which from 1845 to 1860 stood on the northeast corner of Trumbull and Asylum streets, opposite the Allyn House on the east. In the latter year it was sold and removed, stone by stone, to form a part of what is now Trinity Episcopal church on Sigourney street. The presence of the Unitarian church in this picture furnishes proof that the photograph was taken at least fifty-five years ago.

Probably some of the buildings in the foreground are still standing but it is difficult to locate them definitely. Trees were more numerous in the city's center then than they now are, as the picture shows.

Millions to Kin

Salem, Mass., August 11.—The will of Edward F. Searles, multi-millionaire of Methuen, filed for probate yesterday, contains no direct public bequests. A large part of the estate is bequeathed to Benjamin Allen Rowland, George Rodman Rowland and John Bruce Rowland, minor children of Mr. Searles's cousin, Mary Allan Rowland.

Pine lodge, the estate at Methuen, including the valuable art collection in the mansion there, goes to Benjamin, with provisions for its succession to his issue or to the two other children in order if he dies without issue. The will expresses the "earnest wish" that all three shall assume the family name of Searles and that if any of them do so they shall become entitled to a life estate in Pine lodge.

Trust funds are set aside amounting to $2,500,000 for Benjamin Rowland, $500,000 for George and $1,000,000 for their mother. The sum of $250,000 is left to Albert Victor Searles, a nephew, and there are many minor personal bequests.

Arthur T. Walker of New York, a friend, receives the residue of the estate. Mr. Walker and Lewis L. Delafield, also of New York, are named as executors and trustees. The value of the estate was not indicated.

Explosion at U. S. Capitol Causes Search for Writer of Note Favoring Peace

THIS REPRINT FROM A PICTURE OF THE CAPITOL WITH THE PARK HARTFORD AND NEW HAVEN

The picture above, a reproduction of an old engraving from Ballou's Pictorial Drawing Room Companion, published in Boston under date of April 14, 1855, shows the three buildings of Trinity college as they appeared in that year, standing on what is now Capitol hill, as seen from the Park river, called the "Little river," its earlier designation, in the Boston periodical's account. The buildings were the famous three, Seabury, Jarvis and Brownell halls, named after the first three Episcopal bishops of the diocese of Connecticut. The first named contained the chapel, cabinet and public purposes; the second, the study, and the third, the residence of the professors and students. The other two were used for the residence of the students. The engraving was made at a time when the college was in its infancy, and the buildings were much smaller than they are now.

Washington Police Search for One "R. Pearce" Who Warned Local Newspaper That Deed Would Be "Exclamation Point" to His Appeal—Senate Wing Reception Room Wrecked.

Washington, July 3.—The public reception room in the senate wing of the capitol of the United States was wrecked just before last midnight by an explosion, probably caused by a bomb or an infernal machine.

No one was injured, and to-day there was only one clue, a letter received by the Washington Times, an evening newspaper, bearing a postmark timed before the explosion, announcing that it would take place.

The letter although written June 1, was mailed last night at 10 o'clock, nearly two hours before the explosion. It was signed "R. Pearce," was typewritten, and indicated that the writer had been waiting some time for an opportunity to carry out his plan, which, he said, would be "the exclamation point to my appeal for peace."

The letter was at once turned over to the police. Only one man of that name is in the Washington city directory. A search for him was begun.

Abandon Early Theories.

Officials, at first inclined to believe the explosion was caused by spontaneous combustion or escaping gas, abandoned that line of investigation and proceeded on the theory that the explosion was planted by a crank, seeking to create a sensation, or some foreign sympathizer, seeking to register his disapproval of the policies of the United States government.

Professor Charles Monroe, expert on high explosives, from the federal bureau of mines, was called in and began an investigation with Superintendent Elliott Woods, of the capitol building, himself a scientist.

The control of the academic society, which has been in the hands of the students for many years, is one of the most important features of the college. The society is a body of students who are elected to office for a year. They are responsible for the maintenance of the college's standards and for the promotion of its interests. The society has a long and distinguished history, and its members are proud of their association with it.

A fragment of chloride of silver dry cell, such as is used in explosive apparatus, was found in the capitol grounds about one hundred feet directly north of the window in the senate reception room, where the explosion occurred. Professor Monroe made a minute examination, and stated that it might have been used to explode an infernal machine.

"It is entirely probable that this cell was thrown by the force of the explosion last night to the spot where it was found this morning," said Superintendent Woods. "The only theory I have of this affair is that it was perpetrated by some crank. I do not see how else there could have been any explosion."

Extent of Damage Done.

None of the force of employees of the capitol were on duty in the part of the building where the explosion occurred at the time, and no one was injured. Piles of shattered plaster from the frescoed ceiling and wall, broken crystals from the big chandelier pieces of the immense mirror, glass from the windows, and splintered wood work littered the floor to-day.

Glass was broken and part of the panelling smashed in the door opening from the reception hall into the lobby, running along the rear of the senate chamber. A heavy door opening into the vice-president's room, but which had not been opened for many years was blown partly open by the force of the concussion, and the door leading into the room of the sergeant-at-arms, on the opposite side from that of the vice-president, was damaged. The explosion was heard many blocks away, and guards in all parts of the capitol, and excited persons from some distance, came running to see what had happened. Watchman Jones, who was seated at the senate entrance door, almost immediately beneath the wrecked room, was almost lifted from his chair by the force of the explosion.

The explosion, which is one of the most serious in the history of the capitol, has caused a great deal of damage to the building. The senate wing, which is the most important part of the capitol, was almost completely destroyed. The damage was so extensive that the building was closed for several days. The explosion has also caused a great deal of damage to the surrounding area. The ground around the capitol was shaken, and many buildings in the neighborhood were damaged. The explosion has also caused a great deal of damage to the capitol's collection of art and other objects. Many of these objects were destroyed or damaged in the explosion. The damage to the capitol is a great loss to the nation, and it is hoped that the cause of the explosion will be discovered soon.

DOCTORS ARE RETICENT.

The exact location of the spots where the bullets went home when Mr. Morgan was shot, the gravity of his wounds and the seriousness of his condition, whether sufficient to cause convulsion or otherwise, were points which Mr. Morgan's doctors failed to clear up in their bulletins to the patient's progress.

Young Spencer Morgan, Mr. Morgan's son, was asked by newspapermen to make a statement on these features. It was pointed out to young Mr. Morgan that more than twelve hours had elapsed since his father had been shot and that rumors of serious import and conflicting nature had been published in the meantime and that the exact location of Mr. Morgan's wounds remained a matter that only the physicians and the members of the family knew. One of the rumors, which Mr. Morgan was told, was that Mr. Morgan had been shot in the stomach and that the bullet had penetrated the abdomen.

"I'll see what the doctors say," he replied. He returned a few minutes later and read the bulletin issued at 6:15, which stated that the bullets "did not involve any vital organ" and that Mr. Morgan's condition continued excellent.

"This is all the doctors care to say at the present," Mr. Morgan asserted.

"An earlier bulletin stated that Mr. Morgan was shot in the region of the hip," young Mr. Morgan was told. "It might be inferred from that bulletin that the shot entered the abdomen. The doctors care to set that question at rest?"

Mr. Morgan replied that the doctors did not care to say anything more than the contents of the latest bulletin. No more bulletins, he added, would be issued tonight.

WOUNDS IN HIP ONLY.

At 11 o'clock tonight it was definitely established that both bullets fired at Mr. Morgan had penetrated his hip and that neither had pierced the abdomen. The first shot struck the right hip and went through in a line almost horizontal, deflecting downward. The second shot struck near the groin and was deflected much more sharply downward. This shot came out of the upper Morgan & Co., was shot twice today at his country house here by Frank Holt, a native American, a former student and instructor at Cornell University, who was to have become the head of the department of French in the Southwestern University at Dallas, Texas, next fall.

Both shots took effect in the region of the hip. A bulletin issued by specialists at his bedside late today stated:

OPERATE ON J. P. MORGAN.

Holt was taken to the Morgan mansion at his country home on Long Island.

New York, October 29.—J. P. Morgan underwent an operation for appendicitis at his country home at Glencove, Long Island, to-day. The operation was reported successful and Mr. Morgan is resting comfortably in his home.

Mr. Morgan was at his office Wednesday, but was indisposed Thursday and remained at his Glencove home.

His physicians discovered he was suffering from a mild attack of appendicitis. In order to guard against a recurrence the physicians decided there was need for an operation.

The operation was performed at noon to-day by Drs. Markoe, Lyle

Butland Smith, who reported it to have been entirely successful in every way and that Mr. Morgan is now day after resting comfortably.

His general condition is so excellent that his prompt recovery is looked for.

The facts concerning the operation upon Mr. Morgan were contained in a statement given out to-day at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co.

So far as could be learned to-day's operation is in no way the result of the shooting of Mr. Morgan by Frank Holt at Glencove on July 3 last.

Mr. Morgan has been regularly at his office since early August. He has been very active in business during the last few months, especially in connection with the Anglo-French loan.

"Upstairs, Mr. Morgan upstairs," he shouted.

Alarmed by the shout, Mr. Morgan and his wife left the dining room by another door, entered a rear hallway and went upstairs. They found nothing amiss there and started back, using the front stairway. Unwittingly they walked almost into the assassin's arms. Mrs. Morgan saw him first, screamed and drew back.

Holt turned and fired twice before Mr. Morgan could seize him. Fiske, the butler, no longer menaced by the pistol, grabbed the assassin's right hand. Mr. Morgan, with two bullet wounds in his body, threw himself on his assailant and the three men went down in a struggling heap on the hallway floor.

British Ambassador There.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British ambassador to the United States, an overnight guest at the Morgan home, was with Mr. and Mrs. Morgan at the breakfast table when Holt entered the house.

The struggle on the floor was short. The pistol was torn from Holt's fingers and he was beaten by the butler and other servants, who came running at the sound of the shots, till he offered no further resistance. Then the Glencove police and a physician were summoned and Holt was placed in one of the Morgan automobiles and hurried at forty miles an hour to the jail here.

Wounded Financier Cool.

Mr. Morgan walked calmly and collectedly, feeling, he said, that he had been shot, but experiencing no sensation of weakness, up the stairs and went to the telephone. He called up the doctor and afterwards his office in New York and told the story of the shooting over the wire, asserting that he did not regard his wounds as serious. Then he went to his bed and lay down, awaiting the doctor.

While the doctor was hurrying to his bedside from Glencove, Mr. Morgan asked that the telephone be brought to him. Personally, he obtained long distance connection with Utica, N. Y., and, through the exchange, with his mother. He told her that she would hear reports that he had been shot, but that she was not to worry. Then he told, for the second time, of the attempt on his life, saying he did not regard the affair as serious.

Assailant at First Reticent.

Holt was locked in a cell in the jail here. To the dozens of questions which the police volleyed at him, he at first made no reply. For more than an hour he declined to tell his name or say anything about himself. Finally, he became talkative and told Justice of the Peace William E. Lyster that he had gone to see Mr. Morgan about ending the European war and that Mr. Morgan had not given him a chance to say anything. "I fired to scare him," Holt said. "They tell me I hit him. I hope he is not badly hurt."

Soon Holt decided that he would

The extent and nature of Mr. Morgan's injuries were not defined until nearly 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when specialists summoned from New York had completed their examination of him. In the meantime numerous conflicting reports were circulated as to the gravity of his wounds. One of these reports was that a bullet has struck Mr. Morgan in the abdomen.

J. P. MORGAN HEAD OF GREAT BANKING HOUSE

J. Pierpont Morgan, who succeeded as head of the house of J. P. Morgan & Co., on the death of his father, is 48 years old. Morgan and Charles Steele, his legal chief, have the heavy responsibilities of the house of Morgan.

Mr. Morgan is a native of New York city. His home for a long time has been practically at 229 Madison avenue, adjoining that of his late father. His training in the intricacies of banking has been long and thorough and for years before the death of the elder Morgan he was devoted to the heavy work of the great financial firm. At the time he succeeded his father he had already been practically in control of the firm's affairs, for as the elder Morgan devoted himself more and more to art, the younger man had assumed the responsibilities of the business.

Is Harvard Man.

He was graduated from Harvard in 1889 and soon after entered his father's office, where he began at the bottom, both as to pay and nature of employment. In 1901 he was sent to London, where he was connected for four years with the house of J. Spencer Morgan & Co. Toward the latter part of his stay there, especially after the death of one of the older partners, he had charge of the entire business of the London house. In 1903 he returned to this country and has ever since been devoted to the business of the firm.

Yachting His Delight.

He is a big man physically, weighing more than 200 pounds. From his youth he has been an athlete and although football, golf and riding have claimed his attention, his chief delight has been in yachting.

Besides holding office as president of J. P. Morgan & Co., he is director and leading figure in many corporations and particularly since the beginning of the European war he has become one of the dominating figures in international politics. Only a short time ago, when he returned from London, it was reported that he had completed arrangements for establishing in the United States gigantic war

REPLICA OF HIS FAMOUS FATHER.

Morgan's Son Strongly Resembles Late Financier in Face and Figure and Business Ability.

John Pierpont Morgan, on whose life an attempt was made to-day at Glen Cove, L. I., assumed control of his father's business interests immediately after the latter's death March 31, 1913, and had since largely directed the affairs of J. P. Morgan & Co. In facial appearance, bearing, build and forcible manner he greatly resembles his father. He possesses the same grave demeanor, prompt and forceful powers of decision, and contempt for trivial details. He is the only male descendant of the American captain of finance, but has three sisters, being married.

From his father he also inherits the qualities that make him a great financier. In 1890 he was married to Jane Norton Grew, and from that marriage have come four children: two sons and two daughters. His home in New York is at No. 1 Madison avenue, just across the street from his father's old home, and he also has a residence in London at No. 12 Grosvenor square. A beautiful country place is near Glen Cove, Long Island, where he was shot to-day, and was formerly known as East Island.

He is listed as a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., in London, and is a director of a large number of corporations.

Mr. Morgan is an enthusiastic yachtsman, as was his father, a member of the New York Yacht club. He is interested in lines of public service and philanthropic work and has been a member of the Peabody Donation fund in London, and a trustee of the New York Trade school.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Morgan have been active in the social life of New York and London.

Mr. Morgan is the son of John White's the City of London Yacht club. He is the owner of the Yacht, the University, Centurion, and Terminus. He is a member of the change, he does his securities seldom, if ever.

Mr. Morgan returned to his East Island estate near here yesterday after a cruise on his yacht Corsair. Mr. Morgan, about a week ago, following the attempt to assassinate him, left for a cruise. It was said that he had fully recovered from his wounds. He will probably go to his New York office next week. He has planned to go to New London on the Corsair on August 9 to join the New York Yacht club fleet on its three weeks' cruise. Griffin of West Hartford, as bridesmaids. The best man was Herbert H. Dahl, brother of the bride, and the ushers were Paul Trinks, William B. Camp, Bernard J. Dowd and Matthew E. Dowd of this city. The church was decorated with palms, which formed a bank behind the pulpit. Preceding the ceremony, John Spencer Camp, organist of the church, played selections from the "Marriage Mass," by Dubois, and Mrs. Nellie Carey Reynolds, contralto soloist of the Center Church choir sang, "Du bist die ruh," by Schubert, and "The Ring," by Schumann. While the bridal party was entering the church Mr. Camp played the wedding march from "Lohengrin" and as they went out, the Mendelssohn wedding march. The bride wore a dress of white crepe de meteor with princess lace which was trimmed with pearls, and a court train.

The long tulle veil was fastened with a bandeau consisting of several ropes of pearls, and was caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore a short dress of crepe de chine and chiffon, and a picture hat of white leghorn, trimmed with roses and tulle, and she carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. The bridesmaids wore dresses of pink crepe de chine, accordion plaited, and shadow lace. Their picture hats were of leghorn, trimmed with roses and maline, and they carried bouquets of pink and lavender sweet peas and ferns. Immediately following the ceremony was a reception at Center Church House, after which dinner was served for the families and a few friends. The decorations here were composed of masses of pink roses, with table decorations of pink carnations.

The Rev. Franklin H. Miller, rector of St. Thomas's church, officiated at the marriage of Miss Alverda Holland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Holland of New York, and John Flavel Fisk, 3d, of Philadelphia, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Fisk of Cincinnati and a grandchild of the late John F. Fisk, Montreal and former governor of Kentucky, which they took place Wednesday evening at Park B. Rochthe Hotel St. Regis, New York.

double wedding marked the holiday at No. 66 Edgewood street yesterday when Miss Clara M. Barnard and Miss Lena B. Barnard, daughters of Charles D. Barnard were married, the former becoming the bride of H. R. Stanton of Hyde Park, Mass., at 3 o'clock, and Miss Lena B. Barnard, being made Mrs. J. S. Hefflon of Hartford, as soon after as Rev. Dr. J. Newton Lackey, pastor of the South Baptist Church, could conduct the second service. The daughters were given in marriage by their father and the double ring marriage service, according to the Episcopal ritual, was used. It was not a double wedding in the sense that both couples were married at the same ceremony, but each attended the other. Miss Dorothy Alaine of Hartford was the ring bearer at the two ceremonies and the wedding rings, of which there were four, were borne in a cup of gladiola blossoms. The bride's dresses were of white embroidered voile and the wedding bouquets were of sweetpeas. The ring bearer wore a dress of voile and carried sweetpeas. The pathway to the home altar, beneath an arch of pink rambler roses, its base encircled with potted ferns, was strewn with roses by Miss Iris Southworth of New Haven and Frank Follett of Burlington, Vt. The "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin was the music for the march played by Harold C. Barnard, who played "Annie Laurie" during the ceremonies.

After congratulations at the reception a wedding luncheon was served by Miss Dorothy Marsh and Miss Evelyn Marsh of Hartford. Mrs. Stanton was formerly chief toll supervisor at the office of the Southern New England Telephone Company on Pearl street, and Mrs. Hefflon was stenographer in the office of Walter W. Graham and her father at No. 26 State street. After a brief trip Mr. and Mrs. Stanton will live at No. 1,456 River street, Hyde Park, Mass., where they will be at home after September 1. Mr. and Mrs. Hefflon will be at home after September 1.

MUCH IMPRESSED WITH GREAT WEST

Henry S. Robinson Tells of Trip to San Francisco.

Vice-President Henry S. Robinson of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company returned Monday with his family from a trip to the Pacific Coast. On May 22, Mr. Robinson and his family left Hartford going to New York, there taking a train that took them upon the old Santa Fe trail that once served the purpose of a route for the rattling mail coaches of the frontiersmen. Their first stop was at the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, which is not in Colorado, as most people think, but in the state of Arizona.

Two days were spent by the Hartford travelers in inspecting the Grand Canyon and Mr. Robinson said that he was greatly impressed by it. He termed it as a "great sight" to look for a distance of thirty miles up and down the canyon and for about fifteen miles across to the other side. It is estimated that the canyon is about 175 miles in length. Mr. Robinson said that he could faintly make out the outline of the Colorado River, which glistened like a silver ribbon at the bottom of the canyon.

San Diego Exposition.

From the Grand Canyon the Hartford party toured to San Diego, where they spent two nights. Mr. Robinson was much interested in the San Diego Exposition, which is being run in conjunction with the San Francisco one, although on a much smaller scale. He said that the most striking features of the San Diego Exposition were the floral and the arboreal effects. The land is very fertile in that region and it is extremely easy for anything to grow. Mr. Robinson said that, in the matter of the natural scenic displays, the San Diego Exposition surpassed the one at San Francisco.

Forgot His Lines.

From San Diego the party journeyed north to Santa Barbara and DelMonte, the district of the old Spanish missions. Mr. Robinson characterized the missions as being very picturesque and interesting but, like the European art galleries, a visit to one was sufficient. The monks are the mission guides and Mr. Robinson was very much amused by an old man who learned the points of interest of his mission so mechanically that once he forgot his lines and had to go back to the beginning and start all over again.

At San Francisco.

From DelMonte the Robinson party traveled to San Francisco and passed five days in that city. Of course, the most important feature of San Francisco, at present, is the Exposition and Mr. Robinson said that, in order to comprehend it in the right way, one ought to spend at least two months in examining the features that are offered on the grounds. He termed the exposition very vast and said that one of the best features was the different types of architecture that the fair represented, as some of the best architects in the country, or in the world, were called upon to put forth their best efforts for the huge event. He further said that the courts were very beautiful, the Court of the Four Seasons being one of the most prominent. The vistas by day and by night were very attractive and the illuminations were wonderful.

Foreign Exhibits Excellent.

Mr. Robinson remarked that the San Francisco Exposition had been adjudged by experts as being one that surpasses any yet given in the world. He said that, despite the war, the foreign exhibits were excellent, notably those from France, Italy and Canada. When asked about the German exhibit, Mr. Robinson said that he did not see any and he smiled as he ventured that the Germans were "interested in other things."

The "New" City.

There were no evidences of the earthquake and fire and the "new" part of the city seemed to be well and substantially built up. He added that San Francisco was a hustling city much like our Eastern capitals, but Martial Spirit in Canada.

By a Canadian steamer the Robinsons took a four-day trip to Victoria, B. C., a city of about 40,000 inhabitants. Mr. Robinson said that the populations of the Canadian towns were shrinking because of their sufferings during the war. He added that they saw specific evidences of martial spirit as they witnessed the departure of 700 young men, leaving a church for the front. He said that the finest young men of Canada were going to England and the continent in answer to their country's call to arms. The newspapers were fostering a martial spirit and were stirring up the people by their patriotic editorials. The Robinsons visited Esquimaux, a British naval station about five miles from Victoria. They were also taken aboard the British cruiser Kent that was engaged in the naval fight off the Falkland Islands with the German vessels Dresden and Nuremberg, and was responsible for the sinking of the Nuremberg. They were escorted about by a young English midshipman.

Snow in June.

From Victoria the Robinsons went to Vancouver and the town of Glacier in the Selkirk Mountains. They visited an ice grotto and took a sail upon Lake Louise, which is called the "gem of the Canadian Rockies." It was here that the party encountered their first storm. Considerable snow fell, a thing that seemed very unusual for the latter part of June. Some of the party undertook a little mountain climbing, and Mr. Robinson did some horseback riding, for he is a great enthusiast at that sport. From Lake Louise they went to the town of Banff, which is termed the "gateway of the Canadian Rockies." The hotels were very comfortable and adequate.

Return To Hartford.

After a journey of four days the Robinson party came by way of Minneapolis and Chicago to Hartford after a splendid six weeks' tour of the glories of western America. Mr. Robinson said that it seemed good to see Hartford looking so prosperous. He said that the most interesting part of the trip to his children were the Pueblo villages of Arizona and the glimpses of the life of the native Indians.

SPELLACY U. S. DISTRICT ATTY.

Hartford Lawyer Named to Succeed Fred A. Scott of Plymouth, Resigned.

Salary $2,500 a Year—Native of Hartford and Former Member of State Senate.

A Washington dispatch this afternoon announced the appointment of former Senator Thomas J. Spellacy of this city, well-known lawyer and legislator, to succeed Fred A. Scott of Plymouth as United States district attorney for Connecticut. Mr. Scott had already resigned the position.

Mr. Spellacy was born in Hartford March 6, 1880, the son of James and Catherine A. (Bourke) Spellacy. He attended the Hartford high school, also Miss Burbank's school in this city and Holy Cross college at Worcester, Mass. He graduated from the law school of Georgetown university at Washington, D. C., in 1901, and soon afterward was admitted to the bar of Hartford county.

Before he took up the study of law Mr. Spellacy was for a time a reporter on the Hartford Telegram.

Mr. Spellacy has for years been active in politics in this city and in the state. He has been chairman of the democratic town committee and recognized as a resourceful political leader and staunch democrat.

At the state election in 1906 Mr. Spellacy was elected to represent the Third district in the senate. He was then only 26 years old and the youngest member of the senate in the session of 1907. His ability as a legislator soon attracted attention, and he was considered one of the most effective debaters in the senate. Four years later he was again elected to the senate from the same district.

Senator Spellacy was nominated by the democrats for mayor in 1912. He was defeated at the polls by Colonel Louis R. Cheney.

The salary of district attorney is $2,500 a year. The resignation of Mr. Scott goes into effect when Mr. Spellacy qualifies as his successor.

Mr. Spellacy married Miss Nellie Walsh, daughter of the late Thomas Walsh, of Middletown. Their home is on Wethersfield avenue. Mr. Spellacy is a member of St. Peter's Roman Catholic parish, of the Third division, Ancient Order of Hibernians; the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, and the Hartford Business Men's association, and a past chief ranger of Court A. E. Burr, of Foresters.

It is said that the other candidates for the office of district attorney were Alvan W. Hyde of this city and Kenneth Wynne of New Haven.

The first official duty of the new district attorney was to sign a receipt for the library and papers which Mr. Scott turned over to him, and then there was a conference between the outgoing and incoming official. Mr. Scott gave District Attorney Spellacy a list of about forty pending cases. Fifteen of these are cases which have been brought against the collector of internal revenue for refund of corporation taxes paid under protest, and which the district attorney must defend for the collector. There are about ten civil cases pending and fifteen criminal cases on the docket, and former District Attorney Scott turned over memoranda and informations for the bringing of several more criminal cases.

One of the last incidents of Mr. Scott's term in office was the appearance, to-day, of the attorney for Felix Magnotta, who turned over to the clerk the naturalization papers were granted to Magnotta, before it was known that he had, only a few years ago, served a term in state prison on a charge of attempt to kill. Magnotta had been ordered by the court to return the papers after Mr. Scott brought the case against him, but had said he had been unable to find the certificate.

Mr. Spellacy took his office without ceremony. A handsome bouquet of roses and carnations from Mayor Daniel Dunn of Willimantic reposed on the table as a gift to the new district attorney. Mr. Spellacy will continue to use the office in the federal building for a time in his capacity as district attorney, but will probably in the near future move its accessories to his own law office. John T. Robinson, the predecessor of Mr. Scott, did not occupy the office of Mr. Scott, did not occupy the office in the federal building.

Washington, July 12.—Admiral Walter Cleveland Cowles, commanding the Asiatic fleet, one of the three rear-admirals appointed to that rank by Secretary Daniels last March retired for age Sunday. He is succeeded in command of the fleet by Rear-Admiral Albert G. Winterhalter, the junior officer of his rank. Admiral Cowles was born in Farmington, Conn., July 11, 1853, and was appointed to the Naval Academy from that state in 1869. He was graduated four years later, and was assigned to the Atlantic station until 1875. He then served on the Trenton, Constellation, Kearsarge, Marblehead, Petrel in the Philippine insurrection, the Brooklyn, Rainbow, Kentucky and Sylph. During the war with Spain he was on duty in the bureau of equipment. He has a sea service of twenty-four years and six months to his credit, and has also been employed on shore for eighteen years and seven months. Admiral Cowles is a brother of Rear-Admiral William S. Cowles, retired, and the father of Midshipman Walter B. Cowles, a member of the first class at Annapolis.

Miss Marjorie C. Paddock of Dalton, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Paddock, and Lieut. George W. Krapf of Dalton, were married by Rev. H. S. Johnson at Boston Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents at Craneville. After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Krapf left for a trip to Texas by way of California. Lieut. Krapf is with the 26th United States infantry at Texas City, Tex. He is a graduate of the Dalton high school class of 1906. For a year and a half he attended Williams college and then went to West Point military academy, where he was graduated in 1913. He was fond of athletics at the academy and had played on the hockey and football teams. The bride was a graduate of Dalton high school and of Miss Hall's school at Pittsfield. She also went to New York, where she was educated in music and later spent a year traveling in Europe. She is a member of the Mount Day tennis club.

B. Perry.

Charles Edwin Blake of Brook- lyn, this state, a Trinity man, has been appointed principal of the Southwest school. Mr. Blake was head master of St. Andrew's school Barrington, R. I., for four years. Last year he was principal of the New Hartford graded school, in which position he made a conspicuous success. Secretary Charles D. Hine of the state board of Education is enthusiastic in his praise of Mr. Blake's work, and the district committee, which is composed of John D. Candee, L. Bruce H. Tolhurst and Everett C. Willson, feels that in selecting Mr. Blake it has made a wise choice.

Miss Fanny B. Perry, the retiring principal of the school, did excellent work during the three years she served the district. The school has grown very rapidly, and with the occupying of the new building the responsibilities of the principal have multiplied. Miss Perry proved herself very efficient, and she leaves the school with the best wishes of the

St. Thomas FIRE CLUB

By Rev. Franklin H. Miller.

TODAY St. Thomas's Church commemorates the organization of the parish forty years ago. The present strength of the society, and its beautiful house of worship, were not gained without a considerable struggle, which has been carried on during the greater part of its forty-five years of existence. Indeed, the struggle to bring the parish to birth began several years before its organization was consummated.

In the latter part of the lifetime of Bishop Brownell, before the advent of horse-cars in Hartford, and Windsor avenue was still a part of Main street, the need of a religious center in the North End was realized. Rev. Dr. Abercrombie, then rector of Christ Church, supplied this need by establishing a parochial school in that district, holding its sessions in the Arsenal School house. Evidently his effort was too successful to please rival religious bodies, for after the first year when he had enrolled seventy-five or eighty children, the use of the school building for religious services was refused; and the parochial school, being too large to assemble in a dwelling house, was discontinued. The next attempt was made by the Episcopal City Missionary, Rev. Dr. Fisher, in the summer of 1864, holding services in Hope Chapel on Albany avenue. These were well attended, but as soon as their success was assured the Congregationalists obtained possession of the building and the Episcopalians were dispossessed. Rev. Dr. Fisher was not discouraged, however, and in 1868 he obtained the use of the Northeast School house for religious service twice a month on Sunday afternoons. These continued successfully for nine months, but then were abandoned.

Later in the year greater representation to the Hartford Accident & Indemnity was given by electing P. H. Cornwall vice-president and J. W. Beach assistant treasurer.

The first real meeting of the club was held September 25, when the club room was formally presented to the club by the officers. President Richard M. Bissell of the company delivered an address on "Present Conditions in the Insurance Business," there were musical selections by the Mozart Musical Four and refreshments were served. Most of the officers of the company were present.

The club room is a large room in the basement of the company's building tastily furnished and decorated. A large number of magazines, both technical and popular, are kept there, and it is there that the club meets. During the first year of the club's life it was thought best to place emphasis upon its social side rather than upon its educational side in order to get the members firmly welded together. A club room, where the members were able to get together at the noon hour or after 4 o'clock, has proved a great aid in bringing this to pass.

The educational side of the club was not entirely neglected, however. A question box was established in which any member could deposit any question he desired to ask concerning insurance. The educational committee found answers for these questions and in those cases in which the interest seemed sufficient answers were published and filed in the club room for future reference. The technical magazines kept in the club room were of great educational value. During the winter many interesting and instructive talks were given to the club by officers of the two Hartfords.

Two outings of the club were held last year. The first was at Lake Compounce June 13, with the usual sports and entertainment; and the second July 18, when President Scarborough invited the club members to spend the afternoon at his farm in Windsor. At the latter outing, the feminine members of the office force

Jan 6, 1916
The festival service and parish reception to celebrate the consecration of St. Thomas's church on Windsor avenue and the forty-fifth anniversary of the parish was attended by the bishop and bishop suffragan, the clergy of the parish and a large number of its communicants Thursday evening.

The Right Rev. Chauncey Brewster spoke briefly. The sermon was preached by the Right Rev. E. Campion Acheson.

For his text Bishop Acheson took Ephesians, iii., 5-7: "Which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the spirit: That the Gentiles should be fellow heirs and of the same body and partakers in his promise of Christ by the gospel: Whereof I was made a minister, according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me by the effectual working of His power."

He urged a greater effort by all in the missionary field, "a reaching out beyond the bounds of parish, creed and race." He called upon

Washington, June 24.—Robert Lansing of Watertown, N. Y., is the new secretary of state. The announcement of Mr. Lansing's appointment was made last evening this statement issued by Secretary Tumulty:

"Before leaving this evening for brief rest in New Hampshire President Wilson announced that he had offered the post of secretary of state to Robert Lansing, the former counselor of the department of state and that Mr. Lansing has accepted the appointment."

None of the many strange changes effected by the war in Europe has been more remarkable than this of Mr. Lansing to the post of chief adviser of the president in the conduct of America's foreign relations. Without any known political aspirations, with virtually no political record, Mr. Lansing now finds himself a great figure in one of the historic making periods of this government.

The most striking characteristic about the new secretary has been his natural modesty, his absolute simplicity of manner and thought and his complete lack of any apparent desire to arrogate to himself influence or position not inherent part of his post as counselor of state department. Mr. Lansing never had regarded himself as a part of the political side of the administration, but always as a trained man in international law who had been called in by the department to assist in the solution of its legal problems. He was the principal aid to the president in deciding on foreign policy and in preparing notes.

Always Loyal to Bryan.

Mr. Lansing's loyalty to Bryan when the latter was secretary of state was a matter of widespread comment in Washington, for it was known that he disagreed with Bryan on many important subjects. Yet no criticism of the departed secretary of state.

Of the new secretary's career in college, they say that, contrary to the usual belief inculcated in students by their teachers—namely, that all great men must be fine scholars—that Bob Lansing was not a Phi Beta Kappa man, but instead had only a mediocre stand in his class. They describe him as a "mighty good mixer," and a very popular man with his classmates. Incidentally he was one of the best tennis players in college. He was a member of Psi Upsilon.

CONSTANCE GARDNER A BRIDE.

July 24/1915
Marriage of Only Daughter of Congressman A. P. Gardner to Grafton Winthrop Minot at Ipswich.

Miss Constance Gardner, the only daughter of Congressman and Mrs Augustus Peabody Gardner of Washington, D. C., and Hamilton, and Grafton Winthrop Minot, only son of Mr and Mrs Joseph Grafton Minot of Boston, were married at the church of the Ascension at Ipswich yesterday. The bride is the granddaughter of United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and Mrs Lodge, her mother having been Miss Constance Lodge previous to her marriage to Mr Gardner.

Miss Gardner was escorted into the church by her father, Congressman Gardner, who gave her in marriage, and the ceremony was performed by Rev Sherrard Billings of Groton school. The bride was distinguished looking in her wedding gown of white satin with its full court train and flounces of old point d'Angleterre with more of the same lace used to trim the bodice, all making the gown notable in its rich appearance. The bridal veil of tulle was held in position by a cluster of orange blossoms. Miss Gardner carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley combined with delicate ferns.

Her group of attendants included Miss Helena Lodge, who is a cousin and the daughter of Mr and Mrs George Cabot Lodge, as maid of honor, with these bridesmaids: Miss Anne Means, Miss Doris Taylor, Miss Anna Agassiz and Miss Frances Bradley, all of Boston; Miss Katherine McClintock of Washington, daughter of Mr and Mrs A. Garrison McClintock, and Miss Caroline Ogden Jones, also of Washington, the daughter of Mrs Paul W. Bartlett. Mr Minot's best man was Henry Potter Russell, Harvard, '16, a brother of Charles Howland Russell, Jr., the last named having been associated with the bridegroom the past year in service at the American embassy in Berlin, Ger. Some of Mr Minot's classmates at Harvard, class of 1914, and others who were his intimates during his college course, or family friends of long standing, made up the group of ushers, in which were Charles Russell Codman, 2d., George W. P. Davenport, Jr., and others.

 Miss Anna B. Curry, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Curry of Congress street, and Joseph G. Woods of New Britain, assistant prosecuting attorney in the court of that city, were married yesterday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Peter's Church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Michael J. Regan, assistant pastor of the Immaculate Conception Church, a cousin of the bride, followed by a nuptial high mass in which seven of the clergy participated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, William P. Curry, was attended by her sister, Miss Theresa Curry, as maid of honor, and Miss Mary E. Hyland of East Hartford, and Miss Mary A. Curry, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids. The best man was Judge Joseph F. Dutton of Bristol, a classmate of the bridegroom in the class of 1910 at Yale Law School. The ushers were Harry T. Roche of New Britain, Holy Cross '05, Joseph Glober of New Britain, Yale '12 S., Edward P. Curry and James A. Curry, brothers of the bride, Notre Dame '13. During the ceremony Miss Jane Conway sang an "Ave Maria," and Thomas B. Curry sang "O Promise Me." The bride wore a gown of white accordian plaited charmeuse trimmed with duchess lace and cut with a fish-tail train, and a tulle veil caught with orange blossoms and trimmed with duchess lace. Her bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor's dress was of pink and blue chiffon and her hat was of Georgette crepe. She carried pink roses and larkspur. The bridesmaids wore dresses of yellow charmeuse and picture hats to match. Following the ceremony, was a reception at the home of the bride's mother at which guests were present from Hartford, New York, Bridgeport, Springfield, New Britain and Bristol. After a wedding trip to Bar Harbor and other resorts along the Maine coast, Mr. and Mrs. Woods will be at home at 222 N. Main street.

Home Wedding—Ceremony Performed by the Rev. Dr. Fennell.

Miss Edith Elizabeth Bassett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. C. Bassett, of No. 51 Ashley street, and Wilfred David Elliott, son of Mrs. Sara Elliott, were married at noon, to-day, at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. Dr. William G. Fennell, pastor of the Asylum Avenue Baptist church officiating. Miss Eleanor Bassett, niece of the bride, was the only attendant, acting as flower girl and ring-bearer. The wedding march was played by Miss Elsie M. Jones, cousin of the bride. The house was decorated with palms and cut flowers, and the bride wore an empire gown of accordion pleated white crepe de chine, with trimming of shadow lace, crystal beading and hand-made satin roses. Her tulle veil was caught with pearls and she carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas. The flower girl wore white voile and lace with pink sash and ribbons, and carried pink sweet peas. Following the ceremony, at which only the immediate relatives of bride and groom were present, a buffet luncheon was served. This afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Elliott left for a wedding trip to Bermuda. After their return they will live at No. 27 Sargeant street.

HOWELL-EGGLESTON Editor of Bridgeport and bury Heralds Weds Act

Richard Howell, editor of Bridgeport and Waterbury and Miss Billy Eggleston of New York were married Wednesday afternoon in Stratford. The ceremony was performed by Charles H. Peck, justice of the peace, at 3 o'clock in the presence of Andrew V. Barber and Grace Baldwin of the Herald. Miss Eggleston, who is an 23 years old, was the daughter of William and Catherine H. Charleston, S. C. She was on the vaudeville stage and Howell met her last fall when she appeared in Bridgeport at the time while filling an engagement at the atoga, N. Y., last March, she contracted scarlet fever and was in private hospital there for a while under quarantine. The disease left her in a very weak condition after leaving Saratoga she returned to Bridgeport and was under treatment at the Bridgeport hospital about a month ago. Since then she has been recuperating in Saratoga.

Miss Eggleston's father was in France and her mother died. She was left an orphan in childhood and has no near relatives. She was educated in a convent in France between the ages of 10 and 15, winning a scholarship in Paris, which she had unusual talents. She was sent by the convent to a school in Paris, where she was a year's finishing course. She then made Miss Eggleston returning to America to go to the stage. For three years she was at Healy's restaurant in New York, leaving there to accept an engagement with the United Booking Office for appearance in vaudeville on Broadway and the usual of Mr. and Mrs. Howell leave Stratford for a wedding as Mrs. Howell is not young enough to enjoy traveling.

From Battle at Hlobuvka in Austria-Hungary.

IN DANGER ALWAYS.

But She's Back Now, and Says
If She Could Have Whole of Europe, Never Again!

A vivid and interesting story of conditions in the Galician zone of war, when it was being swept by the Russian armies, is told by Mrs. Aaron Kenig of No. 31 Avon street, who arrived in Hartford at about 9 o'clock, Thursday evening, after being abroad since January, 1914, and in the war zone since the outbreak of hostilities, with her two youngest children, May, aged 5½, and Sophie, two years younger. Fruitless efforts had been made to get in communication with her for the past year, her husband having the assistance of the department of state through the congressmen of this district and Mayor Lawler, but until Monday no letter had been received from her, and as that made no mention of her sailing, her arrival in Hoboken, Thursday morning, was a complete surprise.

Mrs. Kenig came on the Holland-American steamship Noordam from Rotterdam and her husband, who has been unceasing in his efforts to communicate with her, and who was at Saratoga, N. Y., at the time she arrived at Hoboken, planned to meet her after a telegram had been received at her home. He found he could not reach Hoboken before 7 o'clock and feeling sure she would reach Hartford before that hour, came directly here. In the meantime a long distance telephone call had been received, for Mrs. Kenig, after purchasing the steamship tickets for herself and her children, was without sufficient funds to travel to Hartford, and finally another telegram announced she would arrive on the 6 o'clock train from New York, with her brother, Abe Shimelman, and a friend, M. Weingarten, who had gone to meet her. Quick calculation showed her husband he could meet her at Berlin, and so he and the five children, who were also eagerly awaiting her real bread, loaves concocted from Swiss corn flour were tiny in size and high in price. In all this time Mrs. Kenig heard nothing from her home in Hartford nor from her parents at Lemberg, although she tried to communicate with both. The condition of her parents has caused her much worry, as she appreciates the danger of their position.

She left just about six weeks ago for Vienna by way of Hungary and had no difficulty worth mentioning she says. It took only forty-eight hours to reach Vienna, traveling by train, and although many towns through which she passed were destroyed, it was not so very bad. As she did not have her passport she went directly to the American ambassador at Vienna to secure one.

There she found letters and telegrams sent long before from home and $150 which Mr. Kenig had sent her last August for her return. It was necessary, she said, for the American official to whom she applied to telegraph to Washington first and see whether her husband was an American citizen, before granting the passport, so she remained in Vienna more than two weeks. With the $150 she immediately purchased her tickets for home. Finally Ambassador Penfield gave her a letter of introduction and she secured an Austrian passport which allowed her to enter Holland. She sailed from Rotterdam, July 19, taking a second-class passage, and regretting her inability to send a wireless and inform her family of her coming.

"But with the tickets and the fare to Rotterdam and the tips on the steamer I could not afford the $3.60," she said, laughing.

Feeling Against U. S.

Her ease in travelling through Europe she attributes to the knowledge of German, and she speaks of the feeling in Vienna against Americans on account of the shipment of arms from this country.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenig said this morning they were grateful, first of all, to former Congressman Augustine Lonergan and his secretary, Mr. Wall, who had begun the efforts to reach Mrs. Kenig; then to Governors Baldwin and Holcomb and to Mayor Lawler, who had added their assistance, and to Congressman P. Davis Oakey and his secretary, Mr. Price, who had continued the work and brought it to completion. Mr. Kenig expressed particular appreciation of George H. Burt, cashier of the State Bank & Trust company, who had written a personal letter to Ambassador Penfield at Vienna, as had Mayor Lawler and Congressman Oakey.

Mrs. Kenig now intends to remain at home with her family and recuperate from the strain under which she has been suffering.

"If I could have the whole of Europe," she said, feelingly, this morning, "if I went there with my husband and my children, I would not go."

U. S. W. V. HONOR TO CAPT. SAUNDERS

CAPTAIN HENRY H. SAUNDERS

Captain Henry H. Saunders of Hartford and Norfolk has wound up his vacation at Niantic and will again appear as Morton Jones, senior vestryman in "Thank U," which will open its third season this evening at the Hollis Street Theater, Boston. The comedy, which is produced by John Holden and staged by Winchell Smith, was written by Mr. Smith and another Connecticut man, "Tom" Cushing.

The photograph from which the above cut was made was taken by Raoul W. D'Arche of Hartford, a long-time friend of Captain Saunders, who recently visited him at Niantic, where the Hartford man has been spending his time between theatrical seasons with his family. The picture was taken near the Saunders cottage, with the Niantic River and the Oswegatchie hills as a picturesque background.

Veterans.

The members of Charles L. Burdett Camp, U. S. W. V., were agreeably surprised at the meeting last night by the announcement that Captain Henry H. Saunders, a prominent and popular member of the camp, had been elected senior vice-commander-in-chief, that office having recently become vacant through the resignation of its occupant who was elected at the national encampment held in Louisville, Ky., last summer.

Captain Charles W. Newton, in obedience to a request of the adjutant general, installed Captain Saunders, prefacing the ceremony with an address expressing the gratification of the members because of the deserved recognition and promotion of the most unselfish worker in the organization. Department Commander Martin Laubscher was a visitor to the camp and amused the members with a witty and inspiring address, afterwards installing James H. Morgan as department inspector.

The following recruits were mustered to membership: Angelo Brumard J. Boyce, Isaac Shemon, Emil J. Foster.

In regard to Comrade Saunders's rise to the second highest office in the organization, Adjutant General C. Rogers of national headquarters, Cleveland, O., said in an address given July 22—

"Attending this honor to Commander the members of the national council of administration have the organization. The ex-ability and energy exerted by Comrade Saunders in behalf of the organization have earned the highest honor with its gift, and the office conferred is most worthily be-

Murderess, Ida Walters, Named In Suit.

New York, March 27.—Mrs. Carolings Rogers, wife of Lorly Rogers, the lawyer whose relation to Mrs. Ida Sniffen Walters was revealed when the last named administered poison to herself and three small children, today filed for an absolute divorce. Mrs. Ida Walters, who is now awaiting an indictment charging the murder of the children, was named in the divorce suit. Rogers is said to have alleged that the failure of his divorce him was all that prevented him from marrying the mother of his two children.

Woman Who Poisoned Children Correspondent in the Case.

New York May 5.—Supreme Court Justice Giegerich to-day signed the interlocutory decree granting freedom to Caroline Giddings Rogers from Lorlys Elton Rogers, the lawyer who recently figured before the public as the father of Ida Sniffen Walters's two children, both of whom were poisoned by their mother.

Mrs. Walters was named as co-respondent in Mrs. Rogers's suit, to which her husband interposed no defense in court.

Mrs. Rogers asked for no alimony, and none was mentioned in to-day's decree. She is a sister of Professor Franklin Giddings, who occupies the chair of psychology at Columbia university.

New York, July 31.—Lorlys Elton Rogers and Mrs. Ida Sniffen Walters, who gained notoriety some months ago when Mrs. Walters poisoned her two children and herself, have secured a marriage license at Jersey City, it was announced to-day.

Mrs. Walters and Rogers called at the city clerk's office last night, a few hours after a divorce decree in favor of Rogers' wife had been signed in New York. Mrs. Walters is at liberty on bail, pending trial on the charge of poisoning her children.

The divorce decree secured by Rogers' wife forbids Rogers, who was an attorney here before the death of Mrs. Walters' children, to marry in New York state.

Mr. Mason's Career.

Mr. Mason, who is at present employed as superintendent of construction by Architect Isaac A. Allen, jr., of No. 904 Main street, is a graduate of the college of architectural engineering at Cornell University and has had extensive experience in architectural and construction work. He is 30 years old and married.

He was born in Malden, Mass., January 12, 1885, the son of Thomas and Jennie E. Mason. His father was a mechanical engineer. He moved with his parents to Waterville, Me., where he attended the grade schools and high school, being president of his class in the high school for four years. He then entered Colby College in Waterville for a two years' course, following which he came to Hartford and worked in the advertising business for former Mayor Miles B. Preston for a year and a half. He then entered Cornell and was graduated in 1904.

Following graduation, he entered the employ of the H. Wales Lines Company of Meriden and, while there, had charge of the construction of the E. H. H. Smith Silver Company factory in Bridgeport and the reinforced concrete factory of the Aeolian Company in Meriden, in addition to several other big contracts. He left the H. Wales Lines Company about five years ago to become superintendent of construction for Mr. Allen.

While in this city, Mr. Mason superintended the construction of the new addition to the Wise, Smith & Co. building two years ago, the rebuilding of the Auditorium on Asylum street and the new $50,000 grammar school in Thompsonville, which was thrown open last fall. At present, he is looking after the erection of the new Brown School on Talcott street.

Mr. Mason is a republican and has lived in this city about ten years, having a large acquaintance here. He was among the last to apply for the superintendency and got his application in just before the meeting of the board of aldermen which was expected to pass the ordinance for the $3,000 salary.

Associate of Coombs.

The new superintendent took a prominent part in athletics during his school days, despite the fact that he gained his education wholly through his own efforts. In high school and college he played on football and baseball teams that Jack Coombs, now twirler for the Brooklyn Nationals, formerly of the world's champion Athletics starred for. Mr. Mason was left tackle on the Waterville High School football eleven and Coombs played in the back field and, in his senior year, he was captain of the school baseball team, of which Coombs was the popular star. Later Coombs went to a rival school and, while pitching against Mason one day, accidentally struck him with a speedy pitched ball. Both were at Colby College at the same time and played on the Colby baseball nine. They are very warm friends. Mr. Mason is a member of the Greek letter society, Zeta Psi, at Cornell.

Last winter Mr. Mason taught a class in architectural drawing in the Hartford Y. M. C. A. evening school.

New York, Aug. 11.—Walter Hines Page, United States ambassador to Great Britain, accompanied by Mrs. Page, arrived here tonight from Liverpool on board the American line steamship Philadelphia. They will remain in this country several weeks. Ambassador Page said he would go to Washington, probably Monday, to confer with President Wilson.

To Marry Ambassador's Son.

Sept. 7, 1915

Almost immediately following the notable wedding of Miss Katherine Page, daughter of the American ambassador to Great Britain, and Charles Greely Loring, which took place in the Chapel Royal of St. James palace, by special invitation of King George of England, August 4, came the announcement of the engagement of Miss Katherine Sefton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Page, brother of the bride. Miss Sefton is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sefton of Auburn, N. Y., and is a beauty of the statuesque type, considered in England typically American since the Gibson girl became famous across the Atlantic. It has been termed quite remarkable, in view of their residence abroad, that both of the children of the ambassador have chosen Americans as life partners.

blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and ferns tied with tulle. The dress of the maid of honor was pink taffeta and she carried an arm bouquet of blue larkspur, tied with pink tulle to match the dress. The bridesmaids wore dresses of Elizabeth blue taffeta silk, flowered with Rose of Sharon pink. The flower girl was dressed in white net, worn over blue, and she carried a gold Italian flower basket, tied with gold figured tulle over pale blue, the entire color scheme of the decorations being of pink and blue. The music was furnished by William Davis, organist; and the choir of the Holy Trinity Church in Middletown. Following the ceremony was a reception at Spruce Terrace, the summer home of the bride's parents, the supper being furnished by Stueck's of Middletown, at which about 100 relatives and friends were present. The bride's table was decorated with a large bride's cake from Dean's, Fifth avenue, New York. During the reception music was furnished by Kauffman's Orchestra of this city. The bride's gifts to her attendants were pearl and sapphire pins. Among the out-of-town guests present were Mrs. Harold A. Forbes, William H. Luther, jr., Miss Henrietta Meyer, Miss Emma Henry, John Von Glahn, Herman Von Glahn, Miss Adelaide Von Glahn, Miss Helen J. Phillips and Brun Delaney, all of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Byron Spoifford and family of Claremont, N. H.; Miss Alice Jacob of Staten Island, N. Y.; Miss Margaret M. Smith and E. I. Smith of Easton, Pa.; Miss Hazel DeMott of Rockville Center, L. I., and Miss Dorothy Fancher of Yonkers, N. Y. After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Spoifford will be at home in Portland after October 1.

Mr. Spoifford has completed a year of his course in his studies for orders at the Berkeley Divinity school, Middletown. During his college career he was one of the most popular men in college and had a high record in college track work. He was a prominent member of the class.

BADGER'S CAREER AS SEA FIGHTER ENDS Had Many Noted Ancestors in Country's Service.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Terminating a long and distinguished career on the active list, the words "U. S. N., retired," have been written after the name of Rear Admiral Charles Johnston Badger, lately resigned as commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet. Rear-Admiral Badger retired because he had reached the age limit of active service—not because he was any the less capable or alert than when he took the Atlantic fleet to Mexican waters in April, 1914, when Huerta refused to salute the flag.

The retired rear-admiral comes of a fighting stock. He is a good fighter today. He is recognized as a naval officer of unusual tact, ability and conscientiousness, and if it were not for that retirement law Charles J. Badger would be "active" yet.

Retirement Cause Regret.
 "Must a man of Badger's type get out at the age of sixty-two?" an official of the navy department was asked. "Is there no way to keep a 'live one on the list?'"

"The retirement is automatic," said the official in matter-of-fact words, but with a touch of regret. "Rear-Admiral Badger even leaves the general board, unless he requests specifically to remain thereon, and then it is a question of a special dispensa-waters, to which he took the Admiral fleet when it looked as if this country might go to war with Mexico early in 1914. When he reached southern waters Admiral Badger demonstrated that he was "true blue" and an officer above petty jealousies and ambitions by virtually stepping aside and permitting Rear-Admiral Fletcher, his subordinate official, to have full swing in carrying out the work Fletcher had begun before Badger's arrival.

Secretary Daniels publicly commended Admiral Badger's course at Tampico in these words:—

"I have watched your handling of the fleet with every interest, and have not found you wanting in any of the elements that go to make a great naval officer."

NOVEMBER 19,

1st Officer in Regular Army Who Saw Service in Civil War 19

The last officer on the active list of the United States army who saw service in the civil war was placed on the retired list at Washington Friday, when Col John L. Clem, quartermaster's department, reached the age of 64 and wound up his official duties at the war department, where he has been stationed for many years. He retires with the additional rank of brigadier-general in accordance with an act of bloody deaths we brought each other, but not because of hatred for each other, but for the sake of a principle, that we must think of on this sacred Memorial Day."

Johnny Clem ran away from his home in Newark, O., when he was ten years old and attached himself to the Twenty-second Michigan regiment.
The officers tried to chase him away, but the soldiers made him a pet and mascot and finally, in May 1862, the colonel enlisted him.

He was the hero of a brilliant scene at Chikamauga performed right under the eyes of his Union comrades, who were falling back rapidly. Johnny's poor little legs were weary, and so he lagged behind, a Confederate colonel galloped up to him, "Surrender, you damned little Yankee devil," he cried.

Weak and tired though he was, his nerves never quivered. He pulled up his heavy musket—he had abandoned his drum—and fired. The colonel fell headlong from his horse, and a volley of bullets from the men behind rained over Johnny Clem. Johnny's comrades on the hill saw their heroic little soldier boy fall face downward. The battle raged four hours after that, and at dark the Union forces rested. Suddenly into their bivouac crept Johnny Clem, unhurt, and displaying with tremendous pride his cap pierced by three bullet holes. He had saved his own life by shamming death.

General Thomas made the hero drummer boy a sergeant for that deed of bravery. And when the general advised him of promotion, the youngster answered, "General, is that all you're going to make me." Later in his Civil War career, the 12-year-old soldier was hit on the hip by part of a shell, wounded in the ear while dispatch riding and once taken prisoner.

He is probably the only living man who voted legally at an age under fifteen. At the time Lincoln was elected the second time, all soldiers of the army were allowed to vote. Johnny Clem was a soldier in the army and he voted.

Johnny Clem went to high school when the war was over and then entered the army as second lieutenant. In his early service, he was the central
the Texas frontier. He is one of the very few infantry officers to graduate from the artillery school and holds other distinctions for service in the army.

Colonel Clem was stationed at Fort Sam Houston for the first time in 1900. Four years later he became chief of the quartermaster department of the Philippines, with headquarters at Manila.

After retiring from the army, Colonel Clem will spend several months in the North and East. At Dayton, O., a city-wide celebration, to be known as Clem day, has been arranged in his honor. Colonel Clem Garrison, army and navy union, and the grand army

Miss Arvela K. Beard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elieha S. Beard of Essex street, this city, and Harry Rhodes, also of Hartford, were married Tuesday evening at the summer home of the bride's parents on Cape Cod, the Rev. Stanley Addison officiating. The ceremony was performing beneath an arch of flowers and foliage in pink and green, and the bride wore a travelling suit and corsage bouquet of lilies of the valley. Among the gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes was a purse of gold from the former associates of the bride in the office of the Travelers Insurance company.

Benjamin Floyd Turner of Glastonbury, a bookkeeper for the Hartford Trust company, and Miss Emily Welles Lambert, daughter of Mrs. Helen W. Lambert of Glastonbury, will be married this afternoon at 4:30 at the home of the bride's mother.

GLASTONBURY. 24

The marriage of Miss Emily Welles Lambert, daughter of Mrs. John R. Lambert of Glastonbury, and Benjamin Floyd Turner, Trinity, 1910, took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Anthony, vicar of St. Augustine's Chapel, New York, assisted by Rev. Edward G. Reynolds of Glastonbury. Mr. and Mrs. Turner will be at home in Glastonbury after November 1.

A daughter was born Tuesday evening to Mr. and Mrs. B. Floyd Turner, No. 377 Main street.

Used as Decorations in Longmeadow Home When Miss Lena Pritzlaff and Arthur E. Lange Are Married

A pretty home wedding took place last evening when Lena, daughter of August Pritzlaff, and Arthur Eugene Lange of Springfield were married at the bride's home on Longmeadow street, Longmeadow. Rev Arthur H. Hope of Emmanuel church of Springfield officiated, the ceremony taking place at 7 o'clock. The bridegroom and best man waited on the second floor for the coming of the bride and her attendants from the third landing. As the party descended the stairs, the small sister of the bride, Minna Pritzlaff, played Lohengrin's wedding march, and as they entered the parlor changed it to the bridal chorus. The bride was accompanied by her father and made a charming picture. Her gown was white satin cut en train. The corsage had pearl garniture, and the skirt an overthrow of rich embroidered lace. The flowing tulle veil was fastened to a Dutch cap with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

The bridemaid, Miss Elsa Pritzlaff, sister of the bride, wore a lovely gown of pale blue satin with shadow lace, and she carried an arm bouquet of pink sweet peas. The best man was Edwin Lange, a brother of the bridegroom. The little flower girl, sister of the bridegroom, Pauline Lange, who preceded the bridal party, carried a basket of sweet peas and rose petals in which the rings were concealed. The double ring service was used. The ushers were August Pritzlaff and Alfred Lange. During the congratulations, Minna Pritzlaff played from Mendelssohn. About 50 guests were present, being all near friends and relatives. Later they were all served a full course turkey dinner.

The decorations of the dining-room and parlor were carnations, sweet peas and phlox, the color scheme being pink and white. Five tables were set and the large wedding cake, gayly decorated for the centerpiece of the bridal table, was very attractive and the bride generously shared it with her guests. After the dinner the festivities continued with a barn dance and music was furnished by a victrola. The barn was decorated and fitted up for the merry occasion. The dancing was continued to a late hour when the bridal couple departed amid many good wishes. The bride's traveling suit was gray chiffon broadcloth and she wore a gray velvet hat with white ostrich plumes.

Mr and Mrs Lange have gone for their wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Sayre, Pa. They also expect to spend a week at Crystal Lake, Ct. After September 15 they will be at home at 1 Lincoln street. Many fine gifts were received, among them a valuable arm chair from the Truesdell dry goods store, where Mr Lange is assistant manager, and a large

onel from the display of confidence in his ability as an automobile salesman, received a prompt and favorable answer. So he is going to enter an entirely different line from his life's work.

There are a great many incidents connected with Colonel Clem's life which form the theme for a splendid story. One of these concerns an invasion of Mexico, shortly after he entered the regular army as a second lieutenant. Clem was in charge of a squad charged with apprehending cattle thieves. Trailed for five days the band finally escaped across the Rio Grande, where they stood making sinister motions with thumbs and fingers. Unable to withstand the insults, Clem ordered his soldiers to cross the boundary line and in an engagement the desperadoes were killed to the last man. For his action the lieutenant was officially reprimanded; told his conduct was unbecoming an officer of the United States army; that he had been guilty of tremendous lack of judgement in violating neutrality laws, an act which might result in serious complications, a repetition being threatened with severe consequences.
The communication was officially signed in ink, but underneath was the pencil inscription: "Good boy, Johnny, do it again."

A newspaper correspondent asked Colonel Clem on the occasion of the last memorial day, what memory was uppermost in his mind that date. And the famous old soldier, who, at the age of 12 years, was the twice-wounded veteran of one of the greatest campaigns of history, did not reply with a tale of sanguinary adventure.

"My memory pictures today what my kid eyes saw fifty-one years ago today," he said gently, "a soldier in blue and a soldier in gray, shaking hands like two loving comrades between the trenches, swapping tobacco and coffee. In the morning they were to stab each other brutally with bayonets in a fierce hand-to-hand fight for those very trenches. Yet what I like to think of first on Memorial Day is not the bloody fight but that tender scene preceding it, which showed me that after all, man to man, we soldiers of the North and of the South were friends and brothers always. We of the North hated that which they fought for, but we did not hate them personally, nor they us.

"And that is the most hallowed of my memories on this memorial day, for it brings back the thought that we who fought to kill each other were really never enemies. It was war of cannon against fortress, of rifle against trench, but never of man against his brother man.

"It is the great tragedy of these

Dr. F. A. Emmett and Miss Anna
Prior.

The marriage of Miss Anna A.
Prior of No. 3 Farmington avenue, daughter of Joseph Prior of Santa Barbara, Cal., and Dr. F. Arthur Emmett of this city, took place at St. Joseph's cathedral at 8 o'clock this morning, with a nuptial high mass, the Rev. Monsignor Thomas S.
Duggan officiating. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Jane Hughson of New Haven. Marshall
A. Molloy was best man. The bride wore a tailored suit of white broadcloth, fur trimmed, with a hat to match and a corsage bouquet of white orchids. The maid of honor wore a gown of blue taffeta and a blue hat, and carried a bouquet of mignon roses.

The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast for the bridal party and the immediate relatives of bride and bridegroom at the Elm Tree inn in Farmington. Among the guests was the father of the bride, Mr. Prior, who came from California to attend. The bride presented to her attendant a diamond set platinum brooch and the best man received from the groom a pair of platinum and onyx cuff links.

Mr. and Mrs. Emmett left on a motoring trip of ten days through the Berkshires to Lake George, N.

WINDSOR LOCKS TEACHER TO WED BLOOMFIELD MAN

Warehouse Point, Aug. 25.

Miss Martha F. Wadsworth, teacher of English in the Windsor Locks High School, and C. Ernest Eddy of Bloomfield will be married at St. John's Church at 4 p. m. tomorrow. The wedding march will be played by Miss Josephine Brewster. The bride's dress is of white satin trimmed with embroidered net and pearl ornaments and she will carry a bouquet of white roses and lillies of the valley. The decorations by the Girls' Friendly Society will have the church decorated with flowers of yellow and white, the society's colors. Misses Myra Smith, Mary Brewster, Edna Smith, Ruth Cleveland, Marion Sexton and Mable Hackford, members of the society, will be ushers.

After the ceremony, automobiles will convey the guests to the home of the bride on North Main street, where the reception will be for members of the families and immediate friends. Habenstein of Hartford will be the caterer. Miss Wadsworth is a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College, and Mr. Eddy, who is a mechanical draftsman, attended the Connecticut Agricultural College for three years. He is employed at Pratt & Whitney's drafting department in Hartford. After a short wedding trip to the Berkshires the couple will be at home here on Main street. Mrs. Eddy will continue to teach in the Windsor Locks High School, where she has taught for three years.

MR. CLARK'S CONDITION

GOOD AFTER OPERATION

Aug 26, 1915— A successful operation was performed at 9 o'clock yesterday morning upon Charles Hopkins Clark at the New England Baptist Hospital, Roxbury, Mass., for a troublesome prostate gland. Mr. Clark's condition, following the operation, was reported to be most satisfactory. The operation was performed by Dr. Hugh Cabot of Boston, assisted by Dr. Edward L. Young, jr. Mr. Clark's brother-in-law, Dr. E. K. Root, and Dr. George N. Bell of Hartford and Dr. F. S. Dennis of New York and Norfolk were present. The operation was done in fifteen minutes and no complications were found.

EDITOR CLARK HOME.

Sept-27, 1915— Charles Hopkins Clark, editor of the Courant is at his home, No. 160 Garden street, having returned from the hospital in Boston, Monday evening. He is recovering nicely from the severe operation of some weeks ago. He will leave the city shortly for a stay of some weeks.

MR. SAMSON DOING WELL.

Frederick Samson of No. 641 Farmington avenue, secretary of the Hartford Fire Insurance company, is at the New England Baptist hospital in Roxbury, Mass., where he underwent an operation some days ago. He is reported to be getting along well. Charles Hopkins Clark, editor of the Courant, is also at this hospital.

BARTHOLOMEW CARINI, PIONEER

Here Is the Remarkable Story of Glaston

Owner,

When a land and go strange, of tems he kn adopted ho signal succo is replete w tion.

The carec of Glaston subject, bec kind, for a wrung succ promising England, a him; and country is all, native willing to denial, to forego the things not wisely and

By addin and holdin and to-day peach orch one of the leading dealers in native lumber, in Connecticut.

Coming to Glastonbury with less than $10, Mr. Carini has wrought steadily upwards. He is the largest individual land owner in Glastonbury and has extensive holdings in other towns.

Mr. Carini was born in Ferriere in the province of Placenza, Italy, February 8, 1863. He had married, and was engaged in farming, when he left for this country.

In November, 1892, Mr. Carini came to Glastonbury. He was induced to try his fortune there, in part by Albert Carini, who had married his sister. Albert came to Glastonbury in 1890. He soon wrote to Bartholomew that there was plenty of work and abundant opportunity.

Saying Good-By at Home.

So Bartholomew bade farewell to his wife and two small sons, and sailed for his new home. He brought only the $10 for emergency use, leaving the rest of his funds for his wife and babies.

Little time was spent in New York and he came to South Glastonbury on the Hartford boat. From the dock he walked to his new field of labor.

Albert was hewing railroad ties on Mott Hill for James W. Pray and Henry A. Kinne, and Bartholomew joined him. All that winter and the next summer and fall the two and six other choppers worked steadily in the woods, living there and doing their own housework.

During the second winter and the second summer the two brothers-in-law kept on in the woods, and gradually accumulated a tidy sum of money.

BARTHOLOMEW CARINI.

Reunited Family.

In the fall of 1894 they bought a farm at the foot of Mott Hill, and moved there. Albert still lives on the same farm. Bartholomew sent for his wife and children, and they joined him.

Favors Litchfield County, Too.

Mr. Carini's activity and enterprise is not confined to the hills of his own town. His purchase of two farms in Salisbury, with a total area of 700 acres, has made him one of the largest owners of real estate in the high hills of Litchfield county. A farm there of 480 acres, bought in 1905, has now 150 acres of cultivated land and 250 acres of chestnut timber. There are 800 peach trees and 1,200 Baldwin and Delicious apple trees on the farm, and much pasture land.

On the second Salisbury farm of 220 acres, are forty acres of peaches and apples in bearing, 100 acres in timber and pasture, and some sixty acres of general farm land.

Still there is yet more land, owned by Mr. Carini, to be enumerated. In Chatham he owns 500 acres; and of a section of woodland of 1,000 acres, lying in the towns of Chatham, Marlborough and Colchester he and R. M. Goodrich are the owners.

Love for Large Operations.

M. Carini's extensive operations in orcharding and timber-cutting necessitate the employment of a large force of men, and he keeps constantly at work forty men and nine yoke of cattle, fifteen two-horse teams, and several mules. Now that he is in the work of the peach harvest, he has a total of seventy-five persons at work. Of his forty regular employees, all are experienced in all branches of the orchard and with the cutting of timber.

Mr. Carini's great success has not been the work of chance. To a natural love for growing fruit he has added the knowledge gained by a close study of the best methods of orcharding. Liberal spraying and scientific fertilization has made his orchards yield abundantly and well repay his labor and care.

Enterprise.

In the disposal of his immense peach crop he is using the latest methods. This month, he has built on his 115-acre farm a large packing shed, thirty-six by sixty-six feet, about 150 feet from the trolley line. The Connecticut company has put in a spur track, and he is loading the peaches direct from the sorting tables into the freight cars, for shipment direct to Boston, Worcester, Springfield, New York, Baltimore, Buffalo and other big cities. On the north side of the spur track is his large ice house, where the refrigerator cars are iced for the long shipments, ensuring the arrival of the fruit in prime condition.

Two Sons Able Second Father.

Mr. Carini has six children. His two oldest sons, Louis W. and Joseph H., are their father's two right-hand men, and they ably assist him in his extensive enterprises.

In public affairs, Mr. Carini has taken commendable interest. He is well pleased with the success of his countrymen who have, like him, made Glastonbury their home, and he, as their representative, and a member of the general committee on the Glastonbury day celebration in 1913, did excellent work in making that occasion so great a success.

SUNDAY SECOND COLDEST AUGUST DAY

Thermometer Yesterday Gave Up Hope at 59—Rainfall

Br-r-r!

With but one exception, yesterday was the coldest August day on record at the local weather station, the maximum temperature for the day being less than for any other August day, except August 31, 1911. The highest point reached by the thermometer yesterday was 59 at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The lowest was 53 at 6 o'clock in the morning. The maximum temperature August 31, 1911, was 57. The very short range for the day, six degrees, although not record-breaking, was unusual.

With .18 of an inch precipitation Saturday night and yesterday, the total rainfall for the month was brought to a point nearly 50 per cent. higher than the normal. Between 3 a. m. and 8 p. m. yesterday .12 of an inch of rain fell. From the time the rain started Saturday night until 8 a. m. yesterday the rainfall was .06 of an inch. Including yesterday, the rainfall so far this month has been 7.71 inches. This is 2.33 inches above the normal, 4.38. The rainfall, including yesterday, so far this year is, however, .77 of an inch below normal. To date 29.61 inches of rain have fallen. At the beginning of the month the rainfall was 3.30 inches below normal. Since then there has been a steady decrease in the amount of difference.

The thermometer yesterday early gave up hopes of beating any heat records, except conversely. It opened strong but a pronounced bear movement on the part of old man Pluvius drove it down. For a while it looked as though it would recover, but the large amount of water had a bad effect upon its confidence and at closing it was very weak and wavering. Futures were weakened as a result of the general fall, closing at about 100 below par. The general disorganized condition will result in many people giving up their vacations. Old man Pluvius, it is rumored, will still be on the job, however.

YOUNG SPRECKELS TO WED KANSAS GIRL

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 30.—John D. Spreckels, jr., son of the California capitalist, took out a license here today to wed Miss Sidi Wirt of Garden City, Kan. Spreckels' former wife was married in Honolulu last week to Frank W. Wakefield of this city, immediately upon the receipt of a cablegram that a final decree of divorce from Spreckels had been granted her. Spreckels is 33 years old and Miss Wirt 22. She came here recently from New York.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. George Glover Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary in Windsor Locks.

Windsor Locks, August 31.—The golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. George Glover was observed at their home No. 122 G.

Mrs. Glover was a daughter of James and Jane (Cotter) Anderson, and was born in Thompsonville, and lived there until her marriage. They were married in Thompsonville, August 31, 1865, by the Rev. Robert Parsons of the Methodist church, and they came to Windsor Locks soon after, and have lived here ever since. Mr. Glover is a veteran of the Civil war. He enlisted from Thompsonville in the Twelfth Connecticut Volunteers, and served nearly four years. Thirty days before he was to be discharged, he was taken a prisoner and was confined eight months in the prison at Camp Ford in Tyler, Texas, and kept there until the close of the war. He went to Thompsonville immediately after the war, and was married soon after. Five children were born to the union, all of whom have died. Mr. and Mrs. Glover have one grandchild living, Glover Campbell, who graduated from Colby college last June with honors, and is now connected with the Corbin company of New Britain, where his grand-uncle, Charles Glover, is a leading officer.

Mr. and Mrs. Glover are very active in the work of the Methodist Episcopal church, and have the distinction of being the only two surviving original members of that church, which was dedicated in 1865. He helped to build the church, has been a member of the official board for forty years, and is now the president of the board. Mrs. Glover has likewise been one of the leaders in the work as carried on by the ladies of the church through the different auxiliaries.

In the business world, Mr. Glover was engaged in the machinist business. For three years after the war he worked in the shop at the Medlicott mill, and then he started in business for himself, in later years his principal output being papermaking machinery. He retired in 1900 when he sold out the shop and business to the present owners of the Windsor Locks Machine company. In town affairs he took a deep interest and he had served on the board of selectmen and in other cities at different times. Mr. and Mrs. Glover have a host of friends here and elsewhere who will be glad to congratulate them on the happy occasion of to-day's celebration.

HARRY THAW BRINGS SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Charges Wife With Misconduct With New York Man.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 1.—Harry K. Thaw, through his attorneys, Stone & Stone, this afternoon, filed a petition in common pleas court asking a divorce from his wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, charging misconduct with John Francis of New York.

The petition is very brief covering less than one typewritten page. In it Thaw alleges that his wife was guilty of misconduct with Francis at 31 West Thirty-first street, New York, in December, 1909, and January, 1910, and at various other places and times. Thaw also declares his wife deserted him in July, 1909. The petition contains nothing to throw light on the identity of Francis other than to give his name, and in the copy filed at the court house this is almost illegible.

Francis Expresses Surprise.

New York, Sept. 1.—John Francis expressed surprise when informed here tonight that he had been named as co-respondent in Harry Thaw's suit for divorce. "I have not seen Evelyn Thaw in three years," he said. "Jack" Francis, at the time of the shooting of Stamford White, was a reporter on a New York newspaper.

ANOTHER "LAST SON"

To the Editor of The Republican:—

As to the "last son of the Revolution," I will say that Attorney W. A. P. Morris of Madison, Wis., enjoys this distinction. Mr Morris was born at Morris, Otsego county, N. Y., May 10, 1832. He is the son of Jacob Morris, who was an officer in the Revolutionary army, and who at different times was an aid to Gens Lee, Gates and Green. His father was Lewis Morris, who was a half-brother of Gouverneur Morris. Jacob Morris was in battles on Long Island, at Fort Moultrie, the second battle of Trenton, and Princeton, and was Lee's aid at Monmouth. He was born, December 28, 1756, and died January 10, 1844, aged 88 years and 13 days. The first marriage was on July 16, 1787, and his second marriage was on March 1, 1830. Twelve children were born of the first marriage, all of whom have been dead for many years.

W. A. P. Morris was born May 10, 1832, when his father was in his 76th year. Mr Morris became one of the early lawyers of Madison, the capital of Wisconsin, and is still in active practice and is carrying energetically the burdens of his profession. He greatly enjoys his friends, his bridge, his golf, and has smoked ever since he reached his youth. He has four children and numerous grandchildren, none of which take the work and play of life with more zest and cheerfulness than he, one of the last two of "last sons of the Revolution."

The other who also enjoys this distinction, as stated in a recent issue of The Republican, is Judge Jeremiah Smith of Cambridge, Mass.

Baraboo, W. S., Oct 30, 1915.

ss Virginia Bruce Loney, 16 years whose parents were lost with the sitania, has an income of about $75,000 a year, and a considerate judge has agreed with her guardian that about $25,000 a year is needed for the girl to live on. This includes $5000 for the guardian, who needs a pleasant sum to dress with in keeping with her station as chief adviser of Thomas Hart Fuller's "Select School."

To the Editor of The Courant:—

There came to my notice, recently, your issue of July 25th, in which I discovered an entertaining letter from some one concerning Thomas Hart Fuller, and Professor Andrew W. Phillips, both of Yale. The article referred to was on page 11, under the general heading "Letters from Correspondents." At the risk of being "blue penciled," I will add a little to the communication referred to.

At the time when Mr. Fuller discovered and taught Andrew Phillips, I was a farmer's boy in Lisbon, five miles from Jewett City. My father believed in education, and at some sacrifice permitted my two sisters and myself to take advantage of "Select

New Summit House Dedication

To dedicate properly the opening of the new Summit house on Mt Washington, there will be a "grand illumination" Saturday evening, not only on Washington, but upon the peaks up and down both of the big notches, and on the principal mountain peaks of Vermont, Mansfield naturally leading. Not only will there be bonfires "on a thousand hills," but signals will be exchanged. Members of the Appalachian mountain club and others will be on the different mountains to send, receive and observe signals, and will bivouac on the heights where they happen to be. The illumination will begin at 9 o'clock and will last 30 minutes, and during the day, beginning at noon, heliograph signals will be exchanged by the use of mirrors. It is rainy Saturday evening the illumination will take place Sunday. Incidentally, mountain climbers who may be on Mt Clinton the night of the illumination are advised that a new open-log shelter, similar to that in the Great gulf, has been built on the south side of Clinton, close to the Jackson-Clinton trail. It is reached also by a cut-off which has been cleared from the Crawford trail, leaving the latter about two miles above the Crawford house and passing over the low intervening ridge. The location of the camp is such that it may be reached by persons arriving at Crawford's by the afternoon train, and it affords an excellent starting point for any tramps over the range. The camp is supplied with an ax and a few tin pails and there is ample water close by.

Andrew Phillips fulfilled all expectations, climbing one step after another until he reached a pinnacle rarely attained. Old Yale, and the multitude of students who passed in and out through those classic portals during the nearly forty years of Andrew Phillips's connection with the university will carry the impress of his genius, his charming and helpful personality, through many years to come.

I did not realize my early dream of a college course at Yale. Through circumstances which were peculiar we three became widely separated, and for fifty years were lost to each other. Two years ago, however, Mr. Fuller's address became known to me, and I promptly mailed a reminiscent communication. Evidently he was

RICHTER & CO. FIRM 10 YEARS OLD TODAY SEPTEMBER 3, 1915.

Largest Brokerage House in New England Outside Boston.

The brokerage house of Richter & Co. is ten years old today. The firm was formed, with Ferdinand Richter and Arthur G. Woolley as partners, September 3, 1905. It began business in one room in the Hartford Trust company building, part of the office of Judge L. P. Waldo Marvin, and had only one employee, who was bookkeeper and telegraph operator combined.

The firm moved into its present quarters on the first floor at No. 6 Central row, December 18, 1905, taking the quarters vacated by the Western Union Telegraph Company. In June, 1907, Henry L. Wilkinson, who had represented Harvey Fisk & Sons of New York, bankers, in this city, was taken into the firm, and in November, 1912, William H. Putnam, who had represented William A. Read & Co. of Boston and New York, bankers, also taken into the firm, which at present consists of Messrs. Richter, Woolley, Wilkinson and Putnam.

The business grew rapidly and offices were opened in Springfield, Mass., and in New Britain. In 1913 the firm bought the building at Nos. 6, 7 and 8 Central row, in which its offices are located, from the Robinson estate, of which John T. Robinson and Arthur L. Shipman were trustees. The sale was negotiated through the late Hon. John R. Hills. The cost of the building and of the improvements made totaled $150,000. The upper floors are now occupied by the City Club.

At the end of ten years of existence the firm is now the largest general brokerage house in New England, outside of Boston. It has a total of thirty-four employees. It has acted as financial agent of the Hartford Electric Light Company in all its stock increases. About a year ago it took over the Bristol & Plainville Tramway Company, which also controls the electric light and gas plants of Bristol and Plainville. Acting with Bodell & Co. it secured control of the Hartford City Gas Light Company this year, the deal involving over $2,000,000. It has had a prominent part in all recent bank mergers.

Later in the month the firm will mark its tenth anniversary with a general observance at which all heads of branches and employees will be present. The event will probably take place at the Hartford Club.

A son, John James, was born Tuesday to Professor and Mrs. E. F. Humphrey of No. 16 Park terrace at the Niles Street Hospital.

Ferdinand Richter has purchased from Arthur G. Woolley the latter's undivided one-half interest in the Central Row property in which are located the offices of Richter & Co., and the City club. The property has a frontage of 44.81 feet on Central Row adjoining the Hartford Trust company and consists of a four story brick building which was remodelled for occupancy by the City club. The club occupies the three floors above the ground floor.

The property is known as Nos. 6, 7 and 8 Central Row and is carried in the tax list at a valuation of $101,600. The grantor will retain a mortgage of $45,000. Mr. Woolley is a member of the firm of Richter & Co. The transfer gives Mr. Richter sole ownership of the property.

Camp-Yeager Wedding At Newington Junction. 1913-

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ch. Yeager at the Junction yesterday afternoon their daughter, Florence, was married to Samuel Holcomb, also of the Junction. Rev. Albert Macy officiated. The ceremony took place on the lawn under an arbor of hydrangeas and ferns. The wedding was attended by the matron of honor, Mrs. Frank S. Rathborn of the Junction, and by the bridesmaids, Frances Yeager, a sister of the bride, and Miss Caroline Plimm. Ralph Hannum of Bristol, a college mate of the bridegroom, was best man. Arthur and Paul Yeager, brothers of the bride, were the ushers. Gladys Canfield played the wedding march. The bride's gown was of crepe meteor and she carried a bouquet of white roses. The matron of honor wore heliotrope chiffon and green and blue changeable silk. The bridesmaids carried purple asters. The bride wore blue crepe de chine and carried pink roses. After a wedding breakfast and Mrs. Camp will live with Camp's mother until their new home at the Junction is ready for occupancy.

POSTPONED WEDDING HELD IN NEW LONDON

Riverside Bachelor and Springfield Woman Married Three Days Late.

New London, Sept. 7.

The marriage of William Adams Birnie of Riverside, Conn., and Miss Annie Ellen Fuller of Springfield, Mass., which was postponed last Saturday to the disappointment of a number of guests who had assembled for the occasion at the summer home of the bride at Neptune Park, was performed there at 10 o'clock this morning by Rev. Dr. James W. Bixler, pastor of the Second Congregational Church in this city.

Accounts of the affair Saturday that were published locally and in Springfield said that the bridegroom is 72 years and his bride half that age. They said that all was in readiness for the wedding, which had been set for 3 o'clock in the afternoon; the minister was there waiting, twenty-five guests had assembled, decorations were complete and refreshments were on hand, but that the bridegroom did not appear.

Mr. Birnie was interviewed later at the Mohican Hotel, where he was stopping for the summer, and Mrs. Charles A. Fuller, mother of the bride, was communicated with over the telephone, but neither would give an explanation of the peculiar affair.

Different Story from Springfield.

Springfield, Sept. 7.—Several from this city went to New London for the Fuller-Birnie wedding Saturday afternoon and when word reached the city Sunday that the ceremony did not take place at the appointed time, there was much speculation as to the cause, but as both Miss Fuller and her mother, Mrs. Charles Fuller, declined to be interviewed no information of reliable nature was forthcoming.

The prominence of both of the families lent an additional interest to the situation, as the bridegroom, whose age was given in the application for his license as 72, is a well known and popular bachelor of this city, and has made his home in Hotel Kimball for some years, while the bride, whose age was given as 36, is one of the best known young women of this city. She has lived with her mother in one of the substantial mansions in upper State street and the first of June went to Neptune Park, New London, where her mother had taken a house for the summer, and among her intimate friends the rumor was current that the wedding would take place there during the month of roses. Besides her mother, the bride's family connections in this city include her sister, Mrs. Charles H. McKnight, and her brother, Robert K. Fuller. Misses Emily and Annie Bryant of New York, formerly of Mulberry street in this city, are nieces of Mr. Birnie.

Mr. and Mrs. Pease Enjoy Trip to Exposition—He a Delegate to a Convention.

About Sept 8
Henry H. Pease, secretary of the Hartford Trust company, and Mrs. Pease have returned from a visit to the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco. They left Hartford August 10. Mr. Pease went as the representative of the Hartford chapter of the American Institute of Banking, which held a convention in San Francisco from August 18 to 20. The convention was attended by bankers from all over the country. The party from the east and middle west, consisting of 500 persons, went by special train from Chicago. They were hospitably entertained on the way out by bankers in Kansas City, Los Angeles and San Diego. They also enjoyed the hospitality of the bankers of San Francisco.

One of the most interesting questions that came before the convention related to the federal reserve bank. There was no question as to the necessity of the bank or its usefulness in preventing panics. There was a difference of opinion as to the manner of conducting the system, and there was quite a spirited debate on it. Robert H. Bean of Boston was elected president for the Wellesley Graduate Returns After Eleven Months' Service Overseas as Canteen Worker.

Miss Justine De Puyster Adams, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. John Coleman Adams of No. 83 Sigourney street, returned to Hartford Thursday night after spending eleven months in France and Germany as a canteen worker.

PERSONAL AND WAR ACTIVITIES

Hartford Girl Going to Battlefront as Canteen Worker

Miss Justine De Puyster Adams, only daughter of Rev. Dr. John Coleman Adams and Mrs. Adams of this city has offered her services to France and will sail in a few days to become a worker in a Red Cross canteen close to the battlefront. Miss Adams is well known in the city as an actress. She was a member of the stock company at the Castle Square Theater in Boston, the year of her graduation from Wellesley College. During her career at Wellesley she was prominent in all college theatricals and was pronounced by Director John Craig of the Castle Square

Company as fully competent to enter the professional stage. At the close of her second week with the Castle Square players the Boston papers printed press notices from practically every dramatic critic, that Miss Adams showed much promise and would soon be heard from in wider theatrical circles than stock company. True to this prophecy, Miss Adams began the first winter season of her career, on Broadway, the goal of all young actresses. Her first part in New York was with the play, "Turn to the Right," by Winchell Smith of Farmington, at the same time understudying the leading feminine parts.

For the past year Miss Adams has been away from the stage doing war work in New York. Every week she has gone to the Red Cross headquarters and urged the leaders to let her go to France as a canteen worker. Every week she was "turned down." But it pays to be persistent for at last the summons came that she was accepted and that she was to report immediately in New York.

Miss Adams was graduated from the Hartford Public High School in 1911 and from Wellesley College in 1915. She was a member of the college dramatic club, "The Barn Swallows."

RIVER QUEENS OF THE OLD DAYS

Bones of Granite State Rot on Flats at Saybrook—City of Hartford Wrecked.

There was a time when Connecticut boasted real river queens on its broad stream flowing from Hartford to Long Island Sound. They were Big Side Wheelers.

The era of the big side wheelers began with the City of Hartford and the Granite State. The first was placed on the Connecticut in 1852 under the command of Captain D. A. Mills, later captain of the State of New York. The Granite State went on in 1853 with Joseph H. King, of Essex, as captain. Other side-wheelers were the City of Richmond, City of Lawrence and State of New York.

The City of Hartford, renamed the Capitol City, went on the Hartford line in 1852. She was 260 feet long, thirty-four foot beam (hull). Her depth of hold was eleven feet. She ran on the river thirty-four years and at last was stranded off Parson's Point, Rye Beach, at the head of the Sound, on the night of March 31, 1886. The captain and the Sound pilot declared that the reason for her being off her course was a variation in the compass.

Granite State Burned.

The Granite State was built in Greenport, L. I., in 1853 at a cost of about $150,000. She was 270 feet long, thirty feet beam (hull), and ten and one-half feet depth of hold. Her hull was twice rebuilt, the second time in the winter of 1882-1883. The repairs and new boilers cost $30,000.

The old river company dissolved in January, 1882, and in the spring the City of Hartford and the City of New York purchased at United States sale in New London, the Hartford and New York river company. The Trans-Hudson river company bought the State of New York about the same time as a spare boat, and ran in place of the Hartford and New York river company or the City of Hartford. The Hartford and New York river company was used for ex-

On March 5, 1891, just before leaving the New York slip she was discovered to be on fire and was burned to the hull, which was sold to John H. Starin for $7,700.

The State of New York, the story of which was related a week ago, including her sinking at Goodspeed's Landing, August 28, 1881, ran under the name of City of Springfield as the successor of the City of Lawrence, which had in turn succeeded the Granite State. The City of Springfield was kept on the line until her days of usefulness were over when she was sold, stripped of her fittings and her hull used as a barge. She went down off the Delaware coast in 1902. The City of Lawrence, about 260 feet in length, was a chartered boat.

Later Day Craft.

The first steamer to bear the name of Hartford only was built in 1892 by Neafie & Levy of Philadelphia. She was given her trial trip June 1, 1892. She was a distinct departure from the side wheelers. The familiar paddle boxes and hog frames were missing. She was a combination of the sea propeller and the river steamer and the two present day steamers of the Transportation company were built along the same lines. She made her first trip to Hartford on June 9, 1892, reaching here at 8:20 in the morning. In December, 1898, the Hartford was sold to the quartermaster's department of the United States government. She was renamed the Outhwaite of Cleveland, to Edward Stevens, son of Mrs. George E. Stevens of New York, which took place Wednesday at Wayside, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Jennings at Old Bennington, Vt., The Rev. Isaac Jennings, pastor of the Old First church of that town, a brother of the bride's stepfather, officiated. Miss Elizabeth Jennings, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Hart Shields and Dorothy Moon. George E. Stevens, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and the ushers were S. P. Platt and Edward H. Townsend of New York, Charles B. Waller and Watson K. Blair. The bride wore a gown of white satin and point applique lace and carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. Her attendants wore costumes of pale green and silver satin with silver trimmings. The decorations of the house were in green and white. A tea and reception followed the ceremony. Among the guests were Miss Elizabeth Kendall, Walter Camp, jr., of New Haven, who has been living in this city, Mrs. Camp and his sister, Miss Janet Camp. The bride has a number of friends in Hartford and was educated at Miss Porter's school in Farmington. She made her debut last season in New York. Mr. Stevens, who was graduated from Yale in the class of 1912, is connected with the New Haven Clock company, which was founded by his great-grandfather, Chauncey Jerome. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens will live at No. 103 East Eighty-sixth street, New York city.

Notable Home Wedding in Which Cleveland Young Man Takes Wethersfield Bride.

Wethersfield, September 13.—A pretty home wedding took place in Wethersfield, Saturday evening, when Miss Helen Dudley Buck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Buck, and Stephen Franklin Willard, jr., of Cleveland, Ohio, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Franklin Willard of Wethersfield, were married at the bride's home on Hartford avenue at 6:30 o'clock. The ceremony took place in the large reception room in front of a bower of palms and ferns, the Rev. George L. Clark officiating, and was witnessed only by the immediate family relatives and a few intimate girl friends of the bride. The double ring Episcopal service was used and the bride was given away by her father. Mrs. Winthrop Buck, sister-in-law of the bride, played the wedding march. The bride wore a lovely gown of hand embroidered white taffeta with lace and pearl trimmings and court train and tulle veil caught with pearls. She wore a beautiful pearl crescent brooch, the gift of the groom, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by Mrs. Thomas H. Willard, sister-in-law of the groom, as matron of honor, who wore light blue crepe meteor, trimmed with pink rosebuds and iridescent lace and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. The groom was attended by his brother, Thomas H. Willard, as best man. Katherine and Charlotte Buck, the two little nieces of the bride, were flower girls and wore dainty white dresses with light blue sashes and hair ribbons and carried small baskets of pink rosebuds. As they entered the room they unwound white ribbon from each side of the doorway, making an aisle through which the bridal party passed, the groom and his best man leading, then the matron of honor and then the bride with her father. Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held from 7 until 9 o'clock, attended by over 200 guests. An orchestra from Hartford furnished music and Habenstein of Hartford catered. The house was handsomely decorated, the color scheme being pink and white. The bride and bridegroom received many lovely gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Willard left that evening for a short wedding trip. They will return to Wethersfield for a few days' visit before going to their home in Cleveland, Ohio.

A daughter was born on Thursday to Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Franklin Willard, jr., of Boston, Mass. The child is a granddaughter of Edward W. Buck and Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Willard of Wethersfield.

DINNER DANCE PRECEDES CHENEY-ROBERTS WEDDING

Many Guests From Other Cities Attend Festivities At Golf Club.

A dinner dance was given last evening at the Hartford Golf Club by Senator Louis R. Cheney and Mrs. Cheney for members of the family and those who will act as attendants at the marriage of their daughter, Miss Eliza Trumbull Cheney, and John Taylor Roberts, son of Former Governor Henry Roberts and Mrs. Roberts, this afternoon. Dinner was served in a private dining room and was followed by dancing in the ballroom of the club. The music was by Carl Berger's Orchestra of Newport, which will play at the wedding this afternoon.

At the dinner dance were Senator and Mrs. Louis R. Cheney, Miss Eliza Trumbull Cheney, John Taylor Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cheney, jr., Edward C. Cawley-Billings. 11/19/15

Miss Estie Billings, daughter of Henry E. Billings, secretary of the public utilities commission, and Mrs. Billings, of No. 532 New Britain avenue, and Sherman Cawley, son of Mrs. alter L. Royall of this city, were married yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Church of the Good Shepherd on Wyls street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. George Linsley, rector of the church. The discopal ring service was used and the bridge was given away by her ther.

The bride was attended only by her matron of honor, Mrs. Earl Paek of Providence. The best man was Frederick Hill of Arlington, Mass., and the ushers were Forest E. Billings, brother of the bride; Arthur ewnton and Hayden U. Brockaway of Hartford and Howard Morse of Boston.

The bride's gown was of princess et, trimmed with white princess lace. Her veil was of tulle. She carried a hower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor wore pink taffeta and carried a bouquet of Taft roses. The only ornament worn by the bride was a pearl pin, the gift of her mother. The bride's gift to the bridegroom was a dress suit set of golden pearl and his gift to her was a gold watch and pin. The bridegroom's gifts to the ushers were stickpins and the bride's gift to the matron of honor a lavallier.

A large number of friends and relatives were present. Clifton C. Brainard, organist of the church, gave a half-hour organ recital previous to the ceremony. The processional was the Festival March and the recessional Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The church was decorated with white asters and palms. Immediately after the ceremony, Ernest N. Bagg of Springfield, Mass., a friend of the bridegroom, played the chimes in the church tower.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony and was attended by members of the family and friends.

LONGMEADOW GIRL MARRIED

Miss Grace Miriam Alexander Becomes the Bride of Spencer M. Van Deusen of Westfield at Church of the Unity

One of the early fall church weddings took place last evening in the church of the Unity, when Miss Grace Miriam Alexander, daughter of Mr and Mrs George F. Alexander of Longdeadow street, became the bride of Spencer Martin Van Deusen, son of Mr and Mrs Henry M. Van Deusen of Westfield. The ceremony took place at 7 o'clock, and was performed by Rev Augustus P. Record, pastor of the church, who used the single-ring service.

The bridal party entered the church to the strains of the "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin," played by Raymond Jacobs, organist of the church. The bride was attended by Miss Lurella C. Krentler of Detroit, Mich., as maid of honor, and by Miss Ruth H. Graham of East Orange, N. J., and Miss Orra P. Hammond of Rockville, Ct., as bridesmaids. All three attendants were classmates of the bride at Lasell seminary. The groom was unattended, and the ushers were Edward Austin, Charles F. Ely and Thomas F. Logie of Westfield, John M. Newton of Springfield and Nathaniel Thayer of Winter Hill, a cousin of the groom. The bride was given in marriage by her father, George F. Alexander.

white birch... were used to bank the front of the church, and among them were placed hydrangea blossoms and ping gladioluses. Directly in front of the pulpit was another bank of palms, and at either side of the platform upon which the bridal party stood was a large bunch of long-stemmed pink gladioluses, mingled with tritonia and asters, another basket being placed in the center before the bank of birches and palms. The pews were marked off with hydrangea blooms, tied with pink satin ribbons, and from the baskets of flowers at either side satin ribbon of the same shade marked off the side, the arrangements having been in charge of Schlatter.

The bridal gown was a directoire effect of ivory crepe meteor. The skirt was paneled with comb plaitings and had a double court train. The bodice was of chiffon and maline, trimmed with imported 1860 hexagon mesh lace and pearls. The veil fell gracefully from a wreath of lilies of the valley, flowing down over the court train, with an occasional single spray of lilies of the valley clinging to it, and the bride carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was attired in pale blue taffeta and carried a pink basket of Killarney roses tied with pale blue and pink chiffon. The bridesmaids wore similar gowns of pale pink taffeta with tulle scarfs to match, and each carried pink shepherd's crooks trimmed with pink asters.

Immediately after the church ceremony a wedding luncheon was served at the home of the bride in Longmeadow to the immediate relatives and bridal party, the Reboli company being the caterers. The house was attractive with a profusion of pink asters and ferns. Many beautiful gifts were received by Mr and Mrs Van Deusen, including a large amount of money in gold and checks, cut glass, silver, pictures, rugs and furniture. The gift of the bride's parents was a seven-piece Sheraton mahogany bedroom set, and from the groom's grandmother, Mrs Lee, they received a fumed-oak dining-room set. The bride gave her maid of honor a pendant of sapphires and pearls, and to the bridesmaids pendants set with rubies and pearls. The groom's gifts to his ushers were rosewood canes.

Mr and Mrs Van Deusen left last evening by automobile for a 10-days' wedding trip to the White mountains, the bride wearing a traveling suit of dark blue gabardine and a black velvet hat. On their return they will be at home to their friends at 17 Pleasant street, Westfield, after December 1. Guests were present at the ceremony from Detroit, Mich., Boston, Holland, and other places.

Sept. 11 - 1915

Miss Edith Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Ross of South Whitney street, and Leslie Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Reid of Oak street, were married at the home of the bride's parents Saturday evening, the ceremony being performed by

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pritchard, pastor of the church, and part in the Indian war dance Thursday evening at Stockbridge by 100 residents of that resort and Lenox. ried. Both were born in Columbia, where they were married by Rev. Frederick D. Avery, then pastor of the Columbia Congregational Church, of which both are members. Of those present at the marriage two are now living, a brother and sister of the bride, William A. Collins of Columbia and Miss Jane A. Collins of Williamantic. The honeymoon was spent with relatives in Hanover, N. H.

On their return to Columbia, they made their home in the house where Mr. Little was born, upon the farm which he worked with his father, until the death of the latter in 1876, when he assumed the management of the farm and carried it on successfully until 1908, when he disposed of his farm property and bought the place on Columbia Green which he now occupies. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Little, two sons and two daughters. The sons are both living, Clarence C. Little of Greenfield, Mass., and Dr. Samuel A. Little of Hartford. Both daughters died, Genevieve in 1886, aged 15, and Blanche Esther in 1896, aged 23.

James Pinneo Little was born December 15, 1841, and represents the eighth generation in descent from his paternal ancestor, Thomas Little, who came from Devonshire, England, and settled in Plymouth, Mass., in 1620, and the sixth in descent from his maternal ancestor, James Pinneo, who came to this country from France when a young man on account of religious persecution and settled in Lebanon.

Politically, Mr. Little has been a staunch republican, casting his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln in 1864, and never failing to vote at every state and presidential election, and at every annual town election but once, since he was made an elector in 1863. He has held most of the various town offices serving as town treasurer for many years. In 1890 he was elected to represent his town in the state legislature, which was the famous "dead-lock" session. During the session Mr. Little and Senator W. B. Foster of Rockville were appointed to act with the county commissioners in securing land and enlarging the county jail at Tolland. In 1894 Mr.

Little was elected senator from the then Twenty-third Senatorial District and was chairman of the committees on new towns and probate districts and federal relations.

LYMANS WEDDED FOR FIFTY YEARS

Judge and Mrs. D. A. Lyman to Celebrate on Sunday, Columbia, Sept. 16.

It is doing pretty well for a small town like Columbia to celebrate two golden weddings within about one week, both couples having been married in the town and by the same minister. Mr. and Mrs. James P. Little having passed their fiftieth anniversary September 11 and on Sunday next, September 19, Judge and Mrs. Dwight A. Lyman will observe the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

The anniversary of Judge and Mrs. Lyman will be observed in a quiet way at their new home about one-half mile west of Columbia Green. No invitations have been sent out and recognition of the event will be in a wholly informal way. It is quite probable that the long-married couple will attend service at the village church in the morning and from 2 o'clock in the afternoon to 10 o'clock in the evening they will be at home to all their friends and in this public way they desire to extend a most cordial invitation to all their friends to call and extend congratulations and best wishes.

Judge Lyman and Mrs. Lyman, whose maiden name was Abbie Mar-

...were married at the home of the bride's mother on Chestnut Hill, September 19, 1865, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Frederick D. Avery in the presence of two witnesses, one of whom, Mrs. Martha Manley Fuller, is still living in Middletown, the other two present being the officiating clergyman and the bride's mother, both of whom passed on a few months ago.

of the pauper laws of the state, but the instigator of many reforms, both in the pauper laws and their administration and was looked upon as one of the best posted men along those lines in the state. About one year after they went there the building was burned and during their administration all the present buildings on the place were planned and erected. In 1890 Mr. Lyman was appointed census enumerator for Willimantic and during his term of office he was

THE OLD

Judge Dwight A. Lyman Only Person in Trade T

Columbia, Oct. 9.

IF ANYONE recalls very much about Colt's willow ware industry in Hartford he will be compelled to acknowledge an acquaintance well along towards his three hundred and ten years, for the industry wiped out by fire in the spring of 1873 and, as it was never rebuilt, skilled workmen were scattered so far as is known, there is but one person in Connecticut who learned the trade there and is still living and to make the class of goods that were manufactured that he then proceeded to make.

Judge Dwight A. Lyman of Columbia learned the willow ware industry at Colt's, working there during the years of 1863 and 1864, and, after leaving there in the spring of 1865, he continued to work at the business until about 1874. He is, therefore, able to recall nearly all facts connected with the establishment of the industry by Colonel Eliel Colt, with the reasons why the business was never kept going after the closing of the factory.

Judge Lyman, at the request of "The Courant," consented to give his recollections of the rise and fall of the industry for "The Courant" readers.

It should be recalled that almost the entire area now known as the estate was liable to be inundated every year whenever the Connecticut river overflowed its banks, thus rendering that entire territory uninhabitable for the time being at least, and no person could occupy a dwelling the entire year he was pretty well not to want to occupy it at all. Colonel Colt, however, saw the possibilities lying dormant in that locality if only the water could be kept willow ware was manufactured here, what was done was mostly, or entirely by Germans in little shops in New York city and possibly in a few other of the larger cities, the stock being practically all imported, largely from Belgium, Germany and France.

In order to put the product of the dyke on the market it would be necessary to erect a plant for peeling them and drying them for the market, for the time to cut them was in the winter and the peeling must be by steam, or else they must be bundled and kept in a damp, cool place until spring and then set in the water until they could be peeled by the sap as the term was used.

Colonel Colt, therefore, decided to

Mr. and Mrs. Lyman were married September 19, 1865. They once lived in Willimantic and since their return to Columbia about seven years ago, Judge Lyman has been first selectman and has held other town offices. pressure. These cylinders revolved in pairs, in one of the pairs the upper one was the rubber covered and in the other the under one was rubber covered and levers heavily weighted held them strongly together, at the same time giving them a lateral or rubbing motion. The willows were cooked in a steam iron cylinder until the bark would slip when the requisite quantity was run between the cylinders and the bark so loosened that it could easily be cleaned off by hand. After they were peeled it was necessary to dry them as quickly as possible, this being done in a drying room heated with steam and then they were ready for the workmen.

Willows were not always used in their round state, however, and for the lighter work it was necessary to get a flat, thin splint, or, as it was called, a skein. This was done by taking willows of the requisite size and splitting them into three or four pieces, this work being done mostly by women and girls, the requisite number of slits being made in the small end, and with a simple little tool they would split the willow into the requisite number of pieces. The work of shaving off the inside so as to get

sensational as its sudden culmin-

It was love at first sight between Miss Alling and Mr. Barber. Barber returned to Wilkes-Barre on business, and the next day received notice of the engagement of Miss Alling to Mr. Wrigley. He immediately rushed to the long distance telephone and burned up $25 worth of toll line charges pleading with Miss Alling, who waited.

Barber hurried to this city and immediately pleaded his cause to a successful conclusion. Matters were arranged and the young man secured the consent of the parents of Miss Alling and hastened to the railroad station and the pair were on their way to New York, where the knot

MARRIED AT RYE BEACH, N. H.

Miss Emily Malbone Morgan Becomes Bride of Thomas Hooker, Jr., of New Haven, Ct.

Special Dispatch to The Republican.
RYE BEACH, N. H., Tuesday, September 14.

Miss Emily Malbone Morgan, youngest daughter of the late Rev Dr and Mrs G.
Brimley Morgan, and Thomas Hooker, Jr., of New Haven, Ct., were married this afternoon in the picturesque little church of St Andrew's-by-the-Sea before a company including relatives and friends from Springfield as well as from New Haven, Boston and other cities. The ceremony was performed by Rev Arthur J. Gammack of Christ church, Fitchburg, Mass., who was for a time curate at Christ church, New Haven, of which the bride's father was rector for many years.

The bride was given away by her brother, Denison Morgan of New Haven, and was attended by Mrs Richard C. Sargent of New Haven as matron of honor and Miss Florence L. Walton of East Orange, N. J., as maid of honor. The flower girl was little Miss Mary Nelson Firth, a niece of the bride, and the pages were Masters John Manning Hall and Brinley Morgan Hall, nephews of the bride. The best man was Richard Hooker of Springfield and the ushers were Henry L. Galpin of New Haven and Mansfield Ferry of New York city.

After the ceremony, there was a reception at the cottage of Mrs Morgan Fifth, a sister of the bride, on the lawn in front of which a large tent had been erected, where supper was served to some 150 guests. Among the guests were Mr and Mrs C. A. Bowles and Miss Dorothy Bowles of Springfield.

Mr and Mrs Hooker left this evening on a month's honeymoon and on their return will make their home at 51 Hillhouse avenue, New Haven, the residence of the groom's father. Mr Hooker's mother was the late Sarah Augusta, eldest daughter of Samuel Bowles, 3d, and sister of Samuel Bowles, 4th, the late editor and publisher of The Republican. Richard Hooker of The Republican is his elder brother.

A son, Thomas Hooker, 3rd, was born Tuesday to Mr. and Mrs.
Thomas Hooker, jr., of New Haven.

Mr. Hooker is a

Joseph T. McWeeney Comes From Pittsburgh To Take Charge of Sage-Allen & Company.

Sept 14 - 1915
 Joseph T. McWeeney, a recent addition to Hartford's business life, comes from the McCreery store of Pittsburgh, Penn., to be general manager of Sage-Allen & Co., inc. He comes to fill a very responsible position, and brings with him a record of phenomenal success. He began his dry goods career with the New Bedford Dry Goods company in New Bedford, Mass. His advance has been rapid and deserved. His success in New Bedford led the Stewart company of Baltimore to seek his services. Here the opportunity for greater success presented itself. Mr. McWeeney proved that he was equal to the possibilities of the store in Baltimore. From there he was called to Simpson, Crawford company of New York city. After demonstrating his ability here, he went to Pittsburgh to the McCreery store. This store is recognized to be one of the best in this country, carrying merchandise of the highest order and enjoying the best patronage of the city.

When Mr. Allen sought the services of a man to be general manager he considered many applicants, and in selecting Mr. McWeeney he feels he has made the best possible choice. Mr. McWeeney's exceptional experience will be of great value to the Sage-Allen store. He is full of optimism as to the possibilities of this store and says he believes that the country is just at the threshold of a wonderful era of prosperity. He says he is very much pleased to find here in the Hartford store so many employees of exceptional ability and feels sure that with their cooperation the store will continue its rapid growth.

Conditions in Boston Worst Record- ed During the September Reign of Oppressive Weather.

Washington, September 15.—Hot weather may continue in the east and south for thirty-six hours, the weather bureau announced to-day. Cooler weather has overspread the upper lake region and the upper Mississippi valley.

Worse in Boston.

Boston, September 15.—Higher temperatures prevailed in this city up to noon to-day than at the same time yesterday, while an abnormal humidity made living conditions even more uncomfortable. The noon temperature was 91, compared with 89 yesterday, and another new high mark for the year was expected before sundown.

Schools in Boston and several other cities and towns in the state were closed at noon because of the excessive heat. The weather bureau predicted cooler weather for to-morrow.

SUMMER HEAT

RECORD BROKEN

Temperature Reaches 91 Degrees, Highest This Season.

Sept 10 — 1915 — Old Sol had his innings yesterday and played the game of the waning season by shooting his rays down at the rate of 91 degrees per shoot. This heat was registered at 3 o'clock in the afternoon at the weather bureau on the Connecticut Mutual Building, and proved to be the record for the season. The thermometer started to climb from 69 degrees at 6 o'clock in the morning, and by noon it was hitting 90 degrees and still climbing. This mark was reached April 27. Even 91 does not break the September record, made on September 23 last year. This record was 93. The humidity reached 93 per cent. about 3 o'clock, but went down to 69 per cent. at 10 o'clock last evening.

The uncheerful news was given last night that today and tomorrow will be nearly as hot—maybe hotter. It may serve as a warning to those who are about to throw their straw hats away. Straw hat day comes September 15 officially, but may be prolonged this year if the heat comes.

Ralph W. Cutler Finds Business in That Section Good—Attends Bank Association Convention.

Sept 28.1915 President Ralph W. Cutler of the Hartford Trust company was at his desk to-day for the first time in several weeks, having returned from attendance at the meeting of the National Bankers' association at San Francisco. Mr. Cutler was president of the trust association branch and retired at this convention, but remained a member of the executive committee, and in that capacity will attend the meeting of the association next year at Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. Cutler said he found conditions in the west very satisfactory. The west has not yet felt to any degree the prosperity which has come to so many branches of industry in the east because of war business, but is inclined to be optimistic because of the great crops

LLEWELLYN SPENCER AWARDED FELLOWSHIP

Honors For Hartford Boy in Yale University Graduate School.

Llewellyn T. Spencer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Truman J. Spencer of No. 70 Deerfield avenue, has been awarded a fellowship in psychology in the Yale University graduate school, thus adding to the honors he has won in literary and scholastic lines.

Mr. Spencer was graduated from the Hartford Public High School in 1916, where he was editor-in-chief of the monthly "Chronicle" and the "Owl" and a member of the Boys' Glee Club. Before being drafted, he was an inspector at Colt's factory. In August he left with the selectives for Camp Greenleaf, Lytle, Ga. Among the honors he has won at Yale was before long the Thomas Glasby Waterman Scholarship, income of $40,000, established for three juniors and three seniors who have distinguished themselves in their studies.

Mr. Cutler said the convention of the bankers was very profitable to him, and some of the discussions were the ablest that he had listened to.

Mr. Cutler brought with him the handsome silver cup which was given him by the members of the trust branch of the association.

George Hendee was Greatest Local Hero

George M. Hendee, "our own George" as he was called, was Springfield's greatest bicycle hero. No one, before or since, ever approached his popularity on the Springfield track. He held the amateur championship of America for the mile from 1882 through 1886, when he retired, and, in addition, held titles for the 5, 10 and 20 miles at different times.

ward, speeding closely behind him. Howell had been given the pole and as the runners sped around the circuit, he kept in the lead. But always Prince was just behind him. They had made the first time round and the second half mile was well covered when the crowds saw the American slowly begin to close up. Howell spurred and as they came down the home stretch, Prince was still behind but, with a hundred feet to go, the American's wheel seemed to fairly leap forward as he shot ahead of Howell, winning by a fifth of a second.

It was at this tourney, too, that the great Hendee, riding with an injured arm, met defeat in the mile at the hands of the Englishman, Saunders Sellers.

Parsons a Half-Hour Champion

At Hartford of the same year, Charles Parsons, a Springfield rider, who rode more for pleasure than for record-breaking and racing, entered the novice race and had the distinction of holding the American amateur record for a mile, two minutes and 49 seconds, until Sellers broke it half an hour later doing the distance in 10 seconds less. C. H. Miller and F. R. Brown, the Springfield tandem team, easily defeated all comers.

In the tournament the following year, English champions triumphed. Owing to Hendee's fall in a race on the first day he was unable to compete during the rest of the meet. Furnivall, the Englishman, met little opposition in the mile as a consequence, while Howell won the professional mile title of the world. It is significant that it was at this meet, for the first time, that Howell rode one of the new safety wheels. The safety and Sellers in '84. Owing to his fall in '85, he did not race Furnivall.

Tournaments Are Reinstated

Interest flagged in racing for a time, but, under the leadership of D. Edward Miller, now president of the Natick Underwear company, the Springfield Bicycle club reinstated its yearly tournaments in 1891. By that time the old riders and the old wheels had gone. Rapid strides forward had evolved the safety bicycle, a practical and faster machine. Fur-raced under Springfield colors in 1893. At that time, it would have been difficult to select any other three men in the country who would have formed a stronger trio. And '93 was a big year. Meintges, the famous South African rider; Zimmerman, at this time at his height; Dirnberger; Pinky Bliss; all raced hard, fast races, which the whole country followed and shattered many a record. Thus it continued, so that the fame of Springfield spread throughout the country and the world.

Jay B. Lippincott and Mrs. Huntington Quietly Married at Home of Bride's Parents Yesterday.

New York, September 17.—Mrs. Mary Ludlow Bogert Huntington, former wife of E. Irving Huntington, and Jay B. Lippincott, once noted as a polo player, were married at noon yesterday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Bogert, in Lawrence street, Flushing, L. I.

The ceremony was performed by the minister of the Methodist Episcopal church of Vernon, Mr. C. Dennis. The bridegroom, Mr. Lippincott, is a student at Yale and has performed as an Episcopal clergyman as it is effective five years ago. The bride was signed in Colorado Springs, Lippincott alleging incompatibility of temper. Mr. Lippincott has no defense.

The bride wore a travelling dress of dark material and was given in marriage by her father. There were no attendants. The marriage was simpler in its details than that of the bride's sister, Mrs. Francis Brown, to Townsend Law, of Willow Bank, Flushing. Lippincott and his bride left in an automobile on a honeymoon.

Hansen-Parker.

Gladys W. Parker, daughter of Mrs. Frederick D. Parker, No. 525 New Britain avenue, and William Holger Hansen, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Hansen of Lincoln street, were married at noon yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, the Edmund C. Thomas, rector of the Methodist church, officiating, in the presence of about fifty guests. The ceremony was given away by her father. There were no attendants. The decorations were of palms and ferns, the ceremony being performed beneath an arch of golden-

The bride wore a gown of white satin trimmed with rich lace, and a tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses and a spray of the valley. The wedding was played by George Bremner. A reception followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Hansen received many handsome gifts, including a linen luncheon set from the associates of the bride in the office of the Aetna Life Insurance company and a purse of gold was given to the bridegroom by the force of the Whitney Manufacturing company.

Mr. and Mrs. Hansen left immediately after the reception for San Francisco, where Mr. Hansen has been sent by the Whitney Manufacturing company as assistant agent. They will travel by the coast by rail. They will arrive in San Francisco.

Church Wedding of Miss Lella Belle

Bannon and John Robert Sexton

—Sunday-School Anniversary.

Sept 18
Wethersfield, September 20.—Wethersfield was the scene of a pretty wedding, Saturday evening, when Miss Lella Belle Bannon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Bannon of Wethersfield, and John Robert Sexton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Sexton of Warehouse Point, were married at 6:30 o'clock in the Methodist church. The church was tastefully decorated with palms and yellow chrysanthemums, with touches of blue, the yellow and blue being the color scheme for the entire wedding. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Frederick Sexton of New Haven, uncle of the groom, assisted by the Rev. Frederick W. Andrews, pastor of the church. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, played on the organ by Miss Mabel Sexton of Warehouse Point, sister of the groom, who wore a gown of pale yellow charmeuse, trimmed with duchess lace. The four ushers led the march, followed by the two bridesmaids; then came the matron of honor and little flower girl and the bride alone, and these were met by the groom with his best man at the altar, where the ceremony was performed, the full Episcopal service with two rings being used. The bride wore a lovely gown of white crepe meteor, with princess lace and pearl trimmings and wore a tulle veil caught with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. She also wore a beautiful pendant, set with pearls and a diamond, the gift of the groom. The matron of honor was Mrs. Stanley Banks Fillow of Westport, sister of the bride, and her gown was white embroidered net, with trimmings of pale blue and pink rosebuds and she carried white chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids were Miss Gertrude McIntee of Wethersfield and Miss Marian Sexton of Warehouse Point, sister of the groom. They wore gowns of pale blue charmeuse, with yellow silk net overdress and large blue maline bows on their hair and carried yellow chrysanthemums. The flower girl was Madeline Taylor, a little cousin of the bride, and she wore white lace net, with blue sash and hair ribbon and carried a basket of small white asters. The best man was Arthur Robert Smith of Warehouse Point and the ushers were J. Elmer Bannon and Walter

YOUNGMAN OUT OF WISE, SMITH & CO.

Leaves Firm After Association in Business With Senior Member 25 Years.

Papers filed in the office of the town clerk show a change in the firm of Wise, Smith & Co., and the transfer by Solomon Youngman to I. Wise of all Mr. Youngman's interest in the properties on Main and Pratt streets. Formal announcement has also been made of a dissolution of the partnership existing between Isidore Wise, Solomon Youngman, Mrs. Gertrude Olschefske and Abraham Hutter, carrying on business of a department store under the firm name of I. Wise & Co., so far as Mr. Youngman is concerned; the business is to be carried on by the other three. The agreement was dated August 25 and the document was filed for record on the following day.

The deed was drawn in the office of Judge Albert C. Bill and transferred three pieces of property from Mr. Youngman to Mr. Wise.

The preface of the deed states that Mr. Youngman "for divers good causes and consideration thereunto moving, and especially for $100, and other good and valuable considerations received to my full satisfaction, have remitted, released and forever quitclaimed, etc."

The first piece of property transferred consists of land, buildings, etc., on the west side of Main street; the second piece consists of land with the west half of a double brick house, known as Nos. 48 and 50 Pratt street; and the third piece of land with buildings in the rear of Nos. 1217-1225 Main street. On the third piece of property mortgages are mentioned amounting to $26,000, which the grantee assumes as a part consideration. What Mr. Youngman received for his share of the business is not disclosed.

There are $23 in stamps on the deed, indicating a cash transfer, so far as the properties are concerned, of $23,000.

Mr. Youngman is away on his honeymoon. His first wife was a sister of Mr. Wise. He was married at the Hotel Claridge, New York, Tuesday, to Miss Bertha Kohn of Philadelphia, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise officiating. To the memory of his first wife, Mr. Wise's sister, Mr. Youngman dedicated a handsome Tiffany window in Temple Beth Israel, September 8, in connection with a special service of Rosh Hashanah, or the Jewish New Year.

Friends of Mr. Youngman to-day, he would return to Hartford in a few weeks and would live on Farmington avenue. That he would re-engage in business they predicted, but not the business of a department store. They said Mr. Youngman was sufficiently wealthy to be hesurly about embarking in any new business enterprise and would probably devote his time to investments. Mr. Youngman is a former member of the city government, having served as a fire commissioner.

Judge Bill, when asked to-day if he was informed as to Mr. Youngman's future plans, expressed surprise that he should be consulted. He said he would say nothing about the affairs of his client. He would not even admit that he had drawn the deed transferring the Youngman property to Mr. Wise.

The names, Wise & Youngman, on the tax books of the city, show an appraisal of $223,000 for the Main street property, Nos. 927-937; and the rear of No. 1219. The property at Nos. 48 to 50 Pratt street was appraised at $18,400, and the property at No. 921 Main, at $183,000.

Mr. Youngman had been a partner with Mr. Wise since their first store was established on Main street near the corner of Kinsley, twenty-five years ago. It was a small store and from it developed the present

 Solomon Youngman, who has returned to Hartford with his bride, announces formally his retirement from the firm of Wise, Smith & Co. Mr. Youngman says he expects to devote much of his time to travel and outdoor activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Youngman, in the course of their wedding journey, visited interesting sections of Pennsylvania, went from there to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, and thence to Canadian cities, including Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa and Quebec. They were particularly impressed while in the provinces by the great number of soldiers to be seen on every hand, also by their visit to the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre.

Returning to New York Mr. and Mrs. Youngman went, after a few days, to Atlantic City. They are stopping at the Allyn House until their new home is ready for them.

Charles Laurier Lawrence, of New York has announced the engagement of his grand-daughter, Miss Kitty Laurier Lawrence, to William Averell Harriman, eldest son of the late Edward H. Harriman, and vice-president of the Union Pacific Railroad Company. Mr. Harriman is only 24 years of age and after being graduated from Yale University two years ago served in several modest capacities while in training for a big post on the Union Pacific. He is the probable inheritor, with his younger brother and three sisters to about $75,000,000, and only about a year ago made his debut in Wall street as director of banks and railroads. Mr. Harriman was active in crew coaching at Yale, and was the first graduate at Yale ever trusted to coach its crews.

HARRIMAN-LAWRENCE WEDDING

Son of E. H. Harriman Marries Granddaughter of Charles Lanier at Lenox

The wedding of William Averell Harriman, eldest son of the late Edward H. Harriman of New York, and Miss Kitty Lanier Lawrence, granddaughter of Charles Lanier of 30 East Thirty-seventh street, New York, was celebrated at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at Trinity Episcopal church in Lenox. The ceremony united two of the prominent families and great fortunes of New York. It was a real country wedding where the simple garden flowers formed the decorations and where the reception took place at a beautiful country house.

Society, 300 strong, attended the wedding reception. A special train from New York, which arrived before 1 o'clock, brought a brilliant company. Most of these were present at the service in the church, the whole number there being about 150. Rarely has Trinity church been more beautifully decorated.

Allen Blanchard Fenno, the organist of Trinity church, who married Miss Elizabeth Lanier Turnure, the daughter of Mr and Mrs George E. Turnure, a cousin of the bride, played for half an hour while the guests were being seated. Three friends of Mr Harriman, Charles Lanier Lawrence, J. Holladay Philbin and Charles H. Marshall, seated the guests.

There were no attendants for the bride. As she walked up the aisle with her grandfather, who gave her in marriage, the organ played the Gilmartin wedding march and Dean William M. Grosvenor of the cathedral of St John the Divine, New York, and Rev William Lawrence Wood, rector of Trinity church, stepped forward to meet them. Mr Harriman stood at the left of the chancel with his brother, E. Roland Harriman, who was best man.

The bride wore a cream white satin gown with low corsage of old lace and tulle and long tulle sleeves. A rare rose point veil extended fully over the court train of satin. The lace and the veil had been worn by the bride's mother. About her neck were two strings of pearls. One had belonged to her mother, Mrs Francis Cooper Lawrence, the other had belonged to her grandmother of the same name. She also wore the bridegroom's gift, a magnificent diamond pendant.

Dean Grosvenor read the betrothal service and gave the benediction. Rev Mr Wood read the marriage service and pronounced them man and wife. Rt Rev Thomas F. Davies, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Western Massachusetts, was in the chancel. The Mendelssohn music was the recessional march. There followed a brilliant reception at Allen Winden, where Sherry catered.

Mr and Mrs Harriman departed late in the afternoon in the Harriman private car which was drawn to Pittsfield, and there was attached to a west-bound train. On their return from their wedding journey Mr and Mrs Harriman will live at Arden House at Harriman, N. Y.

A daughter was born recently to Mr. and Mrs. Edward Averill Harriman of New York.

A daughter, a second child, was born last week to Mr. and Mrs. W. Averell Harriman, at their home at Manhauset, L. I. Their first child, born last January, is also a girl.

GIVES "ARDEN HOUSE" TO SON.

Mrs. Harriman Transfers Estate Valued at $5,000,000 1916

New York, September 16.—Mrs. Edward H. Harriman has transferred to her son, William Averell Harriman, "Arden House," near Goshen, N. Y. The estate, projected by the late Edward H. Harriman as his ideal country home, includes 2,500 acres of forest, lake and stream.

"Arden House" is located on a mountain summit overlooking the Ramapo valley and the surrounding country for many miles on the western side of the Hudson river. The estate is valued at $5,000,000.

Goshen, N. Y., Sept. 16.—For the consideration of $1 and "love and affection" named in the deed, Mrs. E. H. Harriman has transferred the Arden house to her son, William Averell Harriman, together with the 2,500 acres surrounding it. The entire estate is valued at more than $5,000,000.

The deed is dated August 3, 1916, but was not placed on record in the county clerk's office in Goshen until yesterday. It is said to represent the largest single real estate transaction in the history of Orange county.

W. Averell Harriman, 24 years old, was married to Miss Kitty Lanier Lawrence of Lenox, Mass., September 21, 1915. Since his marriage he has been living in a wing of the building constructed for him.

Sept 23 - 1915

Miss Winifred Lloyd Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Porter of Hawthorne street, and Frederick Washburn, son of Mrs. Laura Washburn of Woodstock, Vt., were married yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. Dr. Charles F. Carter, pastor of the Immanuel Congregational Church. The ceremony was performed under a bower of ferns and golden rod. Only

ALBERT COOLIDGE TO MARRY

Son of the Late Dr Frederic Coolidge of Pittsfield and Grandson of the Late Albert Sprague of Chicago

Albert Sprague Coolidge, son of Mrs Frederic S. Coolidge of West street, Pittsfield, and Miss Margaret Stewart Coit, daughter of Mr and Mrs John T. Coit of East Aurora, N. Y., will be married at the home of the bride's parents Wednesday afternoon, the 22d. Mr Coolidge is the son of the late Dr Frederic Coolidge of Pittsfield and the grandson of the late Albert A. Sprague, the pioneer merchant of Chicago, Ill., who died last winter, leaving a vast fortune, which was principally divided between his daughter, Mrs Coolidge, and his grandson. Mr Coolidge will be the heir to all this fortune. He was graduated from Harvard university in the class of 1915. His bride-to-be is a member of the class of 1917 of Radcliffe college. She is studying chemistry and Mr Coolidge met her while taking lectures on that subject. He will live at Cambridge and will re-enter Harvard university for a postgraduate course in chemistry and the future Mrs Coolidge will also complete her course of study in that science.

A HARRIMAN IN A MARINE JOB

Youngster Rising in Marine Transportation Field as His Celebrated Father Did in Railroading

Young William Averill Harriman, son of the late E. H. Harriman, has apparently undertaken to duplicate in the field of marine transportation the fame his father gained as a railroad man. Mr Harriman, within a few years, thanks to large financial resources and personal energy, has made himself one of the leading figures in the attempted development and maintenance of an American merchant marine. A dozen years ago he was a student at Yale. Although lacking the physique of a varsity oarsman, he displayed such grasp of the problems of rowing and such qualities of leadership that he gained the unusual distinction of being made a crew coach while still an undergraduate. Yale has had worse coaches, but there is some difference between being an officer of the Yale navy and directing the operations of great ship and shipbuilding companies.

Economic conditions and regulatory laws have made railroad management and financial manipulation more difficult than when E. H. Harriman was consolidating his power. But a similar combination of economic conditions and laws, including prohibition and the American seamen's act, also constitute the problem which the younger Harriman, like others interested in the merchant marine, now face. That the problem is a difficult one and that its solution will be a triumph of energy and determination, must be recognized even by those who do not concede that a ship subsidy law would embody a wise public policy.

The Harriman shipping interests control among others, the United American lines and the American Hawaiian Steamship company. Their latest move in making adjustments to meet present conditions is to close the historic Merchant shipyard at Chester, Pa., and to concentrate the Harriman shipbuilding and repair work at the well known Cramp yard in Philadelphia, also controlled by the Harrimans. The purchase of the Chester yard in 1917 was Mr Harriman's first move in making himself a factor in American shipping. The yard has a unique place in the history of American shipbuilding and

C. A. ROGERS LEAVES SMITH-WORTHINGTON CO. AFTER 42 YEARS

Charles A. Rogers, connected with the Smith-Worthington Company, New York since 1873, for 42 years has been with the company and the factory, has remained with the company, and into effect next week he has made his departure for the future, and extensively through out into God's will, and forget that he has borne the burden of more than forty-two years.

Mr. Rogers' complete service when it was a day, as he has for so many years, considered an intense. Beginning trades in the Worthington plant has worked his way up by steady application and the constant practice of his motto, "enthusiasm," until he gained for himself the supervision of the Hartford plant, which is devoted to the manufacture of saddles and other equipment for horses, for which the Smith-Worthington Company is famous everywhere.

Biggest Business Ever.

The retiring secretary has the fine distinction of leaving the company in the best condition it has ever been during its long history. The company was organized August 6, 1794—121 years ago, its first two presidents giving it a century of service between them. It has grown steadily, and is now doing the largest business in its career, for which the war emergency orders are not alone responsible.

Mr. Rogers was born in this city and attended the Arsenal School. Upon being graduated from there he went to work for Rodney Kellogg on State street and, after about a year, left there for the Smith-Worthington Company, where he has been engaged ever since. His length of service may be realized by the fact that there is not left a single employee of the company who was connected with it when Mr. Rogers began by running errands and doing general work in the office.

Forty-two years is a long time for a man to be employed by one company, but in all that time, Mr. Rogers' love for his work has grown rather than diminished. His only reason for leaving lies in the fact that he believes he is now better qualified to enjoy a long vacation than he has been, and than he ever will have years to come.

His plans are indefinite, as

him to the Grand Canyon, the Rosemitte Valley and California, but wherever he goes, he will take with him that capacity for enjoying everything which has been one of his greatest assets. It was his enjoyment of his own work and his ability to inculcate in others that love of work, which has made his personal leadership and influence at the factory so pronounced.

"Little Mary" Line His Guide.

When he was a boy, Mr. Rogers picked up in Sunday school. He gave his resignation to the directors of the company Monday, asking that it take effect next Wednesday. Later Mr. Rogers called the foremen into the office and announced to them his action. The relations with them and with the employes have always been extremely pleasant and the foremen were deeply affected by the announcement. Mr. Rogers has

APPRECIATION

FOR MR. ROGERS.

OCTOBER 1, 1915.

Employees of Smith-Worthington Company Remember Retiring Official.

On the severance of his official relations with the Smith-Worthington company the employees of the company have adopted the following Resolutions Adopted by the Smith-Worthington Company on the resignation of Mr. Charles A. Rogers.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Smith-Worthington Company held at the Company's Office on September 21, 1915 the following minute was adopted and ordered spread upon the Company's record:—

On September 13th, 1915, Mr. Charles A. Rogers tendered to the Directors of this Company, his resignation as secretary, assistant treasurer, director, and a member of the executive committee, to enable him to secure much needed rest and a change of scene. This request to be relieved from the duties of his office, came as a complete surprise to all his associates.

Mr. Rogers entered this business on June 11th, 1873, over forty-two years ago. Upon the incorporation of the company, he became its secretary and a member of the board of directors. Later he was elected assistant treasurer and a member of the executive committee.

His greatest work, however, has been performed as the manager of the Hartford factory. His capacity for work has been tremendous. No hours of labor have been too long for him,—ten to twelve or more hours a day. He was never too busy to undertake one more task and no item was too small to escape his eye. He never spared himself and he has been indefatigable in his service and loyalty to this company and to its stockholders.

Today the company is in splendid condition and the organization in the factory is loyal and efficient.

His resignation comes now while in full vigor, because of a desire to rest and travel while he still has his health and strength. After forty-two years of devoted service we cannot deny the right he craves.

In accepting the resignation, we record our regret that he leaves us, and our best wishes for the years to come.

THREE SCHOOLBOYS IN THEIR BRAND NEW BUZZ-WAGON WILL CROSS CONTINENT TO SEE BIG 'FRISCO FAIR

Joseph M. Gorton, Henry C. Mitchell and Alexander Grozier On Their Way to the Pacific Coast—Car Fitted Up With Camping Accessories for Long Trip.

In their brand new buzz-wagon, Joseph M. Gorton, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Gorton of No. 67 Imlay street; Henry C. Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Amos P. Mitchell of Windsor, and Alexander Grozier, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H.

Henry C. Mitchell.

Alexander Grozier.

Joseph

Grozier of No. 127 Warrenton avenue, have left for a trip to the Pacific coast, during which they will visit the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, the exhibition at San Diego, and the Yellowstone National Park. They will be gone three months and will eat, sleep and live in the car.

The boys have been studying hard at school the past year, and their parents could think of no better way of rewarding their diligence than to give them this trip. With this idea in mind, they bought a new buzz-wagon and had it specially fitted up for the trip. The travelers will spend some time in the wheat center of the country, and will probably tour through Colorado and Arizona.

"Joe" Gorton, one of the members of the party, graduated from the High School this year. Gorton was a well-known athlete and was captain of the school football team last fall. His team was the first to beat the New Britain team in thirteen years. Gorton was a tackle of remarkable ability for a high school player and was much sought after by colleges. He was popular at school and was a member of several important committees.

Grozier and Mitchell are students at Peddie Institute in New Jersey, where they are active in the school life. Grozier is known as a football player and will make the school team next year. Mitchell is a crack track man and has won his school letter. After graduating from Peddie he will go to Princeton.

It is expected that the boys will return to Hartford in the fall much benefited by their trip and will have glowing accounts to tell of the wonders of the West.

Young Autoists Reach Frisco.
Joseph M. Gorton, Henry C. They plan to remain in San Francisco four days and then go to Los Angeles, where they will stay a week. On their way home they will pass through the Yosemite Valley and visit other sections of the West.

BRILLIANT LENOX WEDDING

HELD IN TRINITY CHURCH

Miss Elinor Buchanan Shotter and Charles Andrew Doolittle Married —Beautiful Decorations

The wedding of Charles Andrews Doolittle, Jr., of New York and Miss Elinor Buchanan Shotter, third daughter of Spencer P. Shotter of Savannah, Ga., and Lenox, took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in Trinity Episcopal church in Lenox. The church was beautifully decorated in green and white, the arrangement being made by Mrs. Henry Hollister Pease, Mrs. John C. Greenleaf and Mrs. Hamilton-Fish Benjamin, friends of the bride.

On the altar were clusters of lilies. The altar rail was hidden in clematis and the chancel was covered with bay trees, palms and ferns on either side and skirting it were rows of chrysanthemums. Right and left of the chancel were arrangements of palms and ferns, the whole being relieved with clematis and chrysanthemums. Lighted candelabra flanked the altar. On the alternate pews were festoons of clematis and this wild flower was suspended from the standards in the body of the church.

Miss Shotter walked up the nave with her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a short-length gown of white satin with flounces of rose point lace, and a veil of rose point lace caught at the coiffure with a chaplet of orange blossoms. The court train which depended from the shoulders, was covered with lace. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Isabel D. Shotter, a sister, was the bride's only attendant. She wore a simple frock of Nile green taffeta, with straight full skirt and elbow length straight sleeves. Her large brown hat was trimmed with bright ribbon matching the frock. Sash ends of ribbon hung at the back. Her flowers were a stem of white stephanotis.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. William Lawrence Wood, rector of Trinity church. Mr. Doolittle had his brother, Eben S. Doolittle of Utica, N. Y., as his best man, and the ushers were Warwick J. Kernan, Jenner Lowery of Utica, William Averell Brown, M. Douglas Cole of New York, Stephen W. Mason of Providence, R. I., Thomas Hun of Albany, Benjamin P. P. Moseley of Boston and Spencer Owens Shotter of Savannah. The ceremony was followed by a gay and brilliant reception at Osceola house on Cliffwood street, where Mr. Shotter and his family are passing the season. The genial afternoon allowed the wide porches to be used for serving the luncheon which was under the auspices of the Lenox club. Sherry's band played for the reception. The guests were received in the drawing-room, where there were beautiful decorations of chrysanthemums, roses and palms. The porches were also decorated.

The engagement was announced last month. The bride made her debut in Savannah in 1910. Mr. Doolittle, who was graduated from Harvard in 1904 and from the Harvard law school in 1908, is a lawyer and connected with the firm of Joline, Larkin & Rathbone of 54 Wall street, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Doolittle will live at 114 East Eighty-fourth street, New York. The presents received by the bride were not shown, but one of the most notable was a handsome tea service given by Mrs. Doolittle. This was a wedding gift to her mother, Mary Adams, from her grandfather, John Quincy Adams. Among the guests at the church were: Miss Mary Lewis of Philadelphia, Miss Sarah Hamilton of Petersburg, Va., Miss Grace Brown and Miss Mary Martin of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen C. Clark of New York and Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Williamson of Philadelphia, a group of particular friends of the bride.

Also present at the church were Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Doolittle, Miss Doolittle, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Miller of Utica, Mrs. Van Rensselaer, Mr. and Mrs. Garrit Lansing, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Townsend of Albany, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate, Mrs. Robert Winthrop, Mr. and Mrs. Carl de Cardorff, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. M.

PRETTY CHESTER WEDDING

Miss Hazel Florence Willcutt and Richard Burton Bristol Married in

Bride's Home

Miss Hazel Florence Willcutt of Chester and Richard Burton Bristol of Hartford were married at 4:30 yesterday afternoon, at the Maple-street home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Willcutt, in Chester, in the presence of 70 guests. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Wallace T. Miller, under a pergola erected in the north parlor. The house decorations were completed under the direction of Edward L. Cowles. The pergola had a solid background and side walls of ferns studded with pink asters, and the floor was strewn with pink flowers. The bride's gown was of ivory crepe meteor with Chantilly lace and chiffon trimmings. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor, sister of the bride, Mrs. Raymond Fletcher of Southwick, wore Nile green crepe with trimmings of shadow lace and carried an arm bouquet of white asters. The maid of honor, Miss Edith Harris of Springfield, wore pink chiffon taffeta with silver lace trimmings and carried a basket of pink asters.

The ring bearer was Roderick Harwood Fletcher, the 18-months-old nephew of the bride. The ushers were girl friends of the bride. They wore pink, green and white, carrying out the general color scheme of the decorations. The bride's mother was gowned in wistaria crepe meteor with chiffon lace trimming. The bridegroom's mother wore blue silk. The ceremony opened by a solo, "A Perfect Day," sung by Warren A. Wilcox of Granby, with Mrs. George W. Roraback at the piano. She played a melody in F from Rubinstein as the bridal procession started down the floral staircase. The line was headed by Rev. Wallace T. Miller, escorted on the arm of Clinton L. Chapin of Hartford, Ct., followed by the maid of honor. The bridegroom was on the arm of his brother, Mortimer R. Bristol of Collinsville, Ct., who was best man. Mrs. Raymond Fletcher of Southwick, matron of honor, and Roderick Harwood Fletcher, ring bearer, were followed by the bride on the arm of her father.

The double-ring service was used. The gifts were numerous, consisting chiefly of silverware, china, cut glass, pictures and fine linen. The bride's gifts to the matron and maid of honor were, silver napkin holders; to the ringbearer, a silver cup, to the ushers, silver lingerie clasps; to the pianist, a silver lemon fork. The bridegroom's gift to the best man was a gold watch fob; to the soloists, Warren A. Wilcox and Usher Clinton L. Chapin, gold coat chains. After the ceremony a buffet lunch was served, the bride and bridegroom escaped in an automobile amid shower of confetti. After a bridal tour they will make their home in Hartford, Ct.

Their first appearance in the play was when it was tried out at Ashbury Park and Long Branch, N. J., early last August, opening a week later at the Belasco Theater. With several other girls, they appear in Budd Woodbridge's surprise party in the play, but have no lines to speak. Both are understudies, however, and show much promise.

Congregation By Announcement in Pulpit.

Norfolk, Sept. 27.

Rev. William F. Stearns, pastor of the Congregational Church, read his resignation at the church service yesterday morning, much to the surprise of the congregation. The letter was as follows—

Dear Friends:—

Eighteen years ago, on the sixth of October, 1897, I was installed the minister of the Norfolk Congregational Church, with the advice of an ecclesiastical council, called for that purpose. Today I resign this office. I ask the church to permit me on Sunday, November 7 next, to return to her the privileges and responsibilities of my pastorate.

You will expect and the council you will call to advise in this matter will ask for a brief statement of the reasons for the step I am now taking. They are suggested by considerations affecting what I believe to be the well-being and the highest interests of both the church and her minister.

First: I have become convinced that should I continue in the ministry of the Norfolk Church I could not hope for that confidence and therefore that encouragement and co-operation which would make my leadership unquestioned. Without leadership, I could not fulfill my ordination vows, satisfy my ideals or meet your needs.

Secondly: While my health would permit me, without question, to meet the demands of the church and parish, if the conditions were favorable, I am assured that responsibilities and difficulties of administration, such as now devolve upon me, make it wise for me to take this present action.

It was my purpose at the special meeting of the committees of the church, called for next Sunday afternoon to express my desire that certain methods of church service should be decided as the best judgment of the committees should determine and recommend to the church, giving the assurance of my co-operation in making such plans successful.

I have now concluded that this letter is the better way in which to express my loyalty. I have little to add. I am not conscious of failure. I am well aware of shortcomings. I am sorry for these for I love the church more than my present place in her fellowship and service. I am grateful for many kindnesses, for the love and trust and co-operation of many friends. I am glad that the present membership of the church, the attendance upon the services of worship and the varied organizations of the church is gratifying.

The names of the children and youth, at home and away from home, almost without exception are read annually as members of the church at the calling of the roll. I am glad also that Dr. Rowland of Sapporo, Japan, is still our missionary and that the pastor of the Methodist Church, my friend and brother, is still my associate in the larger and broader mission of the home field. The treasury of the Federated Service with that of the Neighborly Fund have been so fully replenished this past summer by voluntary gifts, as to assure the continuance of the religious and charitable work at the center and in all the neighborhoods for another year by such methods as the church shall think best. Unity in the name of Christ, through fellowship in service will remain one of the happiest memories of my ministry in Norfolk.

I cannot speak here of the joy you have given me in permitting me to conduct the worship of the people in the Old White Meeting House to share with you here and in the chapel God's GAGER-ARNOLD—In this city, September 28, by the Rev. Irving H. Berg, at No. 260 Wethersfield avenue, John Squire Gager and Florence Diana Arnold, both of Hartford.

Miss Florence Diana Arnold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Arnold of Wethersfield avenue, and John Squire Gager, son of Mrs. Alice S. Gager of Sargeant street, were married last evening at 6:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. Only the immediate relatives and a few friends were present at the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Irving H. Berg, pastor of the South Congregational Church, of which the bride is a member. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Mrs. Edwin W. Ladd of this city as matron of honor, and the best man was Oliver J. Gager, brother of the bridegroom. The ushers were Clarence Bushnell Clapp of Wethersfield and Edwin W. Ladd. The bride's dress was of white crepe meteor, trimmed with princess lace and pearls and she wore a long tulle veil fastened with a bandeau of pearls. She carried a bouquet of bride roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The matron of honor wore a dress of pink crepe meteor and lace with fur trimmings and her bouquet was of pink mignon roses. The ceremony was performed in front of a bank of palms with which, with ferns and cut flowers, the house was decorated, pink roses being used in the dining room, where the color scheme was entirely of pink and green. At 7 o'clock a reception was held, to which about 200 invitations were issued, many of the guests being from Springfield, Holyoke and Pennsylvania. The wedding marches and other music were played by Brydon's Orchestra. The bride's gift from the bridegroom was a lavalliere of pearls and sapphires, and she gave to her attendant a gold bracelet. The bridegroom received from the bride a stickpin and he also gave stickpins to the best man and ushers. Among the many gifts which the bridal couple received was a purse of gold from the associates of Mr. Gager in the office of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company. Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Gager left for a wedding trip to New York, Atlantic City, N. J., and Washington, D. C. They will be at home after November 1 at No. 260 Wethersfield avenue. The bride was a graduate of the Hartford Public High School in the class of 1911.

Sept 30 - 1916
A daughter, Janice Arnold Gager, was born Saturday to Mr. and Mrs. John Squire Gager of No 536 Wethersfield avenue. The child is granddaughter of Charles E. Arnold, secretary and treasurer of the Luke Horsfall Company, and Mrs. Arnold.

A daughter, Anne Wyatt Johnson, was born Monday to Mr. and Mrs. Harold T. Johnson of the Normandie apartments on Farmington avenue. Mrs. Johnson was formerly Miss Helen Anne Walker, daughter* of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Walker of this city.

Wedding at Church of the Redeemer in a Setting of Easter Lilies, Palms and Ferns.

In a setting of Easter lilies and palms and in the presence of a large and brilliant assemblage, the marriage of Miss Helen Anne Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Walker of No. 196 North Beacon street, and Harold Talmadge Johnson, son of Major and Mrs. Frank E. Johnson of No. 142 Collins street, took place at 8:30, Wednesday evening, at the Church of the Redeemer, the Rev. Dr. John Coleman Adams, pastor of the church, officiating.

The lilies, palms and ferns formed a dignified and beautiful decoration in the chancel. While the guests were assembling Miss Elsie J. Dresser, organist of the church, rendered a program consisting of the overture to "Stradella," by Flotow; Humoresque by Dvorak; ballet music by Rubenstein; "Concert Caprice," by Kreisler, and, as the wedding party entered, the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin. During the ceremony the "Love Music" from Faust was played.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Charles E. Walker. She wore a simple gown of white tulle, short and full skirted in the style of Cherbit with a silver girdle. Her court train was of white chiffon, edged with silver, and she wore a long tulle veil, with no wreath, but caught at the back with sprays of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Her attendants were a maid of honor, Miss Justine de Peyster Adams, and six bridesmaids, Miss Mildred Atwood of Brookline, Mass., Miss Marian Hayes of Kalamazoo, Mich., Miss Mildred Myers of Syracuse, N. Y., Miss Dorothy Raymond White of New Britain, whose marriage to Richard B. Lewis of this city is to take place October 9; Miss Gertrude Walker, cousin of the bride, and Miss Helen Pease of this city.

The attendants wore costumes made similarly in modified crinoline fashion. Sept 27. - 1904

The ceremony was followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's parents, the house decorations being of yellow chrysanthemums and roses, and the Hartford Golf club orchestra playing during the receiving hours. The bride's mother, Mrs. Walker, wore a costume of gray tulle and silver, and Mrs. Frank E. Johnson, mother of the groom, a gown of old llama lace over peach colored silk.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Talmadge Johnson left later upon an extended wedding journey. They are to live at No. 11 Norwood street, Winchester, Mass., after spending some time in traveling and a sojourn in the country. Mrs. Johnson had been a student at Dana Hall, Wellesley, and her attendants included classmates at the school. Mr. Johnson was graduated from the Hartford high school in 1910, and from Dartmouth college in 1914. Mr. Smith and Mr. Barrett, among the ushers, having been his classmates. He is at present engaged in the lumber business at Pattee, N. H.

A number of entertainments were given in honor of the bride, including a luncheon, Monday, at the Golf club, given by Mrs. Robert Kemble Smith; a luncheon, Tuesday, by Miss Helen Pease, and the bridal party was entertained at a dinner dance, Tuesday evening at the Farmington Country club by Mr. and Mrs. Walker, parents of the bride, decorations of pink being used and seventeen guests being present.

Miss Dorothy Rothschild of New York, who was maid of honor at the marriage of Miss Frances Billings and William Monypeny Newsum in May, has been a guest of Miss Ruth Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harris Parker, having come to attend the marriage of Miss Helen Walker and Harold Talmadge Johnson. A WESTFIELD GOLDEN WEDDING

MR AND MRS G. M. CLAPP'S PLANS

The Result of the Primaries—Republicans to Put Up Active Canvass
From Our Special Correspondent.

WESTFIELD, Saturday, September 25
Golden wedding anniversaries are so rare that they are well worth celebrating. On Thursday of the coming week, Mr and Mrs George M. Clapp of 51 Broad street will have been married 50 years, and their friends will at that time be pleased to call and extend to them their hearty congratulations. They are to be at home from 3 to 6 in the afternoon and from 8 to 10 in the evening. The reception will be of an informal nature. Both Mr and Mrs Clapp are widely known in Westfield, where they have lived for many years, and each enjoys excellent health. They get around town as spry as many people of half their age, and take an active part in the affairs of the community. Mr Clapp was born in Easthampton, and his par-

Waterbury, October 1.—A notable society wedding took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, when Richard Duncan Ely, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest S. Ely of Lyme, and Miss Mildred Chase, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Chase of 42 Church street, were married in St. John's church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John N. Lewis, rector of St. John's, assisted by the Rev. Austin Bradley Bassett of the Hartford Theological school, an uncle of the groom.

The church was beautifully decorated with palms and ferns and white chrysanthemums intertwined with southern smilax in a simple and natural effect. The chancel railing was twined with smilax and four torches of chrysanthemums and asparagus fern rose along the railing on either side of the entrance to the chancel and continued in an aisle leading to the altar steps. Palms were banked behind the altar and the communion table was simply adorned with bouquets of white chrysanthemums.

Preceding the ceremony, an elaborate organ recital was rendered.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Edith M. Chase, as maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Mary G. Plum of Newark, N. J., Miss Margaret Corson of Grand Rapids, Mich., Miss Susan E. Colgate of New York; and Miss Margaret Smith, Miss Catherine W. Pierce and Miss Katherine Chase, another sister, of this city. Mr. Ely had as his best man John H. Wells of Providence, R. I., and the ushers were, his brother, Ernest Ely of Lyme, Lars S. Potter of Buffalo, Edward Griffith of Indiana, Southgate Freeman of Morristown, N. J., and Julius Smith and Theodore Prudden of this city.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful gown of white bridal satin draped with duchess lace, the floral designs of which were outlined with tiny pearls. The gown had a court train, which instead of falling from the shoulders was fastened to the sides of the waist down to the waistline falling freely from that point. She wore a tulle veil edged with duchess lace and held in place with a duchess lace cap intertwined with pearls and orange blossoms. Her bouquet was a shower of lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaids were gowned alike in frocks of apricot pussy willow taffeta combined with Lima and silver lace. The skirts were draped Turkish fashion over tunics of Lima lace edged with silver and the waists were fashioned entirely of lace with high girdles of apricot taffeta. All wore large picture hats of brown tulle with brown velvet crowns trimmed with bunches of silver grapes and carried arm bouquets of Ophelia roses. The gown of the maid of honor was of radium satin, corresponding in color with those of the bridesmaids but fashioned along slightly different lines. Her hat was trimmed with brown feathers and she carried maiden hair ferns. All wore slippers and stockings of the same color as their gowns.

HOW GREAT GAP WAS BRIDGED

Great Achievement That Appeals to the Imagination.

Less than forty years ago, Alexander Graham Bell, standing in a little attic at No. 5 Exeter Place, Boston, sent through a crude telephone, his own invention, the first spoken words ever carried over a wire, and the words were heard and understood by his associate, Thomas A. Watson, who was at the receiver in an adjacent room. On that day, March 10th, 1876 the telephone was born, and the first message went over the only telephone line in the world—a line less than a hundred feet long. The world moves a long way ahead in the span of one man's life. On Monday afternoon January 25th, this same Alexander Graham Bell, sitting in the offices of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, at New York, talked to this same Thomas A. Watson in San Francisco, over a wire stretching 3,400 miles across the continent and part of a system that includes 9,000,000 telephones, connected by 21,000,000 miles of wires.

In Space of a Lifetime.

Most wonderful of all, perhaps in the minds of those present at the opening of the new line was the fact that this achievement, the crowning glory of so vast and complex a system had taken place within the space of a man's lifetime. On March 10th, 1876 Professor Bell, working away at the simple telephone he had invented, called to his comrade, "Mr. Watson, come here; I want you," and Watson heard that first of all telephone messages over the wire. In New York on January 25th, 1915, the same voice was talking and, in San Francisco, the same ear was listening, as on that spring day thirty-eight years ago, but under what different conditions! Then the struggling young inventor and his associate had just succeeded in producing the only telephone in the world and in talking over a few feet of wire. Ahead of them were years of ridicule for their invention, indifference to their plans and opposition to their efforts. On this other great day they saw their simple contrivance as part of a vast system joining together the country's greatest and most distant cities and serving the uses of 100,000,000 people. Not many men have seen so great a fulfillment of their early ambitions, no other invention has ever taken so great a stride in so brief a time.

The Real Problem.

It, was, perhaps, little more difficult to string wires from Denver to San Francisco than from New York to Denver, but the actual construction of the line was the least of the engineer's troubles. His real problem was to make the line "talk," to send something 3,000 miles with a breath as the motive power. In effect, the voyage of the voice across the continent is instantaneous; if its speed could be accurately measured, a fifteenth of a second would probably be nearly exact. In other words, a message flying across the continent on the new Transcontinental Line, travels, not at the rate of 1,160 feet per second, which is the old stage coach speed of sound, but at 56,000 miles per second.

If it were possible for sound to carry that far, a "Hello" uttered in New York and traveling through the air without the aid of wires and electricity, would not reach San Francisco until four hours later. The telephone not only transmits speech, but transmits it thousands of times faster than its own natural speed.

But, while the telephone is breaking speed records, it must also guarantee safe delivery to these millions of little passengers it carries every few minutes in the way of sound waves created at the rate of 2,100 a second. There must be no jostling or crowding. These tiny waves, thousands and thousands of varying shapes, which are made by the human voice, and each as irregular and as different from the other as the waves of the sea, must not tumble over each other or get into each other's way, but must break upon the Pacific coast just as they started at the Atlantic, or all the line fails and the millions of dollars spent upon it have been thrown away. And in all this line, if just one pin-point of construction is not as it should be, if there is in one iota of imperfection, the miles of line are useless, and the currents and waves and sounds and words do not reach the end as they should. It is such tremendous trifles, not the climbing of mountains and the bridging of chasms, that make the transcontinental line one of the wonders of the ages.

Magnitude of the Task.

The data and figures are tremendous. The line crosses thirteen states, it is carried on 130,000 poles. Four hard-drawn copper wires, .165 inch in diameter, run side by side over the entire distance, establishing two physical and one phantom circuit. One mile of a single wire weighs 435 pounds, the weight of the wires in the entire line being 5,920,000 pounds or 2,960 tons. This, of course, is the transmission wires alone. In addition to these, each physical circuit has a phantom circuit of fine hair-like insulated wire, 4.1 mm of an inch in diameter, for its loading coils.

Simply to string this immense amount of wire across the continent, to set the poles and insure insulation, to conquer the innumerable difficulties offered by land and water, forests, mountains, deserts, rivers and lakes, was in itself a task of no mean magnitude. The Panama Canal is hailed as one of the greatest achievements of the world's workers, as it is, but the almost invisible lines of the Bell System, considered simply as to labor and cost constitute a monumental achievement.

The Panama Canal was begun nine years ago and has cost $810,000,000; within the same space of time the Bell Company has spent twice that amount in its engineering construction work alone.

Two Leaders in the Work.

For many years this line from ocean to ocean has been the dream of Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, the goal toward which he has pushed and toward which he has steadily led his associates and the army of his employees. Not the dream of a dreamer, but the prophetic vision of a practical, forceful, capable man, a man of unlimited business energy and knowledge, who could see anything in telephony except impossibilities. He not only cannot see them, but will not admit that they exist; he does not find the word "impossible" in his dictionary of engineering terms. Almost from the beginning of the telephone, his energy and enthusiasm, his dauntless optimism and ambition in everything relating to its perfection and promotion, and his idea of "universal service," have dominated the company and made enthusiasts of every one connected with it in great things or in little.

At his side through most of these years has been a slightly built, lithe, keen-eyed man, who never has to be told but once when a great thing is to be done. A nod, and a line goes to Denver; a word, and it stretches to the Pacific coast. That is John J. Carly, chief engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. A leader among the scientific men of all nations and honored by their rulers for his distinguished services in engineering accomplishment, his wide knowledge, his keen judgment and his indomitable energy have combined to make him one of the great factors in telephone achievement and advancement. He is a wizard of the wires. Long ago he said this great thing could and should be done, and through the great banks of silence that separated the East from the West, this Goethals of electricity has been cutting his way, year by year, until the great canal of human speech is done.

Others have played big parts in this drama of human endeavor and achievement, and thousands have given their share of thought and labor, but, whoever is forgotten or remembered, the names of Vail and Carly will be linked with this new triumph of science as long as man talks to

Alexander Graham Bell Arrives from New York to Unveil the Two Tablets Marking the Sending and Receipt of the First Vocal Message Over the Wire

Alexander Graham Bell, the "Father of the Telephone," arrived in Boston on the three o'clock train this afternoon from New York and was met at the South Station by representatives of the Bostonian Society and the Boston City Club. The inventor will unveil the two tablets which are to mark the site of the building from which the first message was sent by telephone and the building where it was received. The ceremony will take place late this afternoon. This evening the City Club will give a dinner in his honor.

The Bell Memorial, erected in honor of Alexander Graham Bell and his invention in Brantford, Ont., in 1874, of the telephone was unveiled last Wednesday noon by the Duke of Devonshire, governor general of Canada. Mr. Bell took part in the ceremonies. The memorial is the work of W. S. Allward of Toronto. It is on the Bell homestead, dedicated as the Alexander Graham Bell gardens. W. F. Cockshutt, M. P., originator of the plan, and president of the Bell Memorial Association, described Mr. Bell's work, resulting in the sending of the first message over a real line in 1875 between Brantford and Paris, Ont.

At the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876 the "Bell System" of that day consisted of only two telephones, one at either end of a short stretch of wire. On March 1, 1916, the Bell system and its connections in the United States alone numbered 9,200,000, not to speak of more than 2,000,000 more telephones connected to various telephone systems not associated with the Bell.

Church Can Never Tell What Financial Circumstances Future Has

in Store. He Says

NOVEMBER 22, 1915

Rev John Moore McGann delivered his first sermon as rector of Christ church at the morning service yesterday. He spoke on the future of a parish situated like Christ church, showing from his experience and observation of similar parishes the possibility that the church might come to be less fortunate financially than it is now, and the importance of providing an endowment in order that the work might be carried on in perpetuity. His discussion of this problem made a profound impression. He spoke also of the relations between pastor and people, urging complete frankness and offering his services wherever they were needed.

The text of the morning sermon was Upon this rock will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Christ in these verses, said ev Mr McGann, purposely portrayed forces which threaten the Christian church with somber and ominous power. Christ calls these forces the gates of hell; they are the subjects of frequent thought on the part of those who serve the church, and especially of a pastor when he comes to a new parish. Are the foundations of Christ church secure?

Before this question can be answered, it would be well to consider the story of another parish in a great city, even more fortunate than Christ church in its financial circumstances. Rev Mr Mc-Gann then told of Trinity parish, Chicago, a rich and fashionable church, which through the encroachments of business lost its stable foundations and was threatened with extinction. To save Christ church from the possibility of this fate, he said, considerable endowment should be provided soon. There are churches in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago which would not exist to-day if it were not for their endowments.

ev Mr McGann spoke next of the relations between a pastor and his people.
 In the department of a church, he said, it is the possibility of discussion, and he asked that complete frankness might prevail. He placed himself at the disposal of his people, to discuss their work, to interpret it, or serve them in any way.
 He also laid emphasis upon the necessity of regular church attendance as a means of strengthening the parish institution by affording self-expression to the soul of the worshiper. He closed with a statement of the position of the Episcopal church in the history of Christianity.

REFORMATORY'S NEW HEAD.

As appears in the news columns this morning, the directors of the Connecticut Reformatory yesterday elected Charles H. Johnson, now deputy warden of Sing Sing under Thomas Mott Osborne, to be superintendent, succeeding Albert Garvin, resigned.

The directors were unanimous in the selection of Mr. Johnson, as they have been in every action they have taken. His endorsements are of the highest and he stands among the first in his line of work in the country. He is especially interested in the young, and the prospect of being able to help boys and young men was one induc-ment for leaving the larger institution, where he is now engaged and giving great satisfaction, whose inmates are much older.

It is the continual effort of the management of the reformatory to cultivate hope among the boys committed to their care and to encourage them to take the new start in life that detention there gives them the opportunity to make. The many recommendations of Mr. Johnson coming from different sources, and their study of the man himself convinced the directors that they had in him one especially fitted to carry on and develop the work begun by Mr. Garvin

WHAT TO DO WITH WASHINGTON WILL

Question Pending Between State of Virginia and J. P. Morgan of New York.

CORRESPONDENCE READ BEFORE THE D. A. R.

Several Plans Suggested But Final Decision Is Yet to Be Reached.

Washington, April 25.—Correspondence between Governor Stuart of Virginia and J. P. Morgan concerning the will of Martha Washington, which is in Mr. Morgan's possession, was read to the Daughters of the American Revolution today by Mrs. William Cummings Storey.

The letters show that the matter was opened by Governor Stuart through W. L. McCorkle, president of the New York Southern society, in March last.

In reply Mr. Morgan said his only desire was that the document should be placed where it could be best preserved and of most use to the people of the United States.

Not considering the court house building of Fairfax county, Virginia, to which Governor Stuart desired the document returned, and where the will of George Washington now is, as fireproof or accessible to any large number of people, Mr. Morgan made two propositions:

One man that the state of Virginia or Fairfax county should place the original will of George Washington on exhibition at Mount Vernon, for an indefinite period and that if this were done he would present the will of Martha Washington to the Mount Vernon association for permanent exhibition there.

The other was that should the Virginia authorities not be willing to do this, the will of George Washington should be presented to the library of congress and that he would in turn present the will of Martha Washington to the nation for the same disposition.

Neither of these proposals met with the approval of Governor Stuart, who stated the people of Virginia held that Martha Washington's will was a part of the legitimate records of Fairfax county.

Governor Stuart then renewed his request that some agreement could be arrived at and there apparently the matter rests so far as disclosed by correspondence given out by Mrs. Storey.

Dr. Bell will be buried on top of Mt. Beinn Breagh, a spot chosen by himself.

President Thayer of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, on hearing the news, said: "Dr. Bell was a great man, a great inventor, a great teacher, a great father, a great husband, a great friend, a great citizen, a great man."

Precedence was given to the funeral of Dr. Bell, which was held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William Cummings Storey, on Monday, July 24, 1922.

At the funeral, the body of Dr. Bell was placed in a casket and carried to the home of his daughter, Mrs. William Cummings Storey, on Monday, July 24, 1922.

MARTHA WASHINGTON WILL

Saved From Destruction by Union
Colonel at Fairfax Court House in 1862.

The first authoritative explanation of the manner in which J. Pierpont Morgan came into possession of the Martha Washington will, to regain the custody of which the governor and citizens of Virginia have threatened legal measures, was given out by Mr. Morgan at the same time that Mrs. William Cummings Storey, president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, read to the members of that body, the entire correspondence over the document between Gov. H. C. Stuart of Virginia and Mr. Morgan.

"The will of Martha Washington was taken from the Fairfax court house in 1862," Mr. Morgan said, "by a colonel of the Union army, who rescued it from destruction by his men. This officer retained it in his possession for thirty years and shortly before his death in 1892 gave it to his daughter who, thirteen years later, in 1905, sold it to the late J. Pierpont Morgan."

"This account she related at the time of the transfer. She stated that her father's regiment garrisoned Fairfax court house in 1862 and that he had headquarters in the court house. Another command has previously occupied the place and the men had broken open the safes. The floors were littered with papers which the colonel's men used in making fires. Entering headquarters one day he found his men shoveling papers into a stove. He stopped them and in examining the papers found the Martha Washington will."

"He carefully preserved the document throughout his life and on the eve of his death gave it to his daughter."

UNABLE TO ACCEPT MORGAN PROPOSAL

Banker Suggested Mount Ver-

Washington, April 21.—Correspondence between Governor Stuart of Virginia and J. P. Morgan concerning the will of Martha Washington which is in Mr. Morgan's possession, was read to the Daughters of the American Revolution today by Mrs. William Cummings Storey.

The letters show that the matter was opened by Governor Stuart through W. L. McCorkle, president of the New York Southern Society last March. In reply Mr. Morgan said his only desire was that the document should be placed where it could be best preserved and of most use to the people of the United States. Not considering the court house building of Fairfax county, Virginia, to which Governor Stuart desired the document returned, and where the will of George Washington now is, as fireproof or accessible to any large number of people, Mr. Morgan made two propositions.

One was that the state of Virginia or Fairfax county should place the original will of George Washington on exhibition at Mount Vernon for an indefinite period and that if this were done he would present the will of Martha Washington to the Mount Vernon Association for permanent exhibition there. The other was that should the Virginia authorities not be willing to do this, the will of George Washington should be presented to the Library of Congress and that he would in turn present the will of Martha Washington to the nation for the same disposition.

Governor Stuart then renewed his request that some agreement could be arrived at and there apparently the matter rests so far as disclosed by correspondence given out by Mrs. Storey which follows:—

Governor Stuart to Morgan.

Virginia.
Governor's Office,
Richmond. March 16, 1914.
My dear Sir:—Realizing that you are fully informed as to the recent agitation in Virginia on the question of the Martha Washington will, and the various proceedings in relation thereto, I feel that it is unnecessary to present to you any detailed statement on the subject.

Coming into the governorship of the state on February 1 of this year, and looking carefully into the whole situation of affairs as then presented, it occurred to me that it would be proper to take the matter up with you through a representative Virginian living in New York.

Acting on this idea, I requested Mr. Walter L. McCorkle, president of the New York Southern Society, to call on you and state my desire that some line of action might be taken which would be deemed mutually agreeable. This he has done as my friend and representative.

In accordance with his suggestion, I now write to you personally on the subject to express the hope that some happy adjustment of the matter may have occurred to you, which will be satisfactory to all parties concerned.

Awaiting your suggestions, which I trust will be responsive at least in spirit to the respectful and courteous consideration which controls my own action, I am

Very truly yours,

H. C. Stuart, Governor.
Mr. J. P. Morgan, New York.

Mr. Morgan's Reply.

March 17, 1914.

Hon. H. C. Stuart, Governor of Virginia,
Richmond, Va.

My dear Sir: I am very pleased indeed to receive your letter of March 16th in regard to the will of Martha Washington, which is now in my possession. I may mention that the visit of Mr. Walter L. McCorkle, to which you refer, and your very agreeable letter, constitute the only official word I have had upon this subject.

In regard to the will, I have only one desire, which is that the document should be where it can be best preserved and of most use to the people of the United States. I am sure that this is also the desire of yourself and of the commonwealth of Virginia. I, therefore, venture to make the following suggestions:

The Fairfax County Court House, from what I am informed, is not fireproof, nor are documents there kept in such a way as to make them available to any large number of people. I also understand that the original will of George Washington is at present stored in that court house. I suggest, therefore, that the commonwealth of Virginia, or Fairfax County, should direct the keeper of the documents in the court house to place the original will of George Washington on exhibition at Mount Vernon, for an indefinite period, where it would be available for the instruction of a large number of people, and where it would have the benefit of the great care and protection against fire now given to Mount Vernon. If this were done, I should be glad to present the will of Martha Washington to the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association for permanent exhibition there. By this arrangement the two documents would be together at the place where they were made and where a great number of people will have the satisfaction of seeing them.

Should the commonwealth of Virginia not be willing to do this, because of the well-known fact that Mount Vernon itself is not fireproof, though such excellent care is taken to prevent accidents, then I propose that the commonwealth should present the will of George Washington to the Library of Congress, to be forever kept with the public records there, and I should present the will of Martha Washington to the nation for the same disposition. It seems to me that the bringing together of the two documents is of interest and importance. If they are placed at Mount Vernon they remain in Fairfax County and would be given as good care as possible there; if they are placed in the Library of Congress they leave the commonwealth of Virginia, but, on the other hand, they would be in the custody of one of the great libraries of the world and in a place which belongs to the whole nation. It seems to me that either arrangement would be quite appropriate, and I shall be pleased indeed to do my part in carrying out whichever of the two would be most satisfactory to the commonwealth of Virginia.

I am, dear sir, with great respect,

Yours very truly,

J. P. Morgan.

Governor's Reply.

Governor's Office, Richmond.
April 8, 1914.

J. P. Morgan, Esq.,
23 Wall street, New York city.

My dear Sir: I am in receipt of your very courteous letter of March 17th, which would have been acknowledged earlier but for the necessity for some correspondence in connection with the subject in hand, and consequent delay incident thereto.

After getting the facts fully before me, I regret to have to say that your letter does not meet the views of the people whom I represent and for whom I speak. The objection you urge against the delivery of the Martha Washington will to Fairfax County is, I fear, unfounded, since it is stated by prominent persons of that county that the clerk's office, in which this will would be kept, and in which the George Washington will is now on exhibition, is a brick building with fire-proof vaults, in which all the county records are preserved. It is thought by capable and observant people that the will would be absolutely safe in this building.

I will suggest, therefore, though I will not urge upon your attention at this juncture, that the people of Virginia hold that the Martha Washington will is a part of the records of Fairfax county, and that it belongs there, if anywhere in Virginia.

We had hoped, and indeed expected, that some agreement could be arrived at with respect to this matter which would be mutually satisfactory. Not wishing to drop the negotiations at this stage, I now venture to renew the request made through my friend and representative, Mr. Walter L. McCorkle. Awaiting your further advice, I am,

Very truly yours,

H. C. Stuart, Governor.

The last letter of Mr. Morgan to Governor Stuart dated April 17, was as follows:—

"I am in receipt of your letter of April 8, and regret to learn from it that neither of my suggestions meets with your approval. The dispositions which I proposed reached in deliberation still impress me as the best that could be made of those historic documents and their declination leaves me at loss for additional suggestion."

In addition to this was a statement given out by J. P. Morgan in New York explaining how the will of Martha Washington came into the possession of his father. At the same time, he made public his reply to Governor Stuart's letter of April 8.

How Will Was Preserved.

The will of Martha Washington, was taken from Fairfax court house in 1862, by a colonel of the Union army, who rescued it from destruction by his men. This officer retained it in his possession for thirty years and shortly before his death, in 1892, gave it to his daughter, who thirteen years later in 1905, sold it to the late J. P. Morgan. This account she related at the time of the transfer:—

"She stated that her father's regiment garrisoned Fairfax court house in 1862, and that he had headquarters in the court house. Another command had previously occupied the place and the men had broken up the safes. The floors were littered with papers which the colonel's men used in making fires. Entering headquarters one day, he found his men shoveling papers into a stove. He stopped them and in examining the papers found the Martha Washington will. He carefully preserved the document throughout his life and on the eve of his death, gave it to his daughter."

Reformatory Directors Learn Captain Carter Will Return Soon.

The directors of the Connecticut Reformatory held their July meeting yesterday at Cheshire. The resignation of Dr. Charles H. Johnson as superintendent was read. It asked that he be relieved by October 1. The board accepted the resignation and requested him to serve until his successor was chosen. The matter of a new superintendent, several applications having already been received, was left with President Morris W. Seymour to investigate and report to a meeting that will be called at his convenience.

Word was received while the board was in session that Captain Harry B. Carter, the valued probation officer, will return to the institution next Monday and not be longer in the United States military service. The members freely expressed the opinion that, though Captain Carter might be disappointed, the reformatory would be the gainer.

The inmates number 233, of whom there are 228 in first, four in second and one in third grade. A number of paroles were granted to boys who had given one continuous year of good behavior. Two who ran away and were caught were transferred to Wethersfield.

All the directors were present, except Hon. John P. Elton, who is ment can be made as beneficial to youthful prisoners as to grown men?" he was asked.

"Certainly," he said. Here John P. Elton, president of the American Brass company, and one of the Cheshire Reformatory board, who is Mr. Johnson's host, explained that the system of self-government had been used, as far as possible, in the conduct of the reformatory.

Cheshire Conditions.

"Every now and then," said Mr. Elton, "a boy runs away. We expect that. But it doesn't refute the argument that the majority of the boys will respond to confidence and will act honorably if they are given a sense of responsibility. In most cases escaped prisoners have been brought back by other boys."

Undoubtedly Mr. Johnson's views of prison reform coincide with those of the reformatory board, and undoubtedly, too, his administration will carry the self-government theory into effect as widely and completely as possible at Cheshire.

Mr. Johnson was asked what per cent. of criminals, in his experience he had found absolutely incapable of reform.

"That's a hard question," he answered. "It all depends. I should say that probably 30 per cent. of criminals are mentally defective to a greater or less degree and consequently are not amenable to ordinary treatment. Of the remaining 70 per cent., well, most of them will try to be decent if they feel that you expect them to be decent, and there is always a good chance of making good citizens of them."

Admires Reformatory.

A few minutes after his arrival here, Mr. Johnson went from Wethersfield to Cheshire in Mr. Elton's automobile. At the reformatory they met the present superintendent, and with him and E. K. Hubbard of Middletown, another member of the reformatory board, went over the whole institution this afternoon and looked over the two hundred inmates. The future head of the reformatory expressed satisfaction with the conditions he found, which he said were admirable.

TOWN OF CHATHAM WILL BE NO MORE East Hampton Holds First Town Election To- morrow.

East Hampton, Oct. 2.

Sunday will be the last day that the word Chatham can be officially used in connection with this town, for after 148 years the citizens have decided that the name East Hampton would suit them better, and the legislature decreed last spring that on October 4 the name would officially be changed to East Hampton.

The town was incorporated in October, 1767, from Middletown, and was named at that time, according to the state register and manual, after William Pitt, Earl of Chatham. It was the seventy-first town to be incorporated. Originally the town of Chatham included what is now the town of Portland, the whole territory having been set off from Middletown. Portland became a separate town in May, 1841, deriving its name from the Dorsetshire town, which is likewise famous for its quarries.

The fact that the town was officially known as Chatham, while the principal village was East Hampton, has long been a source of annoyance to many especially to strangers. It was this that brought about the move to change the name, and finally a town meeting was called last winter to petition the legislature to this effect. Much discussion pro and con arose, but it was finally voted almost three to one to change the name. The opposition came chiefly from the Middle Haddam section of the town, they thinking that the upstreet crowd were getting too much benefit by the change.

The change of name will mean that the name of the telephone exchange will have to be changed, and other changes will be made. The new town of East Hampton will hold its first election on Monday.

Cortlandt Francis Luce, a graduate of Yale university in the class of 1900, who is very well known in this city, has returned after an absence of several years in New York and is staying at present with his aunt, Miss Mary Francis of No. 101 Elm street. He is directing the office of the late Edward T. Hapgood and will be joined by his family later.

Miss Blanche V. Wallace, daughter of Mrs. Hattie L. Wallace of No. 77 Imlay street, and Frederick Johnson of this city, were married Saturday afternoon by the Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter. They left for a short wedding trip, and will be at home after December 1 at No. 35 Campfield avenue.

Oct 2 Strange-Wright. 1915

The marriage of Miss Louls Mary Wright, daughter of former Senator and Mrs. Walter H. Wright of Centerbrook, and Charles H. Strange of Minersville, Penn., took place at 7:30, Saturday evening, at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. Dr. William G. Fennell, pastor of the Asylum Avenue Baptist church in this city, where the bride had been soprano soloist, officiating. About 100 guests were present. The bride was given away by her father and was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Alfred R. Wright, as matron of honor. Morton Seoville of this city, a classmate of the bridegroom at the Sheffield Scientific school of Yale, was best man, and the ushers were Martin Wright, brother of the bride, and Northam Wright, her cousin. The bride wore a gown of white satin and tulle, with a lace veil, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The matron of honor wore white tulle and silver, carrying pink roses. During the ceremony selections that had been sung by the bride were played softly on the violin by Mr. Tuttle of Middletown, and songs were given during the evening by Miss Svea Hanson, Miss Grace Gilmore, Miss Netta Strong and Miss Helen Stein of this city, who had been associated in the study of music with the bride, Marie Seymour Bissell acting as accompanist. Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception. The guests included relatives and friends from this city, New York, New Haven, Holyoke and Essex. After their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Strange will live in Minersville, Penn.

Miss Chapin wore a gown of soft pale green chiffon taffeta with a bodice of green maline, the maline also forming the sleeves of the gown. She carried Ophelia roses. The aisle girls were gowned in simple gowns in pastel shades and with their ropes of smilax formed a pretty background for the bride. The friends of the bride who acted as aisle girls included Miss Margaret Beebe, Miss Constance Fowler, Miss Nan Pillsbury, Miss Marion Quimby, Miss Geraldine Dutton, Miss Eleanor Woods and Mrs Herbert Gordon Case of this city. Mrs Victor Hawes Wesson of Longmeadow, Miss Mary and Miss Esther Hosley of Warren, sisters of the bridegroom, Miss Martha Bacon of West Hartford, Ct., and Miss Mary Woodbury of Burlington, Vt. Mr Hosley had chosen as his best man Robert Nicholls of Los Angeles, Cal., and the ushers included Malcolm Sherwood and Herbert Gordon Case of this city, John C. Goddard of Salisbury, Ct., and Fred Hewat of North Adams, the two last named being classmates of the bridegroom at Williams college.

Although the ceremony was witnessed by only the relatives and most intimate friends of the couple, a reception was held an hour later, at which a large number of friends came in to offer their congratulations. The bride and groom were assisted by Mr and Mrs Stone and by Mr and Mrs Warren D. Hosley. Mrs Stone wore a gown of panne velvet in a shade of golden sand, the bodice of which was trimmed with lace and iridescent trimming. Mrs Hosley appeared in a gown of mauve poulx de soie, with trimmings of maline and beaded net of corresponding shades.

A large marquee had been erected at one side of the Stone home, and it was here that dancing was later enjoyed by the guests. Entrance to the marquee was through one of the large windows of the dining room, and a pretty picture was presented by the tent with its posts hidden by autumn foliage, among which were concealed the electric lights.

H. K. TAYLOR BUYS TOBACCO FARM

Will Raise "Weed" on Former Gabb Plantation in Bloomfield.

About Oct 1, 1915
Harry K. Taylor of this city has bought from George H. Gabb of Bloomfield the latter's tobacco farm of 100 acres situated about half a mile south of the Clarkville station in Bloomfield on the east side of the Central New England Railway tracks and adjoining the plantation of the Griffin-Neuberger Company. Mr Taylor has taken possession of the farm and will start raising tobacco on it next season. The price paid for the land and the sheds is said to have been about $10,000.

Eleven of the 100 acres were cultivated by Mr. Gabb. Mr. Taylor has started clearing some of the uncultivated land, which is covered with brushwood, and will at least double the amount of acreage under cultivation next year. There are two large sheds on the farm and these are being repaired. Further improvements will be made later. The land is some of the richest tobacco land in the section, and the farm is situated in the heart of the tobacco raising district.

Mr. Taylor was a member of the firm of H. K. Taylor & Co., which dealt in investment securities, until its dissolution several months ago. When asked how it happened that he had gone into tobacco farming, he replied, "Because it is a good business." H. K. Taylor & Co., underwrote the Griffin-Neuberger Company and in this way Mr. Taylor first became interested in the business.

Mr. Taylor will continue to live in Hartford. His home is at No. 122 Collins street.

Jamaica Plain Young Woman the Bride of Well-Known Springfield Man

Oct. 2, 1915

A wedding in which Springfield has much interest took place late yesterday afternoon in the Old South church in Boston, when Miss Ruth Van Buren Hugo, daughter of Mr and Mrs George B. Hugo, became the bride of Morgan Glover Day, youngest son of Mr and Mrs Robert Wolcott Day of State street. Because this was the first wedding in which the new organ of this church was brought into use, the organist, Henry E. Wrye, had planned a program of unusually fine music, which he rendered during the gathering of the guests, previous to the ceremony, which was performed by Rev George A. Gordon, pastor of the church. Mr Wrye's selections included "Marche Nuptiale," by Salome, "Spring Song," by Hollis, "Bridal Song," from the "Wedding Symphony," by Goldmark, "Minuet," by Handel, "Canzone," by King Hall, and "Wedding Hymn," by Salome. In addition to this program the "Bridal Chorus," from "Lohengrin," was played as the wedding party entered, and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," was used as the recessional.

The Old South church was very beautifully decorated for the occasion, quantities of white and pale purple lilacs being artistically arranged about the altar with masses of green vines. The pews on the broad aisle were marked by clusters of Ward roses and white lilacs, tied with pink and blue gauze ribbons.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown of white tulle trimmed with point Gaze lace, and a tulle veil fastened with orange blossoms. The skirt of the gown was full and made without a train. The bride's old-fashioned bouquet was of white orchids and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was Miss Lucia Beebe of Boston, whose gown was of pale pink and blue tulle, made with a short full skirt. She wore a dark purple chiffon hat with a purple velvet streamer, and carried pale pink roses.

The best man was Randolph Boyle of Louisville, Ky., a classmate of the bridegroom.

The bride wore her traveling suit of dark blue with a hat to match, a corsage bouquet of Killarney rosebuds and

FORD-LAKE.

Marriage of July, 1914, Now Publicly Announced—Secret From Friends
a Year. # Oct 3-1915

Bridgeport, October 6.—Mr. and Mrs. Simon Lake of Broad street, Milford, gave a family dinner party at their home Sunday evening, at which the announcement was made of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Miram Catherine Lake to Cecil Percival Ford, the marriage having taken place on Tuesday, July 7, 1914, in New London. The announcement was a great surprise to the members of the family, who while they had anticipated a betrothal announcement had not expected that the wedding would take place so soon as Mr. Ford has another year at the Sheffield Scientific school at Yale.

Mr. Lake is well known in commercial circles as the chief inventor of the Lake Torpedo Boat company, of which concern he is also president and general manager.

The acquaintanceship of the young people started when both Mr. Ford and his bride took part in "A Day at the Ranch," the play presented in Milford in April, 1912, under the auspices of the Village Improvement society. Mrs. Ford was the "bride" in the play and very harmfully impersonated the role. Mr. and Mrs. Ford's romance which started in play acting culminated in their marriage a year ago last July.

Mrs. Ford is one of the most beautiful and accomplished young women in Milford, being prominent in social affairs. Mr. Ford is the youngest son of Captain and Mrs. E. L. Ford, of Gulf street.

The bridal couple will reside in one of the new houses in Edgewood park until the house which Mr. Lake has to have built for his daughter is completed. The new home will be at Kinlock terrace.

The guests at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Adams of Bridgeport, Mr. and Mrs. Vogel, the parents of Mrs. Simon Lake, and house guests, of Baltimore, Md., Mr. and Mrs. F. Louis Clarke, Herbert Dimond of New Haven, Miss Margaret Lake, Miss Peggy Vogel, and Mr. and Mrs. Ford.

RECEIVES REWARD FOR LONG SERVICE

Case, Lockwood & Brainard
Co. Retires C. H. Lynch
After 55 Years.

Wilson Station, April 11.

No more will the early morning southbound train stop at Wilson Station at the signal set by Charles H. Lynch, who for nearly fifty-five years has been engineer at the Case, Lockwood & Brainard Company in Hartford, as that company has retired him on a pension and with the hope that he will live for many years and enjoy a well earned rest. Mr. Lynch entered the employ of the Case, Lockwood & Brainard Company on Oc-statement from "The Courant" and said that on January 1, 1920, he had been for fifty-four years a subscriber to "The Courant" and will continue to be. He entered the employ of the company following his return from the Civil War in which he fought in many engagements. In Grand Army circles he is well known both for his record during the war, his activities since then, and the famous diary which he kept of his experiences in the war. He was one of the youngest men to enlist for the war from this state having joined Company C, Eighteenth Regiment, C. V., on August 17, 1862 at Norwich. He was mustered out of service on July 7, 1865. His regiment took part in the battles of Winchester, Carter's Farm, Boonesborough, Md., Falling Waters, New Market, Harrisonburg, Piedmont, Mt. Crawford, Lexington, Buchanan, Quaker Church, Lynchburg, Salem, Snicker's Ford, Hedgesville, Cedar Creek, Stony Point, Middletown, Hupp's Mill, Smithfield, Opequan Creek, Charlestown, Berryville, and Kernstown, all in Virginia. He went through the war without receiving a wound, but had many narrow escapes. He is a member of Robert O. Tyler Post, G. A. R., and one of its past commanders.

As a commuter between Wilson Station, he was the oldest from this village having ridden back and forth on the train from his work for forty-two years. He was one of the pioneer settlers of Wilson avenue, the street that leads from the main highway to the railway station. Now the street is practically built for its entire length. Mr. Lynch was married on March 16, 1868, to Miss Elizabeth Cooley, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Horace E. Cooley. Mr. Cooley built the first house on Wilson avenue and Mr. and Mrs. Lynch lived at his home for a short time when they built their home which is next east to where Mr. Cooley lived. Mr. and Mrs. Lynch celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on March 16, 1918. Mrs. Lynch has been in poor health of late, but her condition is now somewhat improved.

Mr. Lynch has seen many changes take place not only at the Case, Lockwood & Brainard Company and in Hartford and this village. For instance he says: "I remember when 'The Courant' plant was located in a red brick building with a gable roof at the corner of Main and Pratt street."

Mr. Lynch does not know how he will occupy his time from now on, but expects after a short time he will become accustomed to the new routine and is happy over the prospects of a pleasant summer about his home. Mr. and Mrs. Lynch have two children, Charles Birsie Lynch of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Miss Fannie Lynch who lives at home. A son, George Cooley Lynch died at the age of 9 years.

RECOLLECTIONS OF GREAT REBELLION

Wilson Resident Enlisted at Company.

A chat with Charles J. Lynch of Wilson is sure to bring up memories of the Civil War and incidents pertaining to it. He is an active veteran and spends much of his time with comrades or among those who may be temporarily under the weather. He was a member of the Eighteenth Regiment, enlisting at the age of 17 in a company then being enrolled at Norwich by the late Isaac H. Bromley—"Ike" Bromley as he was called by friends and neighbors.

ment was ordered to camp at the corner of Park and Broad streets to remain for final muster out. Late in the afternoon they were ordered to entrain for their several homes over the Fourth and until the sixth, when they were ordered here again to receive their discharge papers, which finally reached them on the 7th, when they became free citizens again—a happy crowd of Uncle Sam's Boys in Blue.

In the fall of that year Mr. Lynch came here for a permanent residence, entering the employ of Case, Lockwood & Brainard, where he remained until May of the present year, when he was retired on pension by the firm. He was well known and well liked by the firm—and incidentally he rates them as being as fine employers as one could wish.

He has seen many changes about the city, particularly those on the lower end of Pearl street, where the road bed has been raised some twelve feet. He was among the marchers who passed under the Memorial Arch during the celebration of the completion of the Ford street bridge. Mr. Lynch is best known to veterans as a past commander of Robert O. Tyler Post, No. 50. He has been a reader of "The Courant" for more than fifty-six years. He was with the Case, Lockwood & Brainard people fifty-five years. He seems to be in excellent health and enjoying life as it speeds along.

The day when "The Courant" man had his chat with Mr. Lynch he was toying with a small card which he was carrying and which he showed, the day chancing to be the one on which Superintendent W. W. Stillman of the charity department was celebrating his fiftieth anniversary in the city's service. As is generally known by older citizens, Allyn S. Stillman was the father of the commissioner. The card, copies of which were quite numerous back in Civil War says:—

OLDEN WEDDING

AT WILSON STATION
and Mrs. Charles H. Lynch to Celebrate Fiftieth Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lynch No. 28 Wilson avenue, will have completed the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on Saturday, March 16, but on account of the recent death of Mrs. Lynch's mother, Mrs. E. Cooley, have decided not to have any formal observance of the occasion. The family will pass the day quietly at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Lynch were married in 1868 by Rev. Dr. C. B. Crane, pastor of the South Baptist Church, Hartford. Three children were born to the marriage, Charles, Birsie, and Fanny Lathrop Lynch, who now lives in Brooklyn, New York, and George Cooley, who died in childhood.

Mr. Lynch is a veteran of the Civil War, having served three years in the Eighteenth Regiment, Connecticut Volunteers. He is a past commander of the Robert O. Tyler Post, G. A. R. He has been employed as engineer by Case, Lockwood & Brainard Co. for fifty-two years.

MR. AND MRS. GROSS MARRIED 40 YEARS

OCTOBER 6, 1915

Reception in Honor of Anniversary at Home of Son on Asylum Avenue.

In honor of the fortieth anniversary of their marriage a reception was given to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Gross, Tuesday evening, by their son, Charles Welles Gross and Mrs. Gross, and their daughter, Miss Helen Clarissa Gross at No. 914 Asylum avenue, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Gross. About 500 guests were present, including a number from other cities and many who had attended the ceremony which the reception commemorated, at the Asylum Hill Congregational church exactly forty years before, for the marriage, like the reception occurred on a Tuesday. Mrs. Gross was before her marriage Miss Ellen Clarissa Spencer, daughter of the late Calvin Spencer and Clarissa (Root) Spencer, both of Hartford. Mr. Gross was a son of the late Mason and Cornelia (Barnard) Gross.

In decorations of the rooms red tones predominated. Many gifts of flowers from friends were used, consisting principally of American Beauty and Jacqueminot roses, carrying out the color scheme of a ruby wedding anniversary, as the fortieth is designated. There were also chrysanthemums and orchids and a background of green foliage. The supper was served in a marquee erected on the lawn and in veranda enclosed for the occasion. During the evening selections were given by Hatch's orchestra. Among the guests were Mrs. Seth E. Thomas, sister of Mr. Gross, and the Misses Thomas of Morristown, N. J., and his nephews and their families, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Gross, Colonel Harold J. Gross and Mr. and Mrs. E. Tudor Gross, all of Providence.

Congratulations on behalf of the Asylum Avenue Baptist church were presented by Major E. V. Preston, who was delegated at a meeting of the general committee of the church held Monday evening at the home of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. William G. Fennell. Mr. and Mrs. Gross are not members of the church, but the home of Charles W. Gross, where the reception took place, is next to that of Dr. Fennell, and pleasant and cordial relations have always existed between the guests of honor and the Asylum Avenue Baptist church.

At the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Gross, which took place at 7:30, Tuesday evening, October 5, 1875, at the Asylum Hill Congregational church the Rev. Dr. Joseph H. Twichell, then pastor, officiated. In its account of the wedding THE TIMES said, on October 6: "Autumn foliage and flowers formed the decorations, with smilax and ferns, and in the absence of the organist, F. Emerson, a program of appropriate music was given by George W. Steele. The ushers were Ezra Brooks, Fred M.

Bunce, Frederick W. Lincoln, and R. M. Seymes. The wedding procession was preceded by two of the ushers and two followed. It was composed of Miss Florence Roberts walking with George H. Day, and Miss Belle Spencer with George F. Lincoln of New York, and the bride and groom. The bride wore a gown of heavy corded silk with a sash of satin and orange blossoms, and a tulle veil with a wreath of orange buds. The bridesmaids wore white costumes trimmed with wreaths of various flowers, a popular fashion of the time. The Episcopal marriage service was used, and owing to recent deaths in the families of both bride and groom, no reception followed. Among the guests were the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Sill, Dr. G. L. Parmelee, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bulkeley, Mr. and Mrs. Erastus Root, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Allen, Colonel and Mrs. George P. Bissell, Judge Carpenter and Miss Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wilson, David Clark and Miss Clark, the Hon. F. W. Russell and Mrs. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Rathbun and Miss Rathbun, the Misses Stewart, the Hon. L. P. Waldo and Miss Waldo, the on. and Mrs. A. P. Hyde, W. W. Hyde, John L. Bunce, the Hon. and Mrs. R. D. Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Roberts, Flavins A. Brown, the Rev. W. L. Gage, the Rev. Dr. Burton, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. House, William A. Gross and Miss Gross."

Charles E. Gross is one of the prominent lawyers of the state and senior member of the firm of Gross, Hyde and Shipman, which he entered in 1871, when it was known as Waldo, Hubbard and Hyde. He graduated from Yale in 1869.

The ancestors of both Mr. Gross and his wife have lived in New England for nine generations. Mr. Gross is a son of the late Mason Gross and Cornelia (Barnard) Gross, both of whom lived in Hartford all their lives. A brother William H. Gross, now dead, was a partner in the book store of Brown & Gross, now G. F. Warfield & Co. Mrs. Gross, before her marriage, was Miss Ellen Clarissa Spencer. She is a daughter of the late Calvin Spencer and Clarissa M. (Root) Spencer, both of Hartford.

Mr. Gross is senior member of the law firm of Gross, Hyde & Shipman, one of the oldest law firms in Connecticut. When he first entered the firm

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

OCTOBER 13, 1915.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hart Observe

It in Simple Manner at Asylum Avenue Home.

A. Elijah Hart, secretary and treasurer of the Society for Savings, and Mrs. Hart quietly observed their golden wedding yesterday at their home, No. 846 Asylum street, only immediate members of the family being present. The house was beautiful with many flowers from friends. Eleven members of the family dined at 5 o'clock, children and grandchildren being among those at dinner.

Artemas Elijah Hart was born June 20, 1842, in New Britain, and received his education at the high school in New Britain, and at Edward Hall's boarding school in Ellington. For a time he clerked in the drug store of W. H. Cogswell at Rockville, who also kept the post office there and Mr. Hart assisted in the post office work. In 1860, Mr. Hart came to Hartford and, after clerking for some months in the dry-goods store of H. E. Mather he became clerk in the Society for Savings on Pratt street, where, step by step, he advanced until reaching his present responsible place of secretary and treasurer.

On October 12, 1865, Mr. Hart married Katherine A. O. Litchfield of this city. Mr. Hart is and has been a member of various clubs and other organizations, among them the Sons of the American Revolution, the Colonial Club of this city and the Laurentian Club of Montreal, Canada. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hart have been active in church and social work, Mr. Hart for many years being treasurer of the Park Congregational Church. He has also been treasurer of the Second North School District and a member of the West Middle District committee. For about twenty-nine years, Mr. Hart has been a director of the bourn, and daughter, Miss Constance secured the Kilbourn, of Collins street went yesterday to South Norwalk where they will remain until Thursday. Their son, Jonathan F. Kilbourn of New York, formerly of this city, and Miss Clara Kent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Kent of Brooklyn, N. Y., will be married this morning at the summer home of the bride's parents at South Norwalk. The bridesmaids will be Miss Constance Kilbourn, Miss Elizabeth Kent, Miss Theresa Farrell, Miss Adelaide Moran, and Miss Mary Carr. The best man is to be Austin Kilbourn, brother of the bridegroom, both of whom were graduated from Yale University in 1911. Mr. Kilbourn is a member of the Yale Club of New York.

OBSERVE 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Springfield - Oct 6
Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Belfield Celebrate Golden Wedding

Mr and Mrs Stiles B. Belfield held open house yesterday when they observed their golden wedding anniversary in their apartment on upper Worthington street. Their home, which was filled with many flowers, including chrysanthemums, carnations, roses, gladioluses and dahlias, as well as many potted plants, showed the high esteem in which they are held by their many friends, many of whom are members of Trinity Methodist church, where Mr and Mrs Belfield have been members for the past 17 years. Mr Belfield, who was born in Bridgewater, Ct., 70 years ago, and his wife, Susan Booth Belfield, who was born in Newtown, Ct., came to this city 17 years ago to make their home. For the past 20 years Mr Belfield has been messenger for the Adams express company.

Their out-of-town guests included their son and his wife, Mrs H. B. Belfield, Mrs Joseph Bullock and Mr and Mrs Fred N. Booth, all of Hartford, Ct., and Mr and Mrs C. Cutter of Bridgeport, Ct. Among the many beautiful gifts which Mr and Mrs Belfield received were $82 in gold, South Norwalk, Oct. 5.

Miss Clara Vivell Kent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Joseph Kent of No. 243 Garfield place, Brooklyn, with a summer residence at Hickory Bluff, this place, was married at 11:30 o'clock this morning at St. Joseph's Church to Jonathan Francis Kilbourn, son of Dr. Joseph Austin Kilbourn and Mrs. Kilbourn of Hartford. Three hundred guests were present from Brooklyn, New York, Hartford and other places. The church was decorated with autumn leaves, hydranges and chrysanthemums. The ceremony was followed by a reception at Uplands, summer home of the bride.

The bride dressed in white satin with point de venise lace and orange blossoms, white satin court train, lace veil fastened with orange blossoms and carrying lilies of the valley, was given away by her father. She was attended, as maid of honor, by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Ward Kent, who wore a coral chiffon dress with a royal purple hat and carried pink roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Constance Mary Kilbourn, of Hartford, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Mary Theresa Farrell, Miss Mary Julia Carr and Miss Adelaide Moran, all of Brooklyn. The bridesmaids wore pink tulle over pink satin, with purple hat and pink roses and carried purple astors.

Austin Kilbourn, a brother of the bridegroom, was the best man, while the ushers, Yale men, were Orrin Kilbourn, Horace Kilbourn, Dr. Arthur Nicholson and George Wilshire, all of New York; Gerald Connolly, of Boston; and Claude Stanley Hurlbutt of Philadelphia.

Rev. David J. Hickey of St. Francis Xavier Church of Brooklyn, was the officiating clergyman and Miss Olive Owens, of Brooklyn, played "Ave Maria" and "O Perfect Love," during the ceremony, while the preceding concert and the wedding march were played upon the organ by Constantino

Policeman Cashin and Mr. Cunningham Take Brides at Cathedral.

Frank Joseph Cashin, a member of the Hartford police force, took Miss Leno Oct. 3 - 1915 as bride at 8 o'clock; daughter of Assessor James T. Farrell and Mrs. Farrell of Park street, and Henry Edward McIntyre of this city were married yesterday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Peter's Church, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Paul F. McAllenney, pastor of the church. The bridesmaid was Miss Abbie Farrell of Baltic, sister of the bride, and the best man was James J. Cisosimo. The wedding marches were played by James J. McGovern, organist of the church. Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre left for a wedding trip to New York, Old Point Comfort, Va., and Washington. They will be at home after December 1 at No. 573 Main street.

After the wedding party went to the home of the groom's mother, Mrs. Winifred Cashin at No. 165 Sigourney street where the wedding breakfast was served and a reception held. Friends were present from Waterbury, where the bride formerly resided, Boston, Springfield, New Haven, Chicopee and Holyoke. The bride's present to her maid was a lavalliere set with diamonds while the groom gave his best man $25 in gold. The couple were remembered by their friends with many gifts.

Mr. Cashin is a member of the motorcycle squad recently organized in the police department. His bride has a large circle of friends in Waterbury and Hartford. After a wedding trip, which will include visits to New York and Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. Cashin will be "at home" after November 1 in their new home at No. 30 Barker street.

Oct. 3 - 1915
Cunningham-Murphy.
Miss Marguerite Irene Murphy of Spring street and Cornelius Joseph Cunningham were married by the Rev. J. Clement Martin at a nuptial high mass in St. Joseph's cathedral at 9 o'clock this morning. Philip N. Flynn was best man and Miss Grace A. Sullivan was bridesmaid. The bride's wedding gown was crepe de chine trimmed with princess lace and pearl over ivory satin. She wore a Castle cap, trimmed with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white bridal roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

The bridesmaid's dress was pink crepe de chine over satin taffeta and lace. She carried pink roses and wore a pink mirror velvet hat, trimmed with ostrich plumes and roses. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl crescent brooch and to the best man a pearl stickpin. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was an amethyst ring. There was a wedding reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Murphy, No. 22 Spring street. The couple were the recipients of many presents. Guests were present from Boston, Springfield, Worcester and Monson, Mass., New York, Schenectady, Elmira and Corning, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham have gone to Washington

The marriage of Miss Gladys Pearl Waterman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence C. Waterman of No. 30 Clermont street, to George Leland Thompson, son of Mrs. Hattie Thompson of No. 433 Burnside avenue, East Hartford, will take place at 6 o'clock this evening at the First Baptist church, the pastor, the Rev. Herbert Judson White, officiating. About 400 guests are expected. The church decorations are of southern smilax and palms, forming an arch beneath which the ceremony will be performed.

Oct. 5 - 1915
The bride is to be given in marriage by her father, and will be attended by her sister, Miss Ethel Waterman, as maid of honor, and by four bridesmaids, Miss Marian Diefendorf, cousin of the groom, Miss Dagmar Potholm and Miss Elizabeth Hawkes of this city, and Miss Gladys Tucker of New Haven, a cousin of the bride. Herbert Thompson, brother of the groom, will be best man, and the ushers are to be another brother, Paul Thompson, also Raymond Waterman, brother of the bride; Walter Brown, a cousin of the bridegroom, and Ralph Morris. Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" will be used on the entry of the bridal party, following a program given while the guests are assembling.

The bride will wear a gown of white crepe meteor, with chantilly lace, her court train fastened with pearl ornaments. Her tulle veil is to be confined by a bandeau of pearls with clusters of orange blossoms, and her shower bouquet will be of lilies of the valley. An interesting feature of the bride's costume is the fact that she is to wear the stockings worn by her great-grandmother at her marriage almost a century ago, and by her mother. The costumes of her attendants are to be in rainbow coloring of pink, yellow and green. The maid of honor will wear pale pink taffeta with tulle overskirt and silver trimming, carrying pink Maryland roses. Two of the bridesmaids, Miss Hawkes and Miss Diefendorf, will wear yellow crepe de chine and lace gowns, and two similar costumes of pale green. All will carry bouquets of Ward roses and maiden-hair fern. The ceremony will be followed by a reception and supper.

Pavements Greased

Oct. 7. — 1915

James Whitcomb Riley's 62d birthday came yesterday, and, just to make it more memorable than any that has preceded it, the entire state of Indiana joined him in celebrating it. This year was picked for honoring the poet because the citizens of Indiana wished to pay him tribute while he would be fully able to take part in it and enjoy it. In addition to the weight of years, Mr Riley has felt the burden of ill-health. He has reached that season of his life "when the frost is on the punkin, an' the fodder's in the shock," and the state of his birth and life-long residence felt that it didn't want to delay longer the complete and formal expression of its love for him.

Gov Samuel M. Ralston recently issued a proclamation asking every community in the state to set aside the day for the honoring of "Indiana's most beloved citizen." His plan was to have business suspended as much as possible. The proclamation was generally observed in every city, town and village, from Indianapolis down to Greenfield, Ind., where Mr Riley was born, and Carleton, the tiny hamlet, under the name of Tailholt, the praise of which the poet sang with the lines:—

You kin boast about yer cities, and their stiddy growth and size,
And brag about yer county-seats and business enterprise,
And railroads, and factories, and all sich foolery.—
But the little Town o' Tailholt is big enough fer me!

Greenfield took particular interest in the celebration. Many of its older inhabitants remembered James Whitcomb Riley as a little boy, unknown to the world except as the son of Capt Reuben Riley, a highly-respected citizen. Also it recalled that it is situated on the banks of the Brandywine, the little stream whose joys the poet chronicled in "Th' Old Swimmin' Hole," and of which he had said that, wandering up and down it, he "had more fun to the square inch, than ever anywhere."

Gov Ralston, Mayor Joseph F. Bell, Charles Warren Fairbanks, Meredith Nicholson and George Ade had charge of the celebration in Indianapolis. In order to lend nation-wide interest to it, they invited celebrated persons from all over the country to attend. Many accepted, William Allen White came from Emporia, Kan., Dr John H. Finley and Col George Harvey from New York; Ellery Sedgwick from Boston and Young F. Allison from Louisville, Ky., to help honor Mr Riley. The list of Indiana citizens taking part in the celebration is big. In addition to the members of the committee of arrangements, there were former Senator Albert J. Beveridge, Senator Kern, Vice-President Marshall and others.

The program of the day called for an entertainment in a local theater in the afternoon and a banquet at which Mr Riley was to be the guest of honor in the evening. It was expected that the poet would read a new poem at the banquet. At the entertainment, several of Mr Riley's poems, including "The Raggedy Man" and "Little Orphant Annie," were set to music by Mr Ward-Stevens. Dancers from Anna Parlowa's company interpreted a number of them. The banquet last evening disappointed. The committee in charge had been compelled to reject scores of applicants for accommodations, as there were seats for but 400. Former Vice-President Charles W. Fairbanks was toastmaster.

The coming of his birthday in October has a peculiar happiness for Mr Riley, he said the other day. It is his favorite month, as he attests in his poem, "Old October." In it he says:—

I love Old October so,
I can't bear to see her go—
Seems to me like losin' some Old-home relative er chum—
'Pears like sort o' settin' by
Some old friend 'at sigh by sigh
Was a-passin' out o' sight
Into everlastin' night.

James Whitcomb Riley was born at Greenfield, Ind., October 7, 1853, the son of Capt Reuben A. Riley and Elizabeth Riley. He first began contributions to Indiana papers in 1873. His dialect poems brought him his greatest fame. His first book appeared under the pen-name, "Benj. F. Johnson of Boone." Among his best-known poems are "Little Orphant Annie," "The Raggedy Man," "Leedle Dutch Baby," "Th' Old Swimmin' Hole," "An Old Sweetheart o' Mine," and "How John Quit the Farm."

Mr Riley's Speech

At the Indianapolis banquet in his honor last night Mr Riley said:—

"Everywhere the faces of friends, kindly, generous faces, some marked with serious thought and retrospection, some simply glad in the spirit of the moment; but all, all, the faces of friends, friendly proudly to be owned because they are old friends, or friends newly discovered, or Hoosier friends—at home; or from abroad—friends with kindly hearts, friends eminent in the nation's love, friends no less dear because their worth is more humbly known; a beautiful throng of friends, among which are to be missed only the faces of the women and the children. And yet, like them, friends greatly to be cherished—warm, tender, brave and strong—and all smiling like very boyhood restored to us, gently smiling, thoughtfully smiling, smiling, wistfully, twinklingly, tenderly,—a host of friendly faces, uplifted and continuous as the stars in truth, like Wordsworth's 'Ten Thousand Daffodils,' until even a pseudo-poet

Could not but be gay
In such a jocund company.

"But to one who has been blessed with length of years and a somewhat vivid memory, the brilliant gathering here to-night can but recall numberless other like scenes in which have been brought into prominence many of those dear, old friends who have, alas, passed on. And yet, as memory insistently recalls them, the radiant faces about the board to-night grow still more radiant and exalted with the faces that long since have faded from our real vision."

Mr Riley then mentioned similar scenes in which Thomas A. Hendricks, Benjamin Harrison, William Pinkney Fishback, John L. Griffiths, Walter Q. Gresham and a number of others figured.

"And there is gladness all along the line," he continued, "from the first immortal entrance of jovial character to the very present company to-night—the faces all filled with the like pleasure and happiness. And to this presence here I make my glad obeisance, and my thanks as well to those friends in alien quarters who have so kindly sent their words of cheer and godspeed; while the distinguished guests who have spoken in tribute here may be sure of my most feeling gratitude.

"And may I express particular appreciation for the words of the president of our beloved country, who has found opportunity in the stress and worry of these imperiled times to remember and to honor the hour. And no less are we all grateful for the message of Mr Howells, our master of letters—the master worthy as be-

The Poem.

Make me a song of all good things, And fill it full of murmurings, Of merry voices such as we Remember in our infancy; But make it tender, for the sake Of hearts that brood and tears that break, And tune it with the harmony The sighs of sorrow make.

Make me a song of summer-time, And pour such music down the rhyme As ripples over gleaming sands And grassy brinks of meadow-lands; But make it very sweet and low, For need of them that sorrow so, Because they reap with empty hands The dreams of long ago.

Make me a song of such a tone That when we croon it all alone The tears of longing as they drip Will break in laughter on the lip; And make it, oh, so pure and clear And jubilant that every ear Shall drink its rapture sip by sip And Heaven lean to hear.

The 150th anniversary of the organization of the First Congregational church of Williamstown was celebrated yesterday, with the principal service in the afternoon. Two days were given over to the celebration, Saturday and Sunday, with exercises yesterday morning and afternoon. There was a large attendance at all of the services, including many old members of the church, a special effort having been made to have as many as possible return. The principal speaker of the anniversary was Dr. Franklin Carter, former president of Williams college, who gave the anniversary address yesterday afternoon. He has been an official in the church for many years, both when he was president of the college and since that time.

Cavalry

NOVEMBER 4, 1915.

The first military experience of Major Howard came in 1898, when he joined the Yale battery formed among the students for service in the Spanish-American war. Although he and his comrades never reached the field of action he became interested in military work and joined the First Connecticut Infantry, in which he became regimental adjutant. Captain Davis has also had infantry experience, first joining the First Connecticut infantry in 1903. He also rose to

In a short address to the members of the troop, Major Howard said it was on a with great regret that he left the command. His personal inclinations would have led him to stay on, he added, but he had served nearly four years and realized that there were a number of men in the troop fully prepared for advancement who deserved promotion. He remarked that the action of the last legislature in taking off part of the indebtedness of more than $90,000 incurred in the building of the armory and the arrangement that the debt would be reduced in regular installments, had influenced his decision to resign, as he had determined to stick with the organization until it was on a level for the election to second lieutenant. Members of the troop who are eligible for the election to second lieutenant are First Sergeant R. W. Myers, the speaker, Sergeants F. J. Shearer, Ralph D. Cutler, Edwin C. Dickenson, Curtis L. way and be Sheldon, S. F. Westbrook, Morgan G. Bulkeley, jr., Corporals A. M. Dexter, his portion P. Wainwright, H. W. Mills, John D. Lieutenant Cutter, jr., George W. Cheney, H. loss of the services and leadership of the man who had accomplished the troop association that followed, and paid high tribute to Major Howard as a soldier and "prince of good fellows." He added that the retiring commanding officer was not lost to the troops and would be on hand often to help things along.

Captain Roberts took occasion to inform the troop that the decision of the referee that they were wiped out by the machine gun in the mock engagement at Quonset Point last summer was an error, but the maneuvers were over before it could be corrected. He outlined the work for the coming year, saying more

CAPTAIN DAVIS NOW

COMMANDS TROOP B

Nov 12 - 1915

In J. H. Kelso Davis, for several years first lieutenant of Troop B, Fifth the Militia Cavalry, and Clifford D. Cheney, its second lieutenant, have passed satisfactory examinations and have been promoted. Captain Davis now commands the troop and Lieutenant Cheney is senior subaltern. No date for an election to fill the vacancy for second lieutenant has been announced. Both officers rank from November 3 in their new grades, the promotion of Major James L. Howard, formerly commander of the troop, having caused the vacancy.

TROOP B DINES HOWARD AND GADD

Cavalrymen Entertain Retiring Officers at Farmington Country Club.

The Farmington Country Club was the scene last evening of the dinner of Troop B, Fifth Militia Cavalry, in honor of their retiring captain, James L. Howard, and Sergeant Robert Gadd. Captain Howard retires with the rank of major and Sergeant Gadd becomes a captain in the First Connecticut Infantry. The dinner was started promptly at 7 o'clock with Captain J. H. Kelso Davis acting as toastmaster. The first thing on the program, before tackling the "eats," was a rising toast to Major Howard, which was given with the troop's customary gusto, followed by the troop cheer, an "Ah Zing."

Mess was then called and all fell to, as the journey to Farmington had whetted more than one appetite. "Doc" Coholan, an ex-trooper and a former star quarter-mile runner for Yale, sang the famous "Hedge Hog Song" which made a great hit. Captain Gadd, during the early stages of the dinner, was persuaded to sing "Maryland, My Maryland," following it by reading a humorous telegram purporting to come from the European front. Private "Art" Allen next obliged with his curious and justly famous Yodle, followed closely by "Casey Jones" and "Yes, There is Rest in this College Life." Ex-Trooper "Jake" Walsh, a songster of local fame, sang "My Home in Tennessee" and "Rip Van Winkle."

The first serious speech of the evening occurred with the presentation by Captain Davis in behalf of the Troop of a wrist watch to Major Howard. The watch was engraved "To Major James L. Howard with the affectionate regards of Troop B, 5th Militia Cavalry, Nov. 18, 1915." Captain Davis paid Major Howard a great compliment when he said that he stood higher than any officer in the United States Militia, a man who Major Marshall, U. S. A., says, would be capable of filling the post of colonel in case we were called out to war. Major Howard was cheered repeatedly as he is a favorite with all Troopers, past and present. In replying Major Howard told how sorry he was to leave the Troop and what it had meant and had done for him. He said that the Troop was in one degree greater in efficiency than any other militia cavalry Troop was due mostly to Major Marshall, U. S. A. who took great interest in the Troop. Major Howard laid great stress on the importance of the personnel and the esprit de corps in keeping up the high standards of the Troop as they are and have been. He also paid his compliments to Lieutenant Clifford D. Cheney for his great devotion to the work and to his unselfish sacrifice in all the work devolving on him.

Captain Davis again took the reins to say that the entire Troop would drill next Tuesday and the Wednesday drill would be omitted on account of the Thanksgiving occurring the next night. Captain Roberts, U. S.

CAPTAIN HOWARD.

Captain James L. Howard retires from the command of Troop B, Fifth Militia Cavalry, leaving behind him a record as admirable as could be desired by any company commander of the American volunteer military service.

Certain proceedings of the past year and the discussion inspired thereby have brought most of us into the knowledge that the problem of military preparedness is serious and that the National Guard, as developed in the various units of these United States, is not a superfluous but a highly important institution of government. It is to be admitted that National Guard organizations are not and cannot be the equals of the regular army organizations upon which they are modeled and again that some National Guard organizations are not the equals of others. For ourselves we might further admit that Troop B has had more petting and more publicity than might have been good for it had its

GEN. MARSHALL IN CITY.

Former Inspector of New England National Guard Cavalry Calls on Lieutenant Colonel Howard.

Brigadier General Francis C. Marshall, United States army, who when he held a major's commission was inspector-instructor of New England National Guard cavalry and came to Hartford for inspections of Troop B, cavalry, C. N. G., was in the city to-day with Mrs. Marshall, and called upon Lieutenant Colonel James L. Howard, former commander of the cavalry troop.

General Marshall—then major—was commandant of the joint camp of instruction of the first cavalry district held at Hampton in 1914, and presented to Troop B at the conclusion of that tour of duty a prize for the troop's superior showing in discipline, horsemanship, sanitary care and tactical efficiency.

He attained his present rank on December 17, 1917, and served overseas for more than a year in the great war. He was successively in command of the 165th Artillery brigade, Ninetieth division; the Second Infantry brigade, First division; and the Eighth Infantry brigade, Fourth division. He landed in this country on Friday on his return from duty with the army of occupation in Germany.

Springfield, Oct. 12.

The attractive home of Mr and Mrs James Ferguson on Maplewood terrace with its decorations of richly colored autumn leaves, chrysanthemums and Killarney roses, was the scene of a pretty wedding last evening when their daughter, Nellie H. Ferguson, became the bride of George R. Yerrall, Jr., son of Mr and Mrs George R. Yerrall of Maplewood terrace. The ceremony took place at 7.30 o'clock and was performed by Rev Charles E.

The ceremony was performed in the living room and an unusual arrangement was made of the bridal party in that the ushers came last, closing in the bridal party by the satin ropes they carried. As the "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin" was played by Jacobs's orchestra, the bridal party came down the stairs and across the hall to the living room, led by the aisle girls. They were followed in turn by the bride, the maid of honor and the flower girl, who walked directly before the bride, who was attended by her father, and followed by the ushers. The party was met by the minister, the bridegroom and his best man before a screen of autumn leaves, which completely covered one side of the living room.

The decorations were in charge of Robinson, who arranged the profusion of autumn foliage and cut flowers about the house. In the living room besides the screen of autumn foliage, the mantel was banked with white chrysanthemums, with the fireplace below banked with ferns and hydrangeas. The chandelier, as all those in the lower floor, was festooned with asparagus and smilax. Across the hall in the reception room yellow chrysanthemums were used, and in the hall, where the orchestra were stationed, autumn leaves, which were twined about the balustrade of the stairway, ferns, palms and hydrangeas were used. In the rooms on the second floor, pink chrysanthemums and pink roses were used.

Following the ceremony a reception was held, the bride and bridegroom being assisted in receiving by Mr and Mrs Ferguson and Mr and Mrs Yerrall. Mrs Ferguson wore a robe of black chiffon over lavender crepe meteor with trimmings of black lace. She wore a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs Yerrall appeared in black net and lace made over white satin, and also wore a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley. A buffet luncheon was served by Patrell, and the table in the dining room was made attractive by a mound of pink Killarney roses, and with ribbons which came from the chandelier to the favor baskets.

Many beautiful and rare gifts were received by Mr and Mrs Yerrall, including furniture, cut-glass, silver and china. The gift of the bride to her maid of honor was a gold bracelet, while her gifts to the other three were brooches. The gifts of the bridegroom to his best man and ushers were the same, stick pins. Mr and Mrs Yerrall left last evening for a wedding trip of a few weeks and are to be at home to their friends after December 1 at 45 East Alvord street. Both Mr Yerrall and his bride were educated in the Springfield schools, and Mr Yerrall is a graduate of Amherst in the class of 1911. His is a member of Phi chapter, Chi Phi, and was prominent in his class and college work. He is now engaged in the real estate and insurance business in the city.

Arthur A. Donchian Alleged to Have Squandered Much of $30,000 Legacy.

Judge L. P. Waldo Marvin of the probate court made no decision yesterday in the hearing on the application of Mrs. Armenouhi Donchian, widow of Samuel B. Donchian, to have her son, Arthur A. Donchian of No. 85 Gillett street put under restraint on account of alleged mental deficiency. An application for the appointment of a conservator over him, which was also made out by his mother, and supported by Dr. Paul Waterman, Dr. A. E. Abrams and Dr. Charles C. Beach, was continued for hearing October 12, at the request of Lawyer Walter S. Schutz, representing Mr. Donchian, who is 22 years old.

It was brought out at the hearing that, by mismanagement of business affairs, young Donchian had squandered much of the $30,355.17, which he inherited from his father. Dr. Waterman testified that he was of the opinion that the young man is insane. By persuasion, he went voluntarily this month to Dr. Vaill's Sanatorium at Enfield and it was on the day after his arrival there that the papers applying to the probate court that he be declared irresponsible were served on him. He immediately demanded that he be represented at the hearing.

According to the testimony of Dr. Waterman, Donchian has a mental disorder which causes him peculiar interpretations of family matters and has caused him to make threats against his mother and brothers. He is emotionally insane, the doctor said, adding that, although Donchian admitted that he had not spoken to his fiancé about marriage, he had told him of his approaching wedding.

Donchian admitted, in court, that he had thought of marriage. He believed, he said, that all young men think seriously of marriage, at some time during their lives. He said that he and his mother differed in business matters and that, although he tried to be friendly with her, the situation between them was not as smooth as it should be. It was his belief, he said that, after passing his twenty-first year, a young man had the legal right to make legal transactions without the sanction of his parent or parents.

A letter written by young Donchian was presented and Judge Marvin said that he wanted to peruse it before making decision in the matter. In the meantime, he suggested that he continue his voluntary stay at Dr. Vaill's institution.

CONSERVATOR NAMED FOR ARTHUR DONCHIAN

In the probate court this afternoon Judge L. P. W. Marvin heard arguments on the application for a conservator of the estate of Arthur Donchian of this city. By mutual consent the Connecticut Trust & Safe Deposit Company was named as conservator. The application for commitment of the young man to some institution, heard two weeks ago, was dismissed by Judge Marvin, as there was no evidence to show that he was insane.

St. Mark's Episcopal Church To Be

Popular Couple.

New Britain - Oct 9

St. Mark's Episcopal church will be the scene of the wedding of Miss Dorothy Raymond White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. White of No. 31 Curtis street, and Richard Brainerd Lewis, son of Robert H. Lewis of Hartford, this evening at 7 o'clock. A large number of friends of the couple will be present.

The bride, becomingly attired in white tulle, wearing a veil caught up with orange blossoms, and carrying a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids, will enter the church through the center aisle, escorted by her father. The ushers, David and Robert Lewis, brothers of the groom; Harold White, brother of the bride; and Walker and James Strong of Hartford, and the Misses Polly and Eleanor White, sisters of the bride, with Alice Hart, Barbara Moore, Elise Russell and Ruth Bristol, bridesmaids, will lead the procession to the strains of the Bridal chorus from Lohengrin. The bridesmaids will be attired in pink tulle and will carry roses. The groom, accompanied by Frank Whipple of Hartford, as best man, will enter from the vestry, and will join the bridal party at the chancel, where the bride will be given away by her father. The Rev. Harry I. Bodley, rector of St. Mark's, will tie the nuptial knot, using the Episcopal service. The church will be most attractively decorated. Palms and pink gladioli will be used.

A wedding reception for the relatives and a Miss Marian Louise Colby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Colby, of No. 334 Wethersfield street, and Clarence Bushnell, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Clapp, of Wethersfield, were married at 7 o'clock, Saturday evening, at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter, pastor of the Center church, officiating. Decorations of autumn foliage, fuses and palms were used in the house, and about 100 guests were present. While the guests were assembling and during the reception that followed the ceremony, a program of music was given by Harold N. Clapp, brother of the bridegroom, who also played the wedding march, and Miss Priscilla Norton sang. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by Miss Alta M. Risdon, of Trenton, N. J., as maid of honor. Elliott H. Clapp, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Dudley J. Clapp, another brother; Harold H. Winship, and Leland M. Wilson. The bride wore a gown of white satin and Chantilly lace, with a tulle veil, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her attendant wore a costume of rose pink taffeta and carried pink roses. A reception and supper followed the ceremony, and Mr. and Mrs. Clapp left, after the wedding trip, on their wedding trip, the bride wearing a suit of Belgian blue with fur and a hat to match. They will be at home, after the wedding, at No. 354 Fairfield street.

With decorations of white chrysanthemums, palms and ferns as a background, the marriage of Miss Mary Grace Harvey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Foster E. Harvey of No. 361 Windsor avenue, and Edwin Eggleston Sage, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Sage of No. 12 South Highland street, took place at 8 o'clock Thursday evening at the Windsor Avenue Congregational church, the Rev. Albert Terry Tamblyn, pastor of the church, officiating, in the presence of about 600 guests. The bride was given in marriage by her father and her sister, Miss Florence Harvey, was maid of honor. There were four bridesmaids, Miss Marion Sutherland of West Pittston, Penn.; Miss Eunice Strong of Wethersfield, Miss Alice Bragaw and Miss Hazel Harvey, sister of the bride, of this city. James M. Strong of Wethersfield was best man and the ushers were Burton W. Bolles, Hart C. Fenn, Francis T. Fenn and Henry Brockway.

While the guests were assembling Mrs. M. Burton Yaw, organist of the church, played the following program: March Nuptiale, Faulkes; Fanfare, Lemmens; Cloche du Soir, Chauvet; Madrigal, Rogers; Bridal Song (from Wedding Symphony), Goldmark; On Wings of Song, Mendelssohn-Whiting; Canzone della Sera, d'Evy; Song of the Rhine Daughters, Wagner-Hoffman.

The bridal party entered to the bridal march from Lohengrin, and during the ceremony Greig's Poeme Erotique was played. The wedding march from Midsummer Night's Dream by Mendelssohn was used as a recessional.

The bride wore a gown of white satin distinguished by a touch of white fur in a deep band about its hem. Pearl ornaments and duchesse lace were also used as trimming, and her tulle veil was fastened with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was a shower of lilies of the valley. The costumes of the bride's attendants were in pink, the maid of honor wearing pink striped grenadine over silk, and the bridesmaids having frocks of pink net over taffeta. They carried bouquets of pink roses.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents for about 150 guests. The decorations of the house were also of white chrysanthemums and palms and music was provided during the evening by the Allyn house orchestra. The bride's mother, Mrs. Harvey, wore a gown of lavender crepe meteor, and Mrs. Sage, mother of the bridegroom, wore white crepe de chine. The marriage occurred on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of the bride's parents.

MR. AND MRS.

BOLLES—In this city, November 14, 1915, at his residence, No. 36 Irving street, suddenly, Herman L. Bolles, aged 52 years.

Herman L. Bolles, organist of the First Baptist church for twenty-five years, died suddenly of apoplexy at his home, No. 36 Irving street, Sunday afternoon at 1:30. Mr. Bolles had not been in good health for many years and about four years ago was stricken totally deaf. Since that time he had seldom been away from the house. He had, however, in shown no signs of anything unusual and the end came quickly.

Mr. Bolles was born in Plainville, May 12, 1863, a son of the late William C. Bolles and Hannah Barker to Bolles. His great grandfather, John Bolles, was one of the founders of the First Baptist church in March, 1790, and since then there has been a member of the family in the church. Mr. Bolles graduated from the Brown school in 1880 and attended the Hartford High school the next three years. He then entered the music store of L. Barker & Co., later the Barker Piano company. He retired in 1911.

Mr. Bolles was organist of the First Baptist church from May, 1886, to January, 1912, when he retired because of deafness. During the quarter century he was organist he had active charge of the music of the church and was the leading factor of its success. He was interested in musical work of all kinds and played several musical instruments with considerable skill. Mr. Bolles was a member of the First Baptist church and B. H. Webb council, Royal Arcanum. He and Mrs. Bolles celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary last month. He leaves his wife, Fannie S. Bolles; one daughter, Marjorie Bolles; two brothers, Ernest F. Bolles of Dayton, Ohio, and George J. Bolles of Kensington, and two sisters, Miss Jennie J. Bolles and Mrs. Robert Hird of Plainville. The funeral of Mr. Bolles will be held at his late home, Wednesday afternoon, at 2:30. The Rev. Dr. Herbert J. White, pastor of the First Baptist church, will officiate. Burial will be in Spring Grove cemetery.

BOWLES-LOWELL WEDDING

Daughter of Rear-Admiral Francis T. Bowles Becomes the Bride of Boston Lawyer

Miss Catherine Hayward Bowles, daughter of Rear-Admiral Francis T. Bowles, formerly of this city and now of Boston, and Alfred Putnam Lowell, son of Mrs. Charles Lowell of Beacon street, Boston, were married at noon yesterday in the Arlington-street church, Boston. Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. Miss Bowles was given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. Frederic S. Bigelow of Haverford, Pa., a sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor and the bridesmaids were, Miss Charlotte Winslow and Miss Ruth Dwight. The bride was gowned in white satin and net and wore an exceptionally long train. The bridal veil of tulle was fastened in place with orange blossoms. The bridesmaids wore yellow taffeta with net over draperies of the same color. They wore hats of mauve colored velvet trimmed with tulle to match, and with a single large rose of mauve-pink color, corresponding to the Christie Millar roses, which they carried. Leonard J. Wyeth of New York was best man and the ushers were, James Freeman Clark, James J. Putnam, Jr., Harry C. Ross, R. S. Pattee, A. Morris Crosby and Edward S. Read, all college friends of the groom.

Mr. Lowell is a graduate of Harvard in the class of '11, and the Harvard law school in the class of '14. He is at present engaged in the practice of law in Boston. He is a cousin of President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard.

A reception for about 250 guests was held after the ceremony at the Bowles residence, 148 Marlboro street, Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Lowell will live at 56 Brimmer street, Boston, after returning from their wedding journey.

William Wallace Spence, for many years a leading Baltimore financier celebrated yesterday the 100th anniversary of his birth. Mr. Spence was born in Edinburgh, Scot. It took him 70 days to cross from Scotland to the United States in 1833. Last Saturday he returned to Baltimore from Hot Springs, Va., where he had spent the summer months. For years Mr. Spence has expressed the determination to live to be 100 years old, and the fact that he has done so is attributed largely to his iron will.

Endicott-Mitchell

Miss Grace Mitchell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Winthrop D. Mitchell of Grove street, East Orange, N. J., and George Endicott of Orange were married in Orange at noon yesterday in Grace Church, by Rev. Dr. Octavius Applegate of Utica, N. Y., assisted by Rev. Dr. Charles T. Walkley of Orange. Miss Janet Mitchell of East Orange was maid of honor. The ushers were Dr. Herbert Vermilyea and Hawley Chester of New York, John H. Day of Orange, Stanley Crocker and Aaron Mitchell of East Orange, and Philip Morgan of Worcester, Mass. Francis N. The marriage of Miss Ethel Elizabeth Wakeman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Wakeman of Farmington avenue, and Alfred Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Williams of Windsor, took place at 7 o'clock Saturday evening, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Franklin A. Nott, Jr., at No. 28 Sisson avenue, the Rev. Dr. Ernest deF. Miel, rector of Trinity church, officiating, in the presence of a small company of relatives and friends. The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attended by her sister, Mrs. Nott Arthur G. Williams, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and Thomas P. Wakeman, brother of the bride, and Nelson M. Williams, brother of the bridegroom, were ushers. The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was used as a wedding march, played by Miss Jane Goodwill of this city.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and Chantilly lace, with a train, and a veil of tulle fastened with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor wore her wedding gown of white crepe de chine and lace, and carried pink Killarney roses.

After an informal reception Mr. and Mrs. Williams left for a trip to Niagara Falls and other points in New York state and Boston. They will be at home at No. 7 Barnard street after December 1.

White-Young.

Miss Ethel Hastings Young, daughter of Robert A. Young of Brooklyn, N. Y., was married to Raymond Terry White, formerly of Hartford, at the home of the bride, No. 1281 St. John's place, in Brooklyn on Saturday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. F. M. Townley, rector of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church, of that city. Arthur K. Young, brother of the bride, was best man, and Mrs. Franklin L. Duerk, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. The bride wore a gown of white satin, cut en-train with pearl trimmings and tulle veil and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. Mr. White is a graduate of the Hartford High school and Pratt institute, Brooklyn, and is in the office of the Railway Steel Spring company, New York. Mr. and Mrs. White will reside at No. 1281 St. John's place Brooklyn.

Helen Bowen, only daughter of former Mayor and Mrs. George M. Harrington, became the bride of Burton William Bartlett, assistant city designing engineer of Springfield, Mass. Wednesday at 6 o'clock at her parents' handsome residence, No. 196 Church street. The bride is very popular among the young people of this city, where she has always lived, and nearly all the invited guests were of the younger set. Some of the close friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harrington and very close neighbors were included in the wedding party.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William S. Beard of the First Congregational church as the couple stood under a bower of oak leaves and chrysanthemums, and the single ring Episcopal service was used. The matron of honor was Mrs. Walter H. Lathrop of Mystic, nee Miss Kathleen Fuller, the bride's most intimate friend. The two bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Harman of Willimantic and Miss Blanche Hall of Norwich. Miss Elizabeth Harvey of Norwich, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. The groom was attended by his brother, Harold C. Bartlett of Springfield, Mass., as best man, and the ushers were Messrs. Everett and Homer Harrington, brothers of the bride; Charles Bidwell of Windsor Locks and Homer E. Barton of Boston.

The bride wore white tulle over taffeta with Chantilly lace, her veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. The matron of honor wore pink net over taffeta and carried a bouquet of white roses. Mrs. Harrington wore blue Georgette crepe with bands of blue panne velvet and gold and silver trimmings. Mrs. Bartlett wore wisteria taffeta with iridescent trimmings.

Guests were present from Springfield, Boston, Providence, Worcester, New York, Mystic, Putnam and Norwich. Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett are to reside in Springfield, Mass., and will be at home after January 1. The bride is a graduate of the Windham high school, class of 1908, and of Bradford academy, 1911. Mr. Bartlett was graduated from Yale in 1912.

CARTER-JEPSON.

Cards are out for the wedding of Miss Lillian Isabelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Jepson, to Dwight Herrick Carter, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Charles F. Carter of Hartford, Thursday evening, October 21, at 6:30, at the home of the bride's parents, No. 266 Summer street. The bride-to-be is one of the most popular of the younger set, and Mr. Carter has many friends in Hartford and in this city. He was graduated from Yale in 1914, and holds an important post with the Connecticut General Insurance company of Hartford.

A daughter, Isabelle Jepson, has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Herrick Carter of Palm street. The little one is a granddaughter of the Rev. Charles F. Carter, pastor of Immanuel Congregational church.

R. O. MORRIS PASSES HIS 69TH BIRTHDAY Clerk of Courts for Many Years Does Not Lack Public Appreciation.

That the survival of the fittest holds with more potency in official life than in any other is clearly shown in the case of Robert O. Morris, who celebrated his 69th birthday yesterday and who is entering on his 44th year of service as clerk of courts. No formal observance marked the passing of another milestone in his life. Mr. Morris came to his office as usual at 9 o'clock yesterday morning and attended a meeting of the Hampden County Bar Association, by which he was re-elected secretary. He has held the office for a long term of years. Later in the morning Mr. Morris took up his official duties at the jury-walved session of Superior Court.

Many men who hold office are not conspicuous for their modesty, but Mr. Morris is an exception. His has been a steady growth in the esteem of the people and that esteem has brought its own reward. Paradoxical as it may be, Mr. Morris has gained political fame by not playing politics and his longevity of service is a shining example that demonstrated ability finds recognition and true merit is seldom unrewarded.

That his conception of duty has closely conformed to the ideas and wishes of his constituents is his good fortune and reflects credit alike upon him and those who delight in honoring him. In the cause of good citizenship he has ever exerted a powerful influence and he has been unselfish in his devotion to the public welfare.

Robert Oliver Morris was born in the old Morris homestead in Maple Street, Oct. 18, 1846. His father, George B. Morris, led a long and useful life and at the time of his death, in 1872, was clerk of courts. His grandfather, Oliver B. Morris, was also prominent in the civic life of Springfield and was judge of probate for many years. The first representative of the family in this country was Edward Morris, who came to Roxbury about 1630 from England and later settled in Woodstock, Conn.

Mr. Morris' mother was Elizabeth Lathrop, daughter of Wells Lathrop, an early paper manufacturer of South Hadley. A great grandfather on the mother's side was Rev. Joseph Lathrop, pastor for a long period of the First Congregational Church, West Springfield, and who later became a well-known preacher throughout New England. He died in 1820.

Robert was one of three children. The others were George B. Morris, who was engaged in the practise of law in New York for a number of years, and Mrs. Thomas W. Fitch, late of this city. He received his early education in the schools of this city and at the age of 16 was sent to Wilbraham Academy. During the second year of his course his health became poor and after finishing the term he withdrew from school life and his education was subsequently carried on at home under a tutor.

At the age of 18 he registered in the army and went to Boston, where he entered a wholesale house as clerk. He remained in Boston six months and returned to this city, where he studied law under his father's direction. His father died in 1872. During his father's last illness Robert acted as clerk of courts, pro tempore, and upon his father's death was temporarily appointed to the position by the Supreme Judicial Court. He was elected to the office in November, 1872, and the next March was admitted to the Hampden county bar. He has since received the nomination of both parties at each election. In politics he is a Republican.

Mr. Morris married Miss Lizzie Caldwell, daughter of the late George Caldwell.

Robert O. Morris Observes 69th Birthday

Clerk of Courts Robert O. Morris celebrated his 69th birthday yesterday. He is entering on his 44th year in his office, which was held by his father before him. He has been engaged in an unusual variety of activities in the city, being vice-president of the city library association, vice-president of the Springfield cemetery association and secretary of the Hampden county bar association, a position to which he was re-elected yesterday. He has also been president of the Springfield five-cents' savings bank and a member of the park commission. He has taken an active interest in gardening and ornithology, and is author of a pamphlet on "Birds of Springfield and vicinity" and of several contributions to ornithological magazines.

Miss Ruth Crane Thompson, daughter of Mrs. Frank A. Thompson of Elm street, Rocky Hill, and Leon Everett Taylor, son of Dr. Levi C. Taylor and Mrs. Taylor of Edwards street married last evening at 7 o'clock in the Congregational Church in Rocky Hill. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Maurice E. Ailing, pastor of the church, who used the Episcopal double ring service in the presence of about 400 guests. The wedding was attended by Miss Ethel May of Yalesville as maid of honor. The best man was Harold Nearing of Windsor and the brides were W. Richard Tinker, jr., of South Manchester, Fred Donald Center of New Haven, Jose V. Con of Winchester, Mass., and Frank H. Helse of this city. The church was decorated with autumn leaves and flowers. As the bride entered the church, the wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by Frank B. Williams, organist of the church, and the wedding hymn from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" by Mendelssohn was used as the processional. The bride wore a gown of white crepe meteor cut with a long tulle veil. Her shower bouquet was of white and lilacs of the valley. The bride's attendant wore a dress of pale messaline and carried an armful of pink roses. The bride's gift to the bride was a crescent set with pearls and sapphires. Following the ceremony, was a reception at the home of the bride's mother for the relatives and a few friends only. The color scheme in the room was green and white and the remainder of the house was decorated with autumn leaves and flowers of the season. Mr. and Mrs. Ames left for an automobile trip to New England and will be at home after December 1 on Riverview, Rocky Hill. The bride is a graduate of Syracuse University and in the past few years has been student of music and drawing schools at Fayetteville, Onondaga county, New York. Mr. Taylor is general agent of the Aetna Life Insurance Company.

Rev. Thomas H. Gordon and his family have returned to Glasgow to live after an absence of several years. Mr. Gordon was rector of St. James's church some thirty years ago, and while living here was

Bride of Lyman H. Miller—Many Out-of-Town Guests.

Oct 23—1913—
At the home of Dr. and Mrs.

Louis Claire Kingsbury, No. 54 Cone street, Saturday evening, took place the marriage of Miss Charlotte Josephine Downes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexis Fitch Downes, of Green's Farms, and niece of Mrs. Kingsbury, to Lyman Halsey Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller of Pittsburgh, and assistant superintendent of the New Haven branch of the American Steel and Wire works.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter, pastor of Center church, who used the Episcopal single ring service. The bride was attended by Miss Maude Wood of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., as maid of honor, and two flower girls, Celesta and Charlotte Deniston of West Hartford; also four bridesmaids, Miss Clarissa Taylor of Westport, this state, and Miss Catharine Burr of New York, cousins of the bride; Miss Catharine Jessup of New York and Miss Gertrude Bishop of this city.

Kenneth Miller, brother of the groom, a member of the class of 1918 at Williams college, was best man.

The reception room, where the ceremony was performed, was decorated in green and white, autumn foliage, yellow chrysanthemums and roses being used in the other rooms. As the bridal party descended the circular staircase into the room where the guests were assembled, the wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Hatch's orchestra.

The bride wore a princess gown of white duchesse satin and champagne. The bridegroom's gift to the bride, the only ornament she wore, was a platinum chain with a Roman coral pendant set with pearls. The bride presented to her attendants gold crescent pins set with pearls; and to the flower girls she gave gold hoop bracelets. The bridegroom gave to his best man a silver cigarette case.

Immediately following the ceremony a telegram was received by the bride and bridegroom, conveying congratulations and good wishes and signed by each official of every branch of the American Steel and Wire works from coast to coast.

After the reception which followed the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Miller left for a tour of the Berkshires and White mountains in the automobile roadster which was their gift from the bridegroom's father, who presented to the bride a check for $1,000. The couple received many other handsome gifts.

Among the out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Miller, Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Peters, Allentown, Penn.; Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Peters, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. W. L. by Rev Dr Hol- lis B. Frissell. Hundreds of guests representing some of the oldest families of New York and Philadelphia as well as the leaders in social and business life of the lower Virginia peninsula were present. The wedding service was unique in that the music was furnished by the Hampton institute choir, which sang several plantation melodies during the assembling of the guests. The colored and Indian singers also sang effectively the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" and a bridal hymn set to the music of Mendelssohn's wedding march. The Hampton institute students paid their quiet tribute to the bridal couple, the boys by saluting in battalion formation, the girls by scattering flowers before them.

Mrs Olcott's father, Alexander Purves, who died 10 years ago, was an officer in the Fidelity trust company of Philadelphia. Her mother is the daughter of the late Robert Curtis Ogden, merchant and philanthropist. Mr Olcott is the grandson of Commodore Van Santvoord. Captain Roger Welles of States navy, whose father Welles, for many years a lawyer of this city, and, when Martin Welles is vice-president of the Connecticut River Company, has been put in command of the new battleship Oklahoma, is being completed and will be at Camden, N. J. He will then be the newest and biggest of the new naughts of this country.

For the past three years Welles has been the commanding officer at the Newport Naval Station, this being one of the details of his many years. He was born in this city in 1862, and after graduation from Hartford Public High School, the appointment to Annapolis, where he was a midshipman, and then to the Senate of Joseph R. Hawley, graduated from the naval academy in 1886 and has held many positions since that time.

Prior to taking command of the new battleship, Captain Welles was stationed at the Pacific coast, most of his time being at sea. He has been advanced to the grade of admiral in three years and held that grade until he was at the age of 63 years. Captain is now 54 years of age. He was in 1907 and Mrs. Welles with him at the Newport. There are no children.

The grade of captain corresponds to a colonel in the army, and below general and flag officer.

The Oklahoma is 27,000 tons in displacement and has been at the ways of Camden, N. J., for the past two years. It will be ready in a few months more to outfit the fleet. This work Captain Welles will have charge. When the ship is put in commission he will be its commanding officer. The Oklahoma is a battleship of the first line.

Captain Welles's father, Roger Welles, was born at Newington, March 7, 1829, the sixth child and second son of Roger and Electra (Stanley) Welles. Mr. Welles was admitted to the bar of Hartford county in October, 1854. He was appointed engrossing clerk of the Legislature at its May session, 1855, and acted as reporter for "The Courant" of the doings of the House of Representatives at that session. He married Mercy D. Aiken, daughter of Lemuel S. and Sarah (Coffin) Aiken of Fairhaven, Mass., on June 16, 1858. They had seven

ELMER GARDINER REACHES HARTFORD OCTOBER 27, 1915.

5-Years-Old Boy Completes Coast to Coast Trip

Only Identification Tag in Passengers.

Elmer Gardner, jr., 5 years old, arrived in Hartford yesterday morning after a 3,800-mile trip without escort from Los Angeles. With a tag in his buttonhole bearing the words, "Deliver me to my grandmother, Mrs. H. Ammann of Hartford," he jumped from the train at Union Station at 6.30 o'clock into his father's arms and completed his trip across the continent, during the course of which he was the pet of train crews and of passengers and had a "nawfully good time" playing on the "choo-choo train" and seeing "lots an' lots of Injuns an' cows and cowboys."

Elmer is the son of Elmer Gardner, senior. Last April Mr. Gardner came East, leaving his wife and their two children in Los Angeles, where he was in the automobile business. He expected to visit his mother, Mrs. Henry Ammann of No. 46 Lenox street for a few weeks and then return to the coast, but later changed his mind and decided to bring his family to Hartford, instead.

On October 10, however, there came the sad news from Los Angeles that Mrs. Gardner had died suddenly at the County Hospital and that Elmer, jr., and his sister Olive, 8 years old, were without a parent in Los Angeles. Olive was sent to Portland, Oregon, to stay with an aunt and it was decided that Elmer was to remain in Los Angeles for a few weeks in the care of relatives. Mr. Gardner sent his wife's $125 to be used in caring for Elmer, but the late misunderstanding Mr. Gardner had shipped Elmer to Hartford with money. A telegram was received from Mr. Gardner here saying that he had left Los Angeles Thursday morning. Then came a period of anxiety, and yesterday morning with the appearance of the child.

After a ride in an automobile to his grandmother's home at No. 46 Lenox street and after a short—very short—rest Elmer was ready for business again. He spent part of the afternoon seeing Hartford and the remainder playing with the children of the neighborhood, with whom he soon became a bosom friend.

Elmer was taken to the train in Los Angeles last Thursday evening at 6.30 o'clock. He had to make three changes, the first at Chicago, the second at Buffalo and the third at Springfield, but, with the help of trainmen and of passengers, he maneuvered them all successfully and was happy and smiling when he jumped from the train yesterday morning.

When asked what he did during the long journey he answers nonchalantly: "choo train." "They says, 'and candy and of things.' 'ings' was a one pinned suit at El when he ar-

MAJOR WILLIAM C. STEELE AND MRS. STEELE.

To Observe Golden Wedding Anniversary.

ing is now located. Major Steele lived at the same house where she was boarding and he met her there.

Their acquaintance soon ripened into love and they were married by Rev. Levi D. Payne, pastor of the Farmington Congregational Church, at the home of Mrs. Steele's parents in Farmington. The wedding took place October 25, 1865, after which the couple came to Hartford to live and have lived here ever since.

Major Steele, who was born June 28, 1843, was appointed a supernumerary of the Hartford police department in June, 1861, when he was but 18 years old. He became a regular policeman ten years later and continued with the force until August 1, 1912, when he retired, being given a pension by the board of police commissioners in recognition of the faithful service that he had done during so long a period. The police commissioners drew up a set of resolutions concerning his resignation which were presented to him at the time.

During his service with the police department, Major Steele saw Hartford grow from a city of about 40,000 people to an active and hustling business center of more than 100,000 people. During this time there has been a noticeable change in the methods that are employed by the police. The equipment that was used by the department when Major Steele became a member of the force

When Major Steele and his wife first came to the city to live, Main street, the Major says, bore little resemblance to its present condition. None of the large insurance buildings had then been built and there was no building on the street which was higher than three stories. Here and there on the street was found small homes and Pearl and Asylum streets member of the state militia, joining soon after he returned from the war, and he held the state record for continuous service when he resigned in 1912, having been connected with the organization for more than thirty-nine years.

Mrs. Steele was born October 22, 1844 in this city and she will celebrate her seventy-first birthday on Friday. Her name before marriage was Mary W. Bishop. Mr. and Mrs. Steele have three children, Charles J. Steele, an employee of the post office, Mrs. A. R. Wadsworth of Farmington.

50TH ANNIVERSARY
Many Attend Golden Wedding Of Civil War Veterans.

Nearly 100 relatives and friends of Major William C. Steele and Mrs. Steele visited them last evening at their home, No. 196 Vine street, for the celebration of their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Many gifts, cards and letters of congratulations and flowers represented others who were unable to be present. Relatives from this city, Farmington, Suffield and Springfield, Mass., were among those present. The reception began at 7 o'clock.

The house was filled with flowers and ferns of many varieties, most of them gifts, and an American flag was draped in the hallway, in remembrance of Major Steele's service in the Civil War and his present activity in Robert O. Tyler Post, No. 50, G. A. R. A large delegation of Grand Army of the Republic veterans and their wives attended the reception. On a table in the parlor were many beautiful presents from relatives and prominent men in Hartford and other cities, some of the gifts coming a considerable distance.

MRS. ROBERT M. WILCOX.

Jan 1919 Mrs. Wilcox, who is widely known through her poems, as Ella Wheeler Wilcox and whose home is at Short Beach, in the Connecticut town of Branford, has announced her intention of going abroad to do relief work for the American Red Cross. This is a new portrait of Mrs. Wilcox, who has been at her Short Beach home, the Barracks, during the past six months, since returning from California, where she went after the death of her husband, Robert M. Wilcox, a former resident of Meriden, about two years ago. Mrs. Wilcox's sorrow in her bereavement is well known to her friends, who were not surprised to learn that she intended to do war work in Europe. After many months of seclusion in the far west, during which time she wrote nothing, she returned to Short Beach, where her lovely home and her studio, the Bungalow, surrounded by charming grounds and set above the bay, have been visited and admired by hundreds of people, including many noted writers and authors from all parts of the world, friends of the poet and of her husband, who planned many of the distinctive features of their home.

Dec 1917 During the summer, at Short Beach, Mrs. Wilcox devoted herself to her work, writing a volume of "Sonnets of Sorrow," and completing her autobiography. Some striking poems on the war and many poignant verses which expressed, to those of her personal acquaintance, her grief in her widowhood, were composed by Mrs. Wilcox during the summer. Last week she closed her home and went to visit friends in Elizabeth, N. J., and Middletown, before going to Washington, D. C., where she will spend a month. With the beginning of the new year she will go to London, and afterward to France, to work for the American Red Cross and pursue psychological research. It is probable that Mrs. Wilcox will be away from the United States for a year, although she may return to Connecticut for a short time next summer.

Her extensive travels throughout Europe, her energy, keen judgment and deep knowledge of human nature and her charming personality are certain to make Mrs. Wilcox a valuable and successful worker in war relief. She speaks foreign languages fluently, and has a wide acquaintance with prominent people in Europe.

SPRINGFIELD, SUNDAY, OCT. 31, 1915
CROCKER - HOLMES CEREMONY

Decorations Very Elaborate — Large Reception Follows the Service

An autumnal wedding of more than passing importance to a large circle of friends was that of Miss Pauline Crocker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton A. Crocker, and Joseph Edwin Holmes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Holmes of Arlington, which took place last evening at the home of the bride's parents on Union street. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Crocker was that used by the Misses Howard for their famous school for young women, and with its past history of social intercourse and its air of belonging to past generations made an exceptionally beautiful setting for one of the largest and most beautiful weddings of the season.

It was practically a chrysanthemum wedding, these flowers being used wherever possible, white being the color most used in the house and yellow in the large marquee which had been erected at the eastern side of the house. In the reception-room on the western side of the house a large brass standard with pink chrysanthemums stood in one corner, while the mantel was banked with a mass of the same flower mingled with smilax. Over the doors and windows of this room, as well as over those of the other rooms on the lower floor, smilax was garlanded, while in the hall a frieze of smilax fitted the colonial aspect of the house. It was in the library that the ceremony took place, the bridal party standing before a background of southern smilax, at either side of which was fastened a large bunch of white chrysanthemums. In this room also the mantel was banked with white chrysanthemums and smilax. In the dining-room, Aitken, who had charge of the decorating, departed from the use of chrysanthemums and used instead red roses. A large basket of these flowers stood on the sideboard, while on the mantel stood two baskets. Entrance to the tent was from this room, two windows having been removed, steps being erected at either side, one leading into the dining-room and the other into the outdoor apartment. Between these two windows was a table bearing a large vase filled with white chrysanthemums.

The large marquee to which the guests adjourned later in the evening was a beautiful sight, with its decorations of smilax and yellow chrysanthemums. An unusual feature was the fact that white cheesecloth had been used to drape the walls of the marquee and gave a softer effect than could be gained from the canvas. About the top of the walls was a frieze of smilax, studded at every few feet with an electric light, before which had been placed a cluster of yellow chrysanthemums, so that there was no sign of the light except as it was reflected from this bed of yellow against the white of the roof. Three columns rose in the center, also quilted with cheesecloth, and between these were suspended huge balls made of the yellow chrysanthemums, while at either end were suspended two more of slightly smaller dimensions. Coatrooms for the men were arranged at the left of the entrance, while the veranda at the right had been fitted up for a smoking room, decorated with smilax and inclosed with canvas.

The ceremony took place last evening at 7 o'clock, and was performed by Rev. Dr. W. W. Weeks, pastor of the Highland Baptist church, assisted by Rev. George C. Baldwin, Jr., and was witnessed by about 100 relatives and friends of the couple, the invitations to the reception which followed having been issued to several hundred more. But in order to avoid unpleasant crowding during the reception hour cards were sent out for two different periods, thus distributing more evenly the large number of guests.

The bride chose as her maid of honor her younger sister, Miss Elizabeth Crocker, while she was also attended by three matrons of honor, one of whom was another sister, Mrs. Franklin Lawrence of Portland, Me., Mrs. George Shaw Sabin, also of Portland, and formerly Miss Tula Bowman of this city; and Mrs. Karl Raymond Hammond of Newton Highlands, who previous to her marriage last May was Miss Christine Shuart. Herbert W. Kendall of Arlington attended Mr. Holmes as best man, and the four ushers were Charles L. Holmes, a brother of the bridegroom; J. Chester Hutchinson and James Stewart Smith of Lexington and Percy O. Dorr of this city.

A sextet under the direction of Emil Janser played the "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin" as the bridal party began the descent of the stairs, and came down to pass through an aisle formed by white satin ribbons, held by white enamel ribbon posts, across the hall and through the reception room to the library, where the party were met by the ministers, the bridegroom and the best man. The bridal procession was led by the ushers, followed by

At the reception Mr. and Mrs. Holmes were assisted in receiving by their parents. Mrs. Crocker wore a gown of sapphire radium velvet with trimmings of silver lace, her train being a pointed one of velvet. Mrs. Holmes appeared in a gown of white satin with black spangled overdress. The guests adjourned to the marquee, where supper was served by Habenstein of Hartford, Ct., and where dancing was enjoyed, while for those who did not care to dance, white covered seats had been erected on three sides of the tent. In the center stood the bride's table, where the party of 18 were seated about an oval, in the center of which was a Russian arrangement of white chrysanthemums. The serving table, which stood at one side, bore a large cluster of yellow chrysanthemums, tied with yellow chiffon, and was draped with smilax.

Upon the second floor of the house two rooms had been set apart for the display of the rarely beautiful gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, including many pieces of antique furniture, silver, cut glass, china and rare brasses. The gift of the bride to each of her attendants was a round pin of gold set with sapphires. The bridegroom gave to his attendants gold pen knives. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes left during the evening amid a shower of rose petals for a wedding trip of some two weeks and while they are to make their home in this city they are as yet undecided as to their place of future residence, and no at home cards have as yet been sent out. The bride's traveling suit was of dark navy blue with lynx collar and her hat was also of blue velvet trimmed with lynx.

Last evening's bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Crocker, and since her graduation from Vassar in 1907 has taken part in the social life of the city. Mr. Holmes is a graduate of Dartmouth in the class of 1902, and has been a resident of Springfield for about three years, being connected with the Springfield institution for readings.

 Pretty Ceremony Unites Miss Ella May

 erson Oct 30, 1915

A small home wedding took place yesterday at the home of Mr and Mrs George M. Philbrick on Oakland street, when their daughter, Miss Ella May Philbrick, became the bride of Howard Shaw Sanderson, second son of former Mayor and Mrs William E. Sanderson of Hyde avenue. About 50 guests were present at the ceremony, which was performed at 3 o'clock by Rev E. C. Bridgman of Worcester, a former pastor of St James Methodist church in this city. The only attendants were the sister and brother of the bride and bridegroom, Miss Ruth M. Philbrick attending her sister as bridesmaid, while William Sanderson, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

The ceremony took place in the reception room, where against a background of palms, an arch of white chrysanthemums had been arranged by Robinson, and from the center of the arch was suspended a wedding bell of small white roses. Two long strands of white ribbons entwined with roses fell from the bell and were carried into the room in such a fashion as to form an aisle through which the bridal party passed. In the living room pink and white cut flowers were used, the same combination being used in the hall. A cousin of the bride, Miss Rosabelle Ferry, gowned in blue crepe meteor, played the "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin" as the wedding party entered the room.

The bride wore a gown of ivory white crepe meteor, made in empire style and trimmed with small white hand-made rosebuds. The bridal veil of tulle was caught back with lilies of the valley, and she carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a gown of changeable blue silk taffeta with net overskirt of rainbow colors, and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. Following the ceremony, an informal reception was held, the bride and bridegroom being assisted by their parents. Many gifts of cut glass, silver and furniture were received by the young couple. Mr Sanderson's gift to his bride was a gold brooch and to his best man he gave a gold monogrammed tie clasp. The bride presented her sister a gold lavalliere and chain, her gift to Miss Ferry being similar.

Mr and Mrs Sanderson left last evening for a wedding trip to Boston and New York, the bride wearing a suit of gray chiffon velvet with hat to match. Upon their return they are to live with the parents of the bride at 107 Oakland street until their new home is completed. The bride is a graduate of the high school of commerce, while Mr Sanderson attended the technical high school and is now in the employ of the Package machinery company.

Arthur H. Bond arrived in town yesterday morning for a short stay and then left a few hours later with his father, George R. Bond of Mulberry street, for Boston in time to attend the bridal dinner given last evening in honor of himself and his fiancée, Miss Burchie Worthington. Mr Bond's sister, Miss Fannie H. Bond, and Miss Dorcas Brown of Magnolia terrace have been spending the past week in Boston as the guests of Miss Worthington and taking part in several pre-nuptial festivities arranged in honor of the latter. Miss Bond is to act as maid of honor and Miss Brown will be one of the bridesmaids at the ceremony, the other three bridesmaids being Miss Norma Barton of Plattsburg, N. Y., Miss Marion Maerelein of Hartford, Ct., and Miss Dorothy Case of Auburn, N. Y.

Miss Ruth Barker Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Allen of Evanston, Ill., and granddaughter of the late Ludlow Barker of this city, and Harry Miller Vawter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Vawter, were married at the First Congregational Church, Evanston, Saturday evening, October 30, Rev. William T. McElveen officiating. The church was lighted with candles in the old English style and was decorated with lilies and palms. The maid of honor was Miss Ruth Sanders of Evanston and the bridesmaids were Miss Kathryn O. Clark of Chicago, Miss Jessie M. Vawter and Miss Helen M. Vawter, both of Benton Harbor, Mich. The best man was Louis W. Mack of Chicago and the ushers were Clarence Barker and Harry Moser of Evanston, Gordon Hall of Chicago, Robert Belknap of Benton Harbor, Mich., and Andrew P. Martin of Cleveland, O. The bride wore a dress of ivory satin and old Spanish lace, which was worn by her mother, the dress being cut with a train of chiffon and lace. The long tulle veil was caught with a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The maid of honor's dress was of pink two-toned taffeta with a short, full skirt trimmed with silver lace and she carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. The bridesmaids wore dresses of the rainbow shades. Following the ceremony a reception was given at the Evanston Country Club. Mr. and Mrs. Vawter will be at home after January 1 at No. 1,626 Hinman avenue, Evanston.

Rev E. P. Berry Gives Sermon Reviewing Growth During Half-Century

Rev Edward Payson Berry of Memorial church preached a historical sermon at the church yesterday morning in commemoration of the church's 50 years of life. He took up the beginnings of the Scattergood mission, out of which the church grew, and told of the work which the charter members did to make the church a strong religious society in the North end. He reviewed the work of the pastors of the church and of the splendid achievement of the years that have passed. He then took up the present-day work of the church and said:—

Pursuant to the call to become your pastor, I began my work here September 24, 1911. During the four years of my ministry we have received 117 new members, making the total number received into the fellowship of Memorial church 1435. The church now numbers 645 members. We have one of the most helpful and largely attended prayer-meetings in our city. This means much. The Sunday-school has in the neighborhood of 500 members, and is under the broad-minded leadership of F. E. Dill. The woman's guild, the new society formed three years ago by a union of the former missionary society and the Lend-a-Hand society, has one short of 90 members. Their field of study and work includes our own church and city, and missions at home and abroad. As our church is composed of 395 women and 250 men, we may congratulate ourselves upon the loyal service of the large majority.

As an instance of the good work of the guild, I may remind you that our last Sunday's calling the present

There are now 151 acres in the Hendee strip, extending south from the state line as far as the John Davis place, back to the Connecticut river. The cost was a little over $50,000. By adding on 151 more acres on the south, including the large Phelps and Davis farms Mr. Hendee would have one of the largest private estates of its kind in New England. The land is now being cleared of the woods on the top of the hill and a 500 foot chicken house, twenty-five feet wide is being erected where fancy breeds only will be kept. Through broad doorways to the north, the hall opens on the living room, which spreads the entire width of the house, and looks from its three walls in every direction except the south. From here, when the few obstructing trees in Mr Hendee's patch of woods to the north have been lopped, vistas will open on the municipal tower to the northeast and on Mt Tom and the Berkshires to the northwest. AT MOTORCYCLE FACTORY

George M. Hendee of Suffield, Springfield, who entertained Hartford Wheel club at its outing, and is well known to many people in this city, is to go to France to engage in Y. M. C. work, as an assistant secretary. Mr. Hendee is a native of Vermont, this state, and became a millionaire in the bicycle and cycle manufacturing business, having been formerly president and treasurer of the Hendee Manufacturing company. He had an interesting career in bicycle racing from 1881 to 1886, when that sport at its height, being one time champion of America, and making several world records.

Edward A. Fuller, a resident of North Main street, and a personal friend of George M. Hendee, a resident of Suffield, received a letter yesterday from Mr. Hendee, who has gone to France as a Y. M. C. secretary in the war relief work. The card bears the date of November 12 and reads as follows:

"Arrived safely after long voyage. Am feeling fine, and fit for work. Hope all is well with you and yours.

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 14— was received here today that George M. Hendee, champion bicycle rider in the days of the old high wheel and later head of the motorcycle manufacturing company that bears his name, although he is tired from it, is now acting as Y. M. C. A. postmaster in France. Hendee went to France several months ago to help in Y. M. C. business administration. He is in charge in Paris of the American postoffice that handles the mail for the more than 1,200 workers in Pittsfield 1915*

Mrs. Opolline Rheault, Pittsfield's oldest woman, will be 102 years old to-morrow, but no formal observance of the anniversary will be held owing to Mrs. Rheault's feebleness. An observance was held last year, but at that time she was spry and able to be about, often going out of doors and visiting neighbors. For the last six months she has not been so strong and is now confined to her bed most of the time. Her health seems good, however. She lives with her daughter, Mrs. Eugene Baillargeon at 83 Harvard street, and there are four generations of the family alive.

New Haven, November 2.

It was distinguished ancestry night at Yale, Monday evening—as far as fraternity holdoffs went. In the list of each fraternity making selections, were familiar names in the political or financial world—and they weren't coincidences, either. They were bona fide descendants of some line or another of the illustrious families, and their inclusion in the makeup of the fraternities' first ten lent tone and dignity to the outward semblance of hold-off night, even though it didn't mitigate, the rush, scurry and bustle of that hasty and slap-stick performance. Now the smoke of battle has, in a measure, cleared, the following names loom up—one for each fraternity:

Taft—Charles, to Beta Theta Pi, youngest of the five academic societies, and luckier than any of its elders last night.

Seward—William Henry, sure enough! The fourth in his line went to Zeta Psi, second youngest of the five.

Rockefeller—William Avery, son of Percy Rockefeller, to Delta Kappa Epsilon, the middle fraternity of the five in point of establishment.

Armour—Lester, heir to the packers' millions, to Psi Upsilon, next to the oldest crowd.

Garfield—Newell, grandson of the former president, to Alpha Delta Phi, the oldest fraternity.

No other names of equal prominence graced the lists of any one fraternity. It was a night of even breaks, of good distribution of caliber of candidates among the five societies. Nurturing the advantage

The marriage of Miss Vida Clark Laraway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Laraway of Sargeant street, and Willard D. Jopson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Jopson of Homestead avenue, took place Saturday evening at the Asylum avenue Baptist church, the Rev. Dr. William G. Fennell, pastor of the church, officiating, in the presence of about 350 guests. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Harold W. Griswold of Collinsville, as matron of honor, the bridesmaids being another sister, Miss Dorothy Laraway, Miss Violet Bonner and Miss Ruth Marvel of this city and Miss Elizabeth Shurts of New London. Harold W. Griswold was best man and the ushers were Edward Hall of Worcester, Mass.; Bradford J. Clark, cousin of the bride; Gerard Banfield and Louis H. Marte. A small reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Jopson will be at home after January 1 at No. 390 Hillside avenue.

McMillwaine, jr.; Lucius Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucius F. Robinson of Forest street; Francis Goodwin, son of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. James A. Goodwin of Garden street; and Morgan Pease, son of Mrs. Alfred H. Pease of Prospect avenue. Their choices will be watched with interest during the coming week of the campaign's wind-up.

The Lists.

The lists given below give Psl U and Deke fifteen men each, as they last night announced their "fives" to be taken, Friday night.

Alpha Delta Phi—Garfield, Jim Walker, Salyards, Stewart, Bukolz, Nigle, Farrar, Miles, Mitchell, Simonds. Of these, Garfield was pitcher on the freshman ball team and member of the championship varsity basketball team. Farrar is leading competitor for the Yale Literary magazine in his class, and Miles and Mitchell are Yale News candidates.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Louise Farrell, daughter of Asse-sor and Mrs. James T. Farrell, of No. 137 Park street, to Henry Edward McIntyre, was celebrated with solemn nuptial mass in St. Peter's church at 9 o'clock, this morning, by the Rev. Paul F. McAlenney, the pastor. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Abbie Farrell, of Baltic, and the best man was James J. Cisosimo. The bride wore a suit of green broadcloth trimmed with beaver, with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. The maid of honor wore a suit of brown broadcloth, also trimmed with beaver, and hat to match. She carried pink chrysanthemums. James J. McGovern, organist of the church, played during the service, and Mrs. Mehegan sang "O Promise Me." After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's father, only members of the family being present. The house decorations were chrysanthemums. A beautiful lavalliere was the gift for the groom to the bride, and the bride's gift to the maid of honor was a pearl ring. The groom's gift to his best man was a diamond scarf pin.

After a wedding journey to New York, Washington and Old Point Comfort, Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre will be at home at No. 573 Main street, after December 1.

FERNALD-PINNEY—In this city, November 3, 1915, in the Center Church parish house by the Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Robert Lefferts Fernald and Miss Florence Mather Pinney, daughter of the late Mather E. and Emma E. Pinney.

In the presence of a select number of friends, Robert Lefferts Fernald of the probate court, was married at 12 o'clock to-day, in the parlor of the Center church house, to Miss Florence Mather Pinney, daughter of the late Mather E. and Emma E. Pinney of this city, by the Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter. The parlor was decorated with palms, ferns and chrysanthemums. Because of the recent bereavement of the bride there were no attendants. The bride wore a traveling suit of brown broadcloth, with plumed hat to match, and a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. The Episcopal service with ring was used.

The wedding breakfast was served in a private room at the Heublein, the party numbering twelve. Mr. and Mrs. Fernald departed this afternoon on a honeymoon trip to southern winter resorts and will be at home after February 1, at No. 507 Albany avenue.

The bride is a member of one of Hartford's oldest families. The groom has been connected with the probate court since the beginning of the administration of Judge Loren P. Waldo Marvin, and his courteous and intelligent deportment has won the regard of lawyers and others who have business in the court. Mr. Fernald is a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., where his father was for many years numbered among the foremost residents of the city.

Joseph K. Hooker of Farmington avenue was one of the ushers at the wedding of Miss Helen Stearns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Stearns, and Lyail Dean, son of Mrs. Charles E. Bigelow, and the late Louis Dean, which took place Wednesday at St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Square, New York, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Karl Reiland. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Weld M. Stevens, as matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. LeRoy K. Howe, Miss Mercedes deZaldo, Miss Dorothy Mills and Miss Dorothy Bigelow. The best man was Emerson Bigelow, and the remaining ushers were Frank E. Barnard, Allan Lefferts, George B. Yerkes, David F. Goodnow and Ward E. Pearson. The bride wore a dress of white brocaded satin and a tulle veil edged with lace, and her chief taffeta.

The marriage of Miss Isabella Hagner of Washington, former social secretary at the White House, and Norman James of Baltimore took place on Tuesday afternoon in St. James's Church, Washington, Rev. Roland Cotton Smith officiating. The bride was escorted by her elder brother, Frederick R. Hagner. Her only attendants were Mr. James's schoolgirl daughters, Miss Marjorie and Amelia James. Hamilton S. Post of Baltimore was best man. They will live in Baltimore.

MISS ALBERTA HILL, SUFFRAGIST, WEDS

New York, Nov. 4.—Miss Alberta Hill, suffragist, married J. Francis Smith, secretary to Secretary of the Navy Daniels, this afternoon. The wedding took place at the Church of Our Lady of Good Counsel, Tompkinsville, S. I. Rev. P. J. O'Donnell performed the ceremony.

It was Miss Hill who, during President Wilson's campaign for election, compiled the card index system at the democratic headquarters here, which enabled any one who consulted it to tell at a glance just how Mr. Wilson stood in the opinions of the voters at any time during the campaign.

Miss Hill, who is a blonde, made short work of the card index system, with a tulle of the head of the head. She wore a shower of roses. The bridesmaids wore rose-colored taffeta dresses and carried baskets of small flowers and rosebuds. The flower girls wore short white frocks and carried baskets of roses. Following the ceremony, was a wedding supper and reception at the home of the bride's parents which was attended by about 150 people. The bridegroom's gifts to the ushers and best man were gold cuff links and the bride gave to her attendants pins and brooches. Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Sloper left for a wedding trip to Panama and Cuba and will be at home after January 1, at No. 61 Russell street, New Britain. The bride was graduated from the Hartford Public High School in 1910.

Laid Up With Broken Arm Until
January 1, 1910

His wide circle of friends will be deeply regretful to learn of the serious accident that has befallen Herbert Randall, confined to his home at No. 83 Kenyon street with his left arm broken off at the shoulder. Mr. Randall suffers intense pain and is not expected to be able to leave his home before January 1. An X-ray examination made Thursday disclosed the serious nature of the fracture, which was caused when Mr. Randall slipped and fell, Monday evening, against a curb while crossing a street with a party of young people celebrating Halloween. Always fond of boys and girls he had joined the party for a few moments while on his way to the home of Herbert H. White in North Beacon street.

After his fall he was taken to the home of Mr. White and given all possible relief, but the very bad break made in his arm was not ascertained definitely until Thursday.

F. Plunkett Married in New York

Miss Katherine Hutton, daughter of Mr and Mrs John Hutton of New York and Tyringham, and Thomas F. Plunkett of 156 East street, Pittsfield, were married yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at St James Episcopal church in New York city. Rev Frederick Courtney, bishop of Nova Scotia, officiated. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Amy C. Hutton. Julius Rockwell of Taunton, son of Mr and Mrs Francis W. Rockwell of Pittsfield, was best man and the ushers were City Clerk Norman C. Hull and Irving P. Thompson of Pittsfield. John L. Hutton and John L. Rudd of New York, Halstead G. Freeman of Chicago and Dallas D. L. Grew of Boston. There was a reception after the church ceremony at the bride's home, 686 Park avenue. The family is in mourning on account of the death of Mrs Hutton's mother, Mrs Walter Shriver, last winter. Among those who attended the wedding from Pittsfield were Dr and Mrs Brace W. Paddock, Mr and Mrs Charles H. Wilson, Mr and Mrs Lorrin Kinney, Miss Mrs Harold I. B. Hull and The Phoenix Mutual Life

Mr and Mrs Company has secured the property at Shaker Knob, No. 85 Elm street, in accordance with its plan to assume title to several pieces of property in this section to ensure the site for any future office building they may have in contemplation. The warranty deed for this property was recorded yesterday, the title passing from Michael J. Livingstone and Mary E. Livingstone to the insurance company, about $11,000 in cash accompanying the transfer. The Society for Savings also filed a quitclaim yesterday to this property, asserting that its mortgage of $4,250 had been satisfied. This would make the purchase price of the property about $15,250. It was conveyed to the grantors by Joseph H. Woodward on April 16, 1908, and, it is understood, was not in the market until the Phoenix Life Insurance Company sought the property to add to holdings already promised.

Phoenix Mutual Life Gets Elm Street Property.

PLANS FOR USING LAND ARE REMOTE.

The Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company has secured property on Elm street, partly by option and partly by purchase, and, though it will not come for at least two or three years, and may be even more remote than that, probably will make the land the site of its home office building at some future time. Alterations are now in progress at the company's home office building on Pearl street which are intended to take care of the growth of the company's business for several years.

The options and titles were secured through the agency of W. A. Sanborn. The property is located on Elm street, opposite Bushnell Park, and is immediately west of the American Branch headquarters of the Scottish Union & National Insurance Company, extending west to and including No. 85 Elm street, which is two houses east of Clinton street. The property at No. 87 Elm street and at No. 91 Elm street, the former owned by Mrs. Laura Johnson and the latter by Mrs. Appleton R. Hillyer, is not concerned in the transaction.

President John M. Holcombe of the Phoenix Mutual Life, when seen yesterday, said, "I cannot say when we will erect a new building, for we have not given the matter much thought. Some of the property from No. 77 Elm street to No. 85 Elm street has been purchased outright, I understand, but other pieces of the property are still held only through options. We consider the land as a very good investment and, for that reason, took steps at this time to acquire the title. I have reason to believe that, within a short time, we could realize handsomely on our investment, through

FOR NEW HOME OF PHOENIX MUTUAL

Company Buys Mrs. A. R.
Hillyer's Property on

Brownstone Residence and Adjacent Lot Included in Deal.

March — 1917

Additional property for the site of what will be the home of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company on Elm street two or three years from now was acquired by the company yesterday when deeds were passed transferring title to the brownstone residence of Mrs. Dotha B. Hillyer, and an adjacent lot running 200 feet back from Clinton street, at the corner of Elm and Clinton street. Both properties were owned by Mrs. Hillyer. Those concerned in the transaction are reticent as to the amount of money involved. The company already has other property in this block providing land for a large home office building.

John M. Holcombe, president of the Phoenix Mutual, informed "The Courant" last night that his company would not hurry to build a new home as the company's quarters on Pearl street were ample for the present. Mrs. Hillyer, who is the widow of Appleton R. Hillyer, will retain possession of her residence for another year. Afterwards, Mr. Holcombe said, the building may be opened to the company's employees for social purposes until the plans for the new home are completed.

The purchase of the new site adds another to the list of the companies moving into the vicinity of the State Capitol. Among the companies that have gone into that district are the Orient Insurance Company and the London & Lancashire Fire Insurance Company, Ltd., at Nos. 22 and 24 Trinity street; the Phoenix (fire) Insurance Company and the Connecticut Fire Insurance Company, at the corner of Trinity and Elm streets, and the Scottish Union & National Insurance Company of Edinburgh, at No. 75 Elm street.

Wadsworth was a member of the Wadsworth family, made famous in the Revolution by the cause of liberty of Jeremiah Wadsworth, Washington commissary general and his adviser and friend. The statue of Captain Wadsworth is a fine figure eight feet high the work of R. E. Brooks, of Mass., one of the best known American sculptors.

His more notable works include the bronze bust of Governor William Russell, and a marble bust of Gardiner Tufts in the city hall in Boston; bronze busts of Wendell Holmes, and General Walker in the Boston public gardens; a bronze statue of Col. Thomas Cass, (bronze) gold medal at Paris salon in the first gold medal Paris exposition in 1900 and the first gold medal Pan-American exposition; statue of Charles Carroll, of Maryland, and John Hanson, for the city hall, Washington, D. C.; statue of Robert Treat Paine, of Boston, Mass.; marble statue of John Adams, and Roger Ludlow, on the new state capitol; statue of William H. Seward, for Seattle, statue of General J. M. Hood, of Annapolis, Md.; bronze medal at the World's fair, all the mayors of Boston, and the mayor's office, 150 medals at private parties; several nude statues of which received honorable mention at Paris Salon, 1895; statue of former Governor John M. While the three were at last emerging from the thicket to rejoin the rest of their command, Dobbs was wounded and fell. Private Acheson immediately ran to him, under fire, and carried him on his shoulder toward a place of security. He had proceeded only a few yards, however, when his wounded comrade was again struck and this time was killed outright. Almost directly

The Rev. and Mrs. Acheson have purchased the large corner house on Washington street opposite the western end of Washington green which has been occupied for several years by the family of the late Robert N. Jackson. They have also purchased half of the lot adjoining it on the east, known as the Leffingwell property, which formed a part of the Alsop estate. It has been well known that ever since Mr. Acheson's election as suffragan bishop he has been determined to remain in Middletown if he could arrange it. It is a source of gratification to his parishioners, bishop of Rhode Island. The attending physicians will be Rev. Dr. Sam-resided there. In 1870 it was sold to former Mayor Samuel Russell, who resided there with his family until 1892, all his children having been born there, including Major T. M. Russell and Major Samuel Russell, jr., both of this city. In 1892 Mr. Russell leased the house to Robert N. Jackson, who continued to occupy it during Mr. Russell's ownership and until Mr. Jackson's death this year.

The house is a three-story structure, built on the generous lines of the older type of Middletown homes. There are fourteen large rooms and spacious verandas. It stands far back from the street under handsome trees and amid grounds susceptible of artistic treatment. The adjoining property acquired with it is at present somewhat low and marshy, but is to be filled in and cultivated to correspond with the remainder of the new Acheson property. The work of surveying for these alterations has already begun and alterations of the house are also being planned. It is expected that the new place will be ready for occupancy before Mr. Acheson will be called upon to lay down his duties as rector to take up his work as suffragan bishop.

Sidelights That Show the

Middletown, December 4.—Suffragan Bishop E. Campion Acheson has had his picture taken in the flowing robes of the episcopacy. They set off the bishop's well-knit frame to good advantage, and the photograph gives us a glimpse of an imposing ecclesiastical viceregent. Those who revel in the pomp and ceremonial attending divine worship will find much to please in the likeness of the new bishop.

And any who wish may have one of the pictures for a stipend. Bishop Acheson has promised the proceeds of the sale of the pictures to the building fund of St. Andrew's Episcopal chapel at Pameacha.

It will be news to some—and newspapers are supposed to give the news—that bishops are very much like other people. They say they will do things, and don't do them, with as little unconcern as some men who never saw a mitre. It was that way with the new bishop, else this picture would have graced this page ere this.

In fairness, though, something might be said in favor of the man who is set out in so much regalia. The duties he has assumed are heavy and pressing. He is away from home much, and jumps from Thomaston to Clinton, and from Bozrahville to Hartford, like a pawn on a chess board. That is the price he pays for being a bishop. And his friends seem to think that he is making a pretty good bishop, even when he fails to keep his appointments. So what can the newspapers and St. Andrew's building fund and the photographer do but

SOLD TO FRED T. LEY & CO

The four-story brick building on the northeast corner of Main and State streets and the two-story structure just north of it have been sold by the Old Corner realty trust to F. T. Ley & Co, incorporated, for a price in excess of $400,000. The exact price was not announced, but the sale price was said to equal $4500 to $5000 a front foot. The assessed value of the property is $347,600. The sale was negotiated by the E. J. Murphy company, real estate brokers.

The Main and State streets site the home of the Springfield institution for savings, the present building on the corner having been erected for them in 1867 and occupied by them up to about the time of its purchase by the Old Corner realty trust December 24, 1907. Prior to the erection of the present building the land was covered by a three-story brick structure known as the Dwight building. It was erected in 1785 by James Scutt Dwight. The present building fronts 89 feet on Main street and 90 feet on State street and runs through to Market street, where it has a frontage of 98 feet.

The building is occupied in part by F. T. Ley & Co, incorporated, whose growing needs call for further expansion, and it is its intent after various alterations and improvements to occupy the entire space on the upper floors. The ground floor is occupied by Mitchell the tailor, the Bay State fur company, the Whipple jewelry house, Meacham & Hassell, florists, Garlick cigar store and Frentzos Bros, shoe shine parlors.

Mrs. Adolphus Smedburg of New York was among the guests at the dance given at the Golf Club on Friday evening, at which her sister, Mrs. Emerson G. Taylor, was one of the hostesses.

Mr. and Mrs. James Parkhill Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Gifford Taylor and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pomerooy Day entertained a large number of guests of a reception and dance at the Hartford Golf Club on Friday evening. The receiving party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Andrews. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor and Mr. Day, as Mrs. Day did not attend because of the recent death of her uncle, Frederic M. Bunce. The first floor of the clubhouse was used for dancing and the entire second floor was set with small tables at which supper was served.

Announcement has been received of the marriage of Rev. Stoddard Lane of the Boulevard, now pastor of the Dutch Reformed Church in Bogota, N. J., and Miss Anna Hatheway Hepburn, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hepburn, of Freehold, N. J. Rev. Mr. Lane is the oldest son of Professor and Mrs. Charles S. Lane of the Boulevard. Captain C. E. Bacon is playing his fourth year on the Wesleyan team, having been quarterback since he entered college. His handling of the forward pass this year coupled with his efficient generalship justifies his being considered as a candidate for All-American quarterback. Mr. Bacon was graduated from Wesleyan University in 1903, and is now a prominent banker in Brooklyn.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Stanley Scott and Charles S. Robbins of Sigourney street were among the guests invited to the wedding of Clarence Everett Bacon formerly of Middletown, now of New York, and Miss Eva Peabody, which took place Saturday afternoon in Brooklyn and was one of the largest and most brilliant affairs of this season in that city.

ALLAIRE

Will Cele

MR. AND MRS. JULIUS ALLAIRE.

Nov 6 - 1915

Today is the fiftieth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Allaire, which they will celebrate at the home of their daughter, Mrs. George A. Dunn, No. 12 Morton street. The afternoon and evening will be set apart for the greeting of old friends and neighbors from Windsor Locks, East Windsor, Springfield and Manchester and relatives from Thompsonville, New Haven and other places. Mr. and Mrs. Allaire are the parents of thirteen children, six of whom are living. Mr. Allaire met his wife, then Miss Ellen Donovan, in Windsor Locks and they were married at St. Mary's Church in that town November 6, 1865. The ceremony was performed by Rev. James Smith, the first parish priest in Windsor Locks.

The bride was the daughter of Thomas and Mary (Sheridan) Donovan. Mr. Allaire was born in Quebec, Canada, December 24, 1840, and "came to the States" as he expresses it, when he was about 17 years old. He worked in New Rochelle, N. Y., about two years and then went to East Windsor and became a quarryman for a time. Later he bought a farm and ran it about thirty-five years and, upon retiring, came to Hartford six years ago with his wife. For about two years they lived at No. 3 Columbia street and then the Allaires gave up housekeeping and have since lived with their daughter, Mrs. George A. Dunn. Mrs. Allaire was 70 years old October 26 and Mr. Allaire is five years her senior. The surviving children are Miss Elizabeth Allaire of Thompsonville, George E. Allaire of East Hartford, Frank W. Allaire of Niagara, N. Y., Mrs. William L. Flemming of New Haven; Mrs. George A. Dunn of Hartford and Mrs. Royal J. Bassette of Hartford. There are also three grandchildren, Ethel and Leonard Allaire, children of Mr. and Mrs. George E.

TWO INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Rev. Dr. William DeLoss Love and Charles Brockway Hurt At North Stonington, Nov 8 1915

Rev. Dr. William DeLoss Love, president of the Connecticut Humane Society, who was injured in an automobile accident at North Stonington a week ago last Monday, is recovering from a double fracture of the right shoulder. The manner in which the accident occurred is peculiar.

With Charles Brockway and Special Agent Herbert S. Wells of the humane society, Dr. Love went to the Joseph Byron Totten farm at Pendleton Hill, near North Stonington, to look up a case requiring the society's investigation. While returning in a touring car, the automobile, through failure of the brakes to work, overturned, throwing Dr. Love and Mr. Brockway from the car and pinning Wells, who was driving, to the ground.

The car had to be lifted off of Wells, who was uninjured. Dr. Love, who was afterwards found to have two breaks in his shoulder, walked to the home of George Coates in North Stonington, and was later taken to his home in this city. He remained at Mr. Coates's place two hours while the car was being repaired. Mr. Brockway, who has a badly wrenched back and broken ankle, is still at the Coates home.

THE TRAVELERS INSURANCE COMPANY

AGENTS' RECORD

MORAL: INSURE IN THE TRAVELERS

VOL. XIII.

HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT, NOVEMBER 15, 1915.

No. 21

PRESIDENT LOUIS F. BUTLER

The Directors of The Travelers Insurance Company at their meeting Monday, November 8, elected Vice-President Louis F. Butler as President of the Company. Mr. Butler was also elected President of The Travelers Indemnity Company. Mr. Butler's wide experience in the varied lines of insurance written by The Travelers and his active participation in the direction of the affairs of the Company have made him the unanimous choice of the Directors as the logical successor of the late President S. C. Dunham. Vice-President Way presided at the meeting, and when the time came for the election of officers he asked the senior Director to take the chair in order that he might make a nomination for the presidency of The Travelers Insurance Company. He thereupon nominated Vice-President Louis F. Butler for that position, seconded by Mr. Arthur L. Shipman, and his motion was carried unanimously. Vice-President Way's action is significant of the close and friendly business relations among the officers and the staff of the Company generally, and demonstrates the unity of The Travelers throughout its entire Home Office and agency organization.

Mr. Butler's entire business life has been devoted to The Travelers Insurance Company. He entered the service of the Company in 1890, and has seen its assets grow from eleven and one-half million dollars to over one hundred million dollars. He was first employed in the Ticket Department, and was soon transferred to the Actuarial Department under the late Mr. George Ellis, a man greatly resembling the late President Dunham in his command of the loyalty and enthusiastic support of those associated with him. Mr. Ellis was the first man to apply actuarial practices to Liability Insurance, and had he lived his discriminating intelligence would have been invaluable in simplifying the problems connected with the transition from Employers' Liability Insurance to Workmen's Compensation. To his training under Mr. Ellis, Mr. Butler owes to no small degree his present efficiency in the varied lines of insurance which The Travelers underwrites. On June 10, 1901, Mr. Butler was appointed Assistant Actuary of the Company, and later in the same year Actuary of the Accident Department. That his activities were not limited to actuarial work was recognized by the Directors by his election to the office of Assistant Secretary January 2, 1904, and his succession to the office of Secretary, January 9, 1907, upon the retirement of Secretary John E. Morris, who at that time declined re-election and became Associate Secretary. Although Mr. Butler's ability has been perhaps more evident in its application to the exceedingly complex subject of Liability and Workmen's Compensation Insurance, yet the Directors of the Company realized that the title of Vice-President was a more appropriate designation for an officer who also had demonstrated his knowledge of the financial affairs of the Company as well as his experience with all lines of Life and Casualty underwriting, and he was elected to that position January 24, 1912. Close association with the late President Dunham in the direction of the Company's affairs makes Mr. Butler his logical successor.

Since the incorporation of The Travelers Indemnity Company in 1906 it has devolved upon Mr. Butler to direct the Company's activities, and he has successively held the positions of Assistant Secretary, Secretary, Vice-President and now President.

President Butler is a Director of the First National Bank of this city and of The Travelers Bank & Trust Company. He is a member of the New York Commandery of the military order of the Loyal Legion, and the Griffith A. Stedman Camp of the Sons of Veterans. He is also a member of the Hartford Club, Hartford Golf Club, Country Club at Farmington, and the Hartford Canoe Club.

Mr. Butler was born in Hartford July 23, 1871. His father, John Hartwell Butler, the son of the late Dr. John S. Butler of this city, was an officer in the United States Army during the Civil War, acting as Chief of Artillery of the Reserve Cavalry Brigade of the Army of the Potomac; he was wounded in an engagement in Virginia, November, 1863, and later was obliged to retire from active service because of disability, with the rank of Major. Mr. Butler's mother was a daughter of Louis Fatio, Captain of the United States Navy and subsequently Captain in the United States Revenue Marine. Mrs. Butler is a daughter of the late Rev. James B. Goodrich of Concord, N. H., and a granddaughter of James B. Powell, at one time President of the Mercantile Bank of this city.

RECORD PROSPERITY

Every department of the Company shows the greatest activity and progress. In the life department record succeeds record, a rising tide sweeping to a new high-water mark at the end of the year.

In the accident department new business is coming better every day, and the handicap contest shows each week a most gratifying gain over the corresponding contest period of last year.

Behind the merits of the Travelers' policies and the confident enthusiasm of our agents, surges an onrushing tide of business and financial prosperity that makes every effort fruitful of results. This prosperity bids fair to continue for a long period, giving freely of its plenty to every man who has the will and the energy to associate himself with it.

Miss Josephine Frances Flynn and Richard Vincent Blake, both of this city, were married yesterday morning at 8:30 o'clock at the Church of the Immaculate Conception. The bride's attendant was Miss Helen M. Farrell and the best man was Edward C. Con-

JAPANESE EMPEROR AT KIOTO

Reverential Hush Envelops City as Sacred Mirror is Enshrined

A church-like hush enveloped Kioto, the ancient capital of the Japanese empire, when Emperor Yoshihito and a gorgeous cortege made their state entry into the city at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Here on Wednesday will be held the first great coronation ceremony. A similar scene never was witnessed in the western world. The emperor and the imperial shrine were silently worshiped by his subjects. The cortege was regarded as a sacred mystic and religious procession. Although a desire to avoid accident was a controlling factor, one of the chief reasons for imposing silence upon the multitude was a wish to maintain reverence for the monarch as he arrived in the city for the sacred coronation rites. The Japanese viewpoint found expression when the master of ceremonies said to the Americans and other foreigners who were assigned to vantage points in the palace grounds, "When the shrine and the emperor pass, please remove your hats and bow, but do not cheer."

A gray autumn day added to the solemnity of the scene when the procession entered the palace grounds in a purely Japanese setting. Hundreds, bent with years, stood beside soldiers, reservists and thousands of delegates from the societies of the empire. Waiting at the palace portal were two-score court ladies gowned in ancient robes of white and scarlet. The cortege was in all respects similar to the one which passed through Tokio. The shrine, hidden behind curtains of purple, gold and red, borne on the shoulders of yellow-kimonoed villagers, was preceded by priests afoot and followed by the emperor in the royal golden coach.

As the cortege reached the palace gates, the notes of a bugle broke the stillness and informed the multitude that the sacred mirror was enshrined. Then the reverent restraint was broken and the immense throngs gave themselves up to gayety, fireworks and illuminations.

Among the Americans in Kioto are Mrs Francis Burton Harrison, wife of the governor-general of the Philippines; Mrs Sidney Cloman and Capt A. F. Commiskey of Manila, Mr and Mrs Walter Scholl Kopf of Buffalo, Mr and Mrs W. R. Warner and daughter, Warner Seelye and Miss G. Elliott of Cleveland, Mrs Francis Wolcott of Colorado and Miss M. H. McKinney of Brooklyn, J. M. Smith of New York, Miss Louisa Wurz and Miss Bessie Lauder of Pittsburg, Miss Florence Boynton of San Francisco, Mrs James Estest of Chattanooga, Admiral and Mrs Albert G. en able to stop the varsity rushes in cent practices.

Just how serious an obstacle to success the supposed weakness to the line cannot be told now. Rush finished his last hard practice Wednesday and the men have had little real work do since then. On the last day at the line gave abundant evidences still being a long way below form, it on that occasion there were several of the regulars out and McLean just returned to the game. Moreover, the two days' rest may have had sufficiently good influence on the men to bring them once again to the standard that they set in the early games.

The tactics of the coaches in tomorrow's game will probably be those that have been attempted at the start of early all of the Tigers' contests this season. Driggs's toe will be depended upon at the outset of the game. With the smiling fullback punting in the time phenomenal form that he has displayed in the past, there will then be a pretty duel between Driggs and Mahan. Should Princeton get a chance to rush the ball, the running attack can be called upon, with either a fairly extensive open game to back it up, or else an attempt at field-goal by the redoubtable Tibbott will mark that point where the Harvard forwards stop the attack. The double duel between Eddie Mahan on the one side, and Eddie Driggs and Dave Tibbott on the other will be watched with interest if the kicking game occupies the prominence that the "dope" says it will.

The only weakness that threatens Princeton on this kind of a game comes from the ends. All the ends on the Tiger squad have been weak in one way or another during the season. Practically the only one that can be really dependable is young Highley, whose slight weight

Emperor Worships Before Sacred Mirror at Kioto—Foreigners Admitted for First Time

The people of Japan and the representatives of the people of foreign lands were present at Kioto to-day at the coronation of a mikado, when Yoshihito, son of Mutsuhito, acceded to the throne of Nippon. The story of this epochal event is the history of old Japan, epitomized. It is the story of the Japanese ancestral gods and of the emperor's sacred duties. The robes of the emperor and his court dignitaries changed their costume to the ancient ceremonial court robes.

Entrance of Emperor

At a given signal the chief participants in the ceremony seated themselves in Japanese fashion on cushions resting on the floor or matting. Then the pounders of gongs and drums beat their instruments three times by way of announcing the commencement of the ceremony. Led by high court officials all those present, including civil and military officers and the diplomatic corps who had assembled in the antechamber, rose and entered the main hall. All these people were seated also. There was a period of impressive silence suddenly broken by strains of music. The steady, clear note of the Japanese flute was succeeded by harmonious softer strains, symbolic of sanctity and joy. This was the kagura or Shinto music played by the court musicians. As the chords filled the air the doors of the imperial sanctuary were slowly opened and the ritualists placed sacred offerings before the altar. This over, the chief ritualist, majestic in flowing robes and wearing the stiff oval bonnet of the Shinto priest, knelt before the altar and then rising read the "norito" or ceremonial address announcing to the soul of the imperial ancestor, Amaterasu Omikami, the beginning of the grand accession or coronation ceremonies. Another profound silence. It was the precursor of the supreme moment and this was the stately entry of the emperor and his suite. The grand master of ceremonies, the minister of the household and two chamberlains preceded his majesty and each chamberlain bore a sacred object, one the sword and the other the comma-shaped jewel necklace. Following the emperor were the lord chamberlain, chamberlains, chief aid-de-camp, aids-de-camp, and at a short distance the princes of the blood, Count of the privy seal and the chief coronation commissioner.

The emperor was a striking vision in a pure milk-white robe of gloss silk. The color white is always worn in ritual services, being symbolic of purity and sanctity. All the garments outer and inner were white, in accordance with the ancient court regulations and the shoes were of the same color. The robe, which was encircled with a belt of pure white, was in the form of a kimono and hung loosely below the knee with two flaps at the bottom just touching the floor. The sleeves hung free and were about two feet in length. The outer garment was closed by being folded over from the left to the right and was fastened with a large silk cord at the collar. On his head the emperor wore a silk coronet of imperial shape which was fastened under the chin with bands of silk.

The emperor, accompanied by the chamberlains holding the sacred sword and jewel, seated himself on a dais at the inner side of the hall. The sacred sword and jewel were placed on stands beside him. The divine mirror had been previously enshrined in the sanctuary, which was decorated with bamboo blinds, silk portieres and silk curtains. The emperor's seat was a square mat bordered with brocade woven alternately with vertical lines and floral patterns. The princes and princesses of the blood and other members of the imperial family stood in a row in the southern gallery of the hall, the prime minister, household minister, lord keeper of the privy seal, lord chamberlain, grand master of ceremonies, chamberlains, lord steward to the empress, vice-grand master of ceremonies and maids of honor standing behind the members of the imperial family. The chief aid-de-camp and aids-de-camp, who were in full military dress, stood nearby. Thus was set this historic picture of old Japan in marvel of costume and maze of color.

After a brief interval the emperor rose and facing the imperial sanctuary read an address before the Kashikodokoro announcing his coronation as the 122d ruler of the Japanese empire and its dependencies and his acquisition of the sacred treasures. Then he murmured a prayer beseeching the protection of his imperial ancestors. The prayer concluded, the emperor took the sacred bowl held by a chamberlain and rang it before the sanctuary, according to Shinto ritual. When the emperor had resumed his place on the dais, the crown prince, princes and princesses of the blood and other members of the imperial family made their obeisance before the sanctuary. A court woman in ancient robes made angibles representative of the absent emperor. The ceremony itself was very simple and brief but was impressive and was august. Subsequently the emperor, followed by his retinue, retired from the place of ceremony amid the bows of all present. The ministers of state, members of the Diet, nobles and other dignitaries were given an opportunity to pay their respects before the imperial sanctuary. The ceremony having been concluded, the emperor moved from the altar by ent.

CORONATION OF THE MIKADO

Description of a Grand Ceremonial and Its Interesting Mixture of Oriental and Occidental Elements—

To the Editor of The Republican:—

Long before this letter reaches Springfield The Republican will have received telegraphic accounts of the coronation of the emperor of Japan. While there will be no advantage in repeating what has thus been made known, it will perhaps not be amiss to write of some matters that may not have found place in the more formal reports.

There was a strange mingling of what is new with what is centuries old. Notwithstanding what Kipling has written, the East and the West do meet in Japan, and the combination sometimes takes on curious forms. The commission of grand ceremonies studied history and myth in order to learn what was done in ancient times, and on the other hand inquired into the customs that attend the coronation of western monarchs. In deciding what provinces should raise the two kinds of rice needed for certain rites, the cracks made in a tortoise shell as it was heated over a fire made of cherry wood were carefully examined in accordance with the rules for divination; while in fixing the date for the ceremony the records of the modern weather bureau were studied in order to learn the day most likely to be pleasant.

This latter method of prognostication seemed justified when, after two rainy days had caused much anxiety, that of the coronation was unusually warm and pleasant.

Some of the music was played on instruments whose wailing minor strains seem to foreigners more appropriate for a funeral than for a joyful occasion, and these were in strange contrast with the drums and trumpets of the military bands. The low-roofed palace with its roof of cryptomeria bark is furnished with telephones and lighted at night with electricity. In its courtyard were ranged men holding bows and spears, while just outside the gate were long lines of soldiers, clothed in khaki and armed with rifles. Jinrikishas, carriages and automobiles brought to the palace ladies wearing elegantly-embroidered court robes of ancient style or those whose models came from Paris.

Shinto ritualists wore their white robes and peculiar headgear; generals and nobles presented a brilliant appearance with gold-lace trimmings, plumed hats and the medals which are so lavishly bestowed in this country that some of the noble breasts hardly furnished room for all that their owners were entitled to display. The question of what to wear is at times an important one for men as well as for women.

Earl M. Gardner, a clerk in the employ of Clapp & Treat, the State street hardware men, and Miss Catherine Manning, both of East Hartford, were married at St. James's Church Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. There is nothing unusual in the mere fact. Hundreds of couples are married every day—some with incident, others without. The "incident" attending this particular affair is where the chief interest centers among those apart from the contracting parties.

Repeatedly on various occasions chiefly when friends had played pranks with newly-married people, young Gardner had announced that if he ever got married there would be none of the rice-confetti nonsense—"No one will know about it in advance, you bet!" was his usual remark.

In some way his associates learned that Gardner was to be married on Miss Grace Paterson Whiteside, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Whiteside, of No. 856 Windsor avenue, and Burton M. Mandeville, of Engine company No. 2, Hartford, fire department, were married at 7 o'clock, Wednesday evening, at the First Presbyterian church, the Rev. Dr. John F. Johnstone, the pastor, officiating. The church was decorated in pink, white and green, palms, ferns, carnations and chrysanthemums being used. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended only by her sister, Miss Jean Whiteside, as maid of honor. Ollie Lathrop was best man, and the ushers were Robert Mandeville, brother of the bridegroom, and his nephew, Frederick Mandeville, of Meriden. John Boyce, cousin of the bride, was at the door. Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was played by Robert Prutting, organist of the church, for the entrance of the bridal party, and the "Bridal Chorus," from "Lohengrin" march was used as a recessional. During the ceremony, "O Promise Me," was played.

There were about 300 guests and an especially interesting feature was the presence of four generations of the bride's family: her great-grandmother, Mrs. Robert Paterson; her mother, Mrs. John Whiteside; her sister, Mrs. Robert Mandeville, and the latter's children, Anita and Roberta Claire Mandeville.

The bride wore a gown of white crape de chine and a tulle veil caught with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The maid of honor wore Nile green satin charmeuse, and carried pink roses. The ceremony was followed by a reception and supper at the home of the bride's parents, at which about fifty-five guests were present. The house decorations were in pink, green and white.

FATHER GETS

CUSTODY OF SON.

Dr. William H. Van Strander of this city was divorced from Maude E. Fuller Van Strander, a nurse at the Robert B. Brigham Hospital on Parker Hill avenue, Boston, by Judge Joseph P. Tuttle in the superior court yesterday. In addition to the divorce, the custody of a son born of the marriage, now 5 years old, was awarded to Dr. Van Strander. They were married at the home of Mrs. Van Strander's parents, in Georgetown, Mass., June 12, 1903, and Mrs. Van Strander was charged with deserting her husband April 25, 1912. Dr. Van Strander said that, a few days before the date of the alleged desertion, his wife was not feeling well and was nervous and expressed a desire to go to the home of her parents for a couple of weeks. She left for Georgetown with this intention. A few days after she had gone he had a talk with Annie Demick, who, for three years prior to that time and now, is a maid in the family.

In view of what the maid told him, he wrote a letter to his wife asking for an explanation of her conduct, but he never got an explanation from her. Subsequently, he met his wife in Springfield, by appointment, and she told him she would never return.

 Dr. Cephus B. Crane, who was pastor of the South Baptist Church from 1860 to 1878, and Mrs. Crane, formerly Miss Mary Day, daughter of Horatio E. Day, then deacon of the church, will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage tomorrow. The members who were received into the church during Dr. Crane's pastorate, are to send him a gift of $50 in gold and a box of chrysanthemums. Dr. Crane and Mrs. Crane are now living in Cambridge, Mass.

there. He has worked under five succeeding superintendents, including Mortimer L. Bristol, the present superintendent. They were Horace Lord, Franklin Knouse, L. C. Grover, J. J. Peard and M. L. Bristol. Mr. Green does not remember Samuel Colt, having entered the employ of the company shortly after Colonel Colt's death.

Changes in personnel have been accompanied by as great changes in methods. Modern machinery has taken the place of the old. Efficiency has come into its own and with it has come a speeding up in production. Mr. Green remembers when Colt's was referred to as "the old man's shop," but with the introduction of modern methods of production this phrase is no longer applicable.

With two exceptions Mr. Green is the oldest employee in point of age. Dr. John Robinson of Philadelphia, who said he was in a hurry to get back to his hospital work in that city, called at the bureau of vital statistics in the new municipal building to-day and applied for a citizenship to wed Miss Sylvia S. Frink. When Dr. Robinson was acquainted with the law in regard to non-residents, which holds up a marriage license five days, he departed for a clergyman to obtain a special permit under the law for the issue of the license right away.

FORMER WATER BOY BUYS STEEL STOCK.

F. L. Replogle Gets $15,000,000 of Cambria Shares.

New York, November 13. — Three hundred thousand shares of stock, or thereabouts, in the Cambria Steel were sold to-day for approximately $15,000,000 to J. Leonard of this city, who started his career when eleven years water boy, at less than $5 in the Cambria mills at Johnstown, Penn.

Replogle, who is now 38 years of age, bought the stock against his old superior official H. Donner, for the stock and won it after negotiating in Philadelphia, which day and virtually all night the largest Single Owner.

Replogle's purchases were begun for the remainder and ended in the transfer of the stock to Mr. Replogle. So far as is known, Replogle is the largest owner. Whether a fight will develop is to be seen. The Cambria property consists of works, mills and blast furnaces at Johnstown, Penn., and other ore holdings in Michigan. In addition, the company owns the Cambria Steamship company and the Manufacturers' company of Johnstown. What will be the result of the Cambria property with the Cambria property.

Mr. Replogle's management succeeds in obtaining additional stock to give him a larger share than he is yet to be divulged. It is considered as unlikely, however, that the Cambria plant will be put to work extensively on munition orders for the Allies, an undertaking with which Wall street gossip had identified several steel changes recently. A statement covering this probably will be forthcoming within a few days.

Flood Ruined the Family.

Mr. Replogle, the son of well-to-do parents, was attending school in Johnstown when the flood came. He was swept several miles down the river, clinging to the roof of his home. Two of his immediate family were drowned and all their property destroyed. The boy who had been working during vacation had to stop going to school and devote his entire time to work.

From water boy he was promoted to clerk, shipper, assistant superintendent of the forge, axle and bolt department, superintendent of order department, assistant general manager, assistant to the president, and on September 26, 1913, he was elected vice-president. He resigned March 1 last to enter the fight he had just won.

Associated with Mr. Replogle in the purchase are B. Dawson Coleman and J. H. Weaver of Philadelphia, and E. V. Babcock and Frank J. Lanahan, of Pittsburgh.

The company's production last month broke all its past records, amounting to 122,069 tons of finished product.

PROGRESS IN HALF CENTURY OF RELIGION

Dr Moxom Reviews 50 Years Since His Ordina- tion — Personal Experi- ences

[Written by Rev Dr Philip S. Moxom
for The Republican.]

FLIFTY years ago, on September 19, 1871, I was ordained to the work of the Christian ministry. During the winter preceding that event I taught a "destrict school" in Barry county, Michigan. One day, early in the school year, I gained access to the attic, or loft, of the village general store where on the floor I found the small village library which was utterly neglected and by most persons entirely forgotten. Amidst the dust-covered heap I discovered two volumes which were destined to have a great influence on my intellectual life. They were De Quincey's "Confessions of an English Opium-eater" and Ralph Waldo Emerson's "Representative Men." I read both with avidity and felt as if something had exploded in my brain. Then I awoke, to use Emerson's phrase, "With an appetite that could eat the solar system like a cake."

From that time I read everything that I could lay my hands on. At the end of my teaching engagement in the early spring, after paying my debts, I went to Jackson and spent the remainder of the small sum which I had earned in buying books. One of those books was Herbert Spencer's work on "Education." About the same time I bought three volumes of Robert Browning's works, two volumes of poems in the Ticknor & Field's edition, and "Dramatis Personae," though it was not till several years later that I awakened to the significance of the great poet's message.

Entered a Law Office

Shortly after school closed, I think in May, 1871, I went to Kalamazoo and entered the law office of Buck & May and began the study of law. As a child I was impressed with the idea that I should be a preacher, but an experience of a little more than two years in the army and several years in college wrought a temporary change and I was looking forward to the legal profession and, perhaps, a political career. In the latter part of June came an event which changed

Dr Moxom's 50 Years

It is a little more than 50 years since Rev Dr Philip S. Moxom, long pastor of the South Congregational church in this city and now pastor emeritus, was ordained to the ministry. The exact anniversary occurred somewhat over a month ago. In the reminiscent article which The Republican has persuaded Dr Moxom to write, and which appears on another page in this issue, the unusual circumstances which were the immediate cause of his entry into the ministry are interestingly described.

The brief summary which Dr Moxom gives of some of the issues or incidents involved in the development of broader religious thought, harmonious with, rather than hostile to, modern science, would not be complete without recognition that he has himself been one of the outstanding figures in advancing Christian liberalism.

aspirants.

This is no call to tame submission to every challenger. A man need not quit his unfinished job. The problem is to recognize the turning point where one's efficiency wavers in the balance and the welfare of others outweighs the personal claim. There is always one dissatisfied parishioner, but that is not a valid reason for changing pastors. Some people are more efficient at 80 than others are at 40. Be fair to yourself and to society, and recognize your need of retiring when the pension period makes it possible.

address was on "The True Orthodoxy," an address that gave pain to at least one, and probably two, of my teachers.

During my theological course I served as pastor of the Mount Morris (N. Y.) Baptist church. This pastorate I filled from August, 1875, to March 31, 1879, though I graduated from the seminary in May, 1878. Every Monday morning during the seminary year I took the train from Mount Morris to Rochester, a journey of about 40 miles, and every Friday evening I returned to conduct the weekly meeting of the church. On Saturdays I prepared sermons (always two, sometimes three), made pastoral calls and attended to family affairs. I had been married two weeks before my ordination in 1871.

Called to Cleveland

On April 1, 1879, I went to the First Baptist church in Cleveland, a call to which church had been extended to me in the preceding November. It may well be surmised that I worked hard. It is incredible now that I stood the strain without breaking. Certainly I could understand the remark of Cecil concerning Lord Raleigh: "I know that he can tell terrible things."

That priceless thing, the Bible, has emerged, or is emerging, from obscurity; inconsistencies and contradictions have been removed, and the history of religion has been flooded with light.

Rise of Missionary Movement

3. Another striking feature of the past half-century is the extraordinary extension of the Christian missionary enterprise and its development in rationality and efficiency. The modern missionary movement arose in the last decade of the 18th century, especially among the Moravians and the English Baptists. The first foreign missionary society among the Baptists was formed in 1790.

In 1810 the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions had begun its work in Williamstown.

New Britain, October 5.—"Until the end of the war, missionary work in Turkey will be impossible and the plans for the future depend entirely on the outcome of the war," said Miss E. Gertrude Rogers, who arrived home Tuesday after a year's stay at the mission station in Van, Turkey. In ordinary times missionary life at Van is exciting enough. From May until August, this year, conflict between the Turkish troops and the Armenians added thrill to the life there and then followed the occupation of the town by Russian troops. When Miss Rogers and the other missionaries left Van, August 4 the city of ordinary 40,000 population became practically deserted, the only occupants being troops engaged in war. Miss Rogers said:

"For months a dangerous condition prevailed. Numerous massacres

V. E. A. Yarrow Was In Armenia During Massacres—Speaks At South Church Tomorrow.

Rev. Ernest A. Yarrow, of Van, Eastern Turkey, speaks at the South Congregational Church tomorrow morning. He is a graduate of Wesleyan University, and is remembered there as one of the best tackles in its football history. His further training was at the Hartford Theological Seminary, where he was a classmate of Rev. Irving H. Berg, of the South Church. Immediately after his graduation in 1904, Mr. Yarrow sailed for Turkey, under appointment to Van, an important station of the American board. There he worked for eight years with Dr. Reynolds, who is well known in Hartford, laying the foundations for Van College, an institution for training Armenian and Turkish youth.

Mr. Yarrow and his family were in America on furlough in 1913 and 1914, and had little more than reached Van to begin their second term of service when the war broke out in Europe. Its effects were soon felt in Armenia, where the Russian army drove the Turks to the southward, and captured the city of Van. After a military occupation of several months, the pressure of the reinforced Turkish army compelled the Russians to withdraw, and the American missionaries had to leave the city, although several of them were at that time ill with typhus fever, at last finding refuge in the Russian city of Tiflis.

Two of their number had died, Mrs Ussher and Mrs. Reynolds, and all suffered from the strain and exposure. To their own sufferings during this period had been added the pain of seeing their friends massacred by the hundred. The mission compound was a distributing center for food and other supplies, and the hospital and school buildings were overflowing with the sick and wounded. But even the American and Red Cross flags did not protect the compound from the Turkish gunners, and siege, sickness, starvation and death were all crowded into those terrible days. Mr. Yarrow and the other missionaries from Van are now in America regaining their strength, and planning new measures of relief and general uplift for Turkey as the way for their returns open.

FLIGHT FROM VAN TO RUSSIA

Graduate of Hartford Seminary and His Hard Time Getting Out of Turkish Empire.

William Laubbach Nute, a graduate of the Hartford Theological seminary, has arrived safely in Switzerland, after a dangerous trip of five months in an escape from the Turkish empire. For three years he was an instructor in St. Paul's college in Tarsus, Turkey, and at Christmas, because of ill health, was ordered to America. He made a long overland journey to Beirut, expecting to get on an American battleship there. However, when he arrived, the German government refused a guarantee of protection to the vessel even after the Turkish government had given its consent to permit the ship to take off Americans.

Mrs. Nute, who is also a graduate of the seminary, and is in this country, received a letter, not long ago, telling of the frightful conditions, the British prisoners had to contend with at Tarsus. While there Mrs. Nute helped in relief work, and although the Americans were allowed to care for the prisoners, they had been so ill-treated that many of them died.

Mrs. Nute's mother, Mrs. T. D. Christie, is the only American left in Tarsus. Kevork Damiamian, a graduate of the seminary in 1914, who is an Armenian, has gained the friendship of the Turks, and is helping in relief work. Mrs. Nute, who is summering with friends at East Northfield, formerly was Miss Mary Christie. Her first husband, Miner Rogers, was also a graduate of the seminary. He was killed in Adana by the Turks in the massacre of 1909.

Mr. Nute is a graduate of Yale college in the class of 1914.

A marriage of interest to Hartford was that of Miss Julia de Forest Cheney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Cheney of New York, and Ridgely Hunt, Jr., of that city, son of Ridgely Hunt of Washington, D. C., which took place in the chantry of Grace church, Tuesday, the Rev. Dr. Charles Lewis Slater officiating. The bride was attended by her younger sister, Miss Harriet Crawford Cheney, and Francis Bergen was best man. The ushers were George H. Day, Jr., of this city; Allen Evans, Jr., William Hunt, George Cheney Seeley and Louis Bailey Blanchard. Mr. Hunt was graduated from Yale in the class of 1914 and is a grandson of the late Major-General Philip Kearny, U. S. A., and the late William Henry Hunt.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

Observed by Mr. and Mrs. Henry

Nov 15 - 1915
P. Mitchell of Newtown.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Mitchell of Newtown observed their golden wedding anniversary on Sunday with the family circle and close friends, sixty-five in number, at their pleasant home on the Depot road. The Newtown correspondent of the Danbury News says among the gathering were sixteen Mitchells, many of whom have been well known about the town for several generations. Perhaps the oldest in the company was Leroy Mitchell aged 87 years, who, with his family, attended the gathering.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Mitchell were united in marriage fifty years ago by the Rev. Austin Isham of Roxbury, at the home of the brides parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Stoddard, South Britain.

The family home still stands opposite the spot where the fine home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Mitchell was destroyed by fire several years ago, with all the contents, since which event Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell have purchased and resided in the former Charles H. Gay home, extensively remodeled by the new owners.

Of the children present were Dr. and Mrs. Philip Mitchell of Brown university, Providence, R. I.; Mr. and Mrs. Amos Mitchell and family of Hartford; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mitchell and sons, Mr. and Mrs. William Wakelee of Southbury; Miss Bessie Mitchell of the high

MARRIED AT HIGHTSTOWN, N. J.

Springfield Lawyer and Windsor (N. J.) Bride to Spend Honeymoon in Florida Nov 17, 1915

A wedding of much interest to Springfield took place Wednesday evening when Miss Maude Ethel Gordon, daughter of Mr and Mrs Forman Hutchinson Gordon of Windsor, N. J., became the bride of Archer Roberts Simpson of Springfield, son of Mr and Mrs Joseph Archer Simpson of Orange. The ceremony was performed in the First Presbyterian church of Hightstown, N. J., by Rev Dr Frank Tyack ex-moderator of the synod of New Jersey, in the presence of some 800 guests.

Miss Ida Louise Gordon, debutante sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. The matron of honor was Mrs George Jones of New Haven, Ct., the seven bridesmaids being Miss Anna S. Gagel of New Haven, Ct., Miss Ethel M. Bland of Waterbury, Ct., Miss Bernice A. Adams of New York city, Miss Harriet Lines of New Haven, Ct., Miss Dora J. Bonbright of Evanston, Ill., Miss Margaretta White of Red Bank, N. J., and Miss Anne E. Tyack of Hightstown, N. J. The best man was Maurice M. Moore of Boston and the ushers included J. T. Simpson of Worcester academy of Worcester, J. Howard Randerson, Lester Lewis and Clare W. Weeks of this city, C. Leslie Reckless of Red Bank, N. J., B. V. Butterfield of New York city and Wallace Ashby and Roy S. Matthews of Washington, D. C. The page was George A. Silver, Jr., of Philadelphia, who, together with the two flower girls, Helen Silver of Philadelphia and Frances Cubberley of Trenton, N. J., preceded the matron of honor as the bridal party walked up the aisle of the church the bride on the arm of her father, coming last.

The bridal gown was a beautiful creation of heavy ivory white duchess satin with a court train draped from the shoulders and embroidered in silver. The bodice was composed of tulle and wide princess lace with trimmings of pearl and rhinestones, while the skirt was draped with wide princess lace. Her veil of tulle was trimmed with lace to match that of the gown, and was fastened in cap effect with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lavender orchids and a yard-long shower of lilies of the valley. The only ornament worn by the bride was a diamond lavalliere, the gift of the bridegroom.

A large reception was held at the country home of the bride's parents in Windsor, N. J., and Mr and Mrs Simpson are now on their wedding trip to Palm Beach, Fla. The bride's traveling suit was of blackberry blue trimmed with skunk fur. The bridegroom is a graduate of Yale university in the class of 1911 and George Washington university law school in 1914 and is practicing law in Springfield.

Rosario Rho of Farmington Tells How By Observing Moon and Stars He Reveals the Weather's Future— A Few Autobiographical Notes of Interest

Dec 15 1915

"GREATER STORMS and tempests than almanacs can report," wrote Shakespeare, or government forecasters predict, he might have added, contemptuous like. But he would have taken off his hat to Rosario Rho of Farmington. What recent reader of "The Courant" has not from time to time seen therein the veil of the future rent asunder and through the written word of Rho beheld the weather that was to be? No tiresome rigmarole about storm area in the West or winds advancing along the South Atlantic coast. No "probably" or "possible." No two-faced prophecy that did not commit the prophet. None of these in Mr. Rho's straight-from-the-shoulder assertions as to what the weather for next Thursday week would be.

It is easy to imagine Mr. Rho meeting a chance acquaintance on the street of Farmington and instead of remarking "This is a pleasant day" giving out some real dope like "It's a horrible atmospheric disturbance with sleet and snow we are having next Sunday."

He is a young man, an Italian of eleven years residence in the United States. And yet he has not hesitated to enter the great arena where for so many of his ninety and more years the sage of Middle Haddam has been chief Toreador. To earn a living he is employed as a gardener by residents of Farmington. But earning a living is only earning a living, and it is when he gets down to his avocation of weather forecasting that he is himself. How does he do it? No less eloquent on his own history and methods than when predicting, he has written for "The Courant" the true story of it two years as he has serviced the army and his time has been expired long ago but he has been re-called though he is not on war zone having spend most of his time in Rome, for he belongs on Artillery Corps. The City where I was born it is about 16,000 inhabitants and it is a well looked City for its beautiful gardeners, with oranges, lemons and villa contain whatever kind of flowery you may wish if You will heppened to go to Rome, it is a surely road to go through there for there are no other roads to go. A good many people in this town, heppened to go to Rome and have saw the City of Fondi where I was born.

When I start to grew up a little about 5 years old my father took me in the school but I was too young yet to understand fact about the school. I went in the school for about 3 or 4 weeks and then the techear commenced to wipped me for I was no good or for he was no good for not having understand himself that I was too young for the school. Since the first time he commenced to wipped me and then it was a continuation for several days, I told my father that the school was of no good for me for such techear. He took me in the school for a good many times but it was of no use for I never liked the techear, for such idiot as he was. A years ago there was no regulation for school but now if someone failed to go to school the father will be able to pay a fine I don't know how much. So when I gave up the school I went rightafter and start to work, learned to do some trade. I begun to work in the tender years of about 8 and at 10, and 12 years I had to work like a man and since then it has been a continuation of hard work to making living on two years then I moved to Unionville but I did not stayed in Unionville very long for I stayed over there about three months and then I moved to this town Farmington from which I have lived ever since. First when I came to this country I could hardly written my name for not having had a common school education in the old country. I started to buy written papers and newspapers, an Italian newspapers for I could not read English newspapers for I did not knew how to read an italian.

I just had all kind of newspapers at my own command for there I had a firm mind to learned read and written an italian and after a very few years, not cared for all the dollars I wasted in the newspapers and written papers, I came to understand how to read and written an Italian and now I am well connected with it. After I was well acquainted with the an Italian, I started with the english newspapers, first New York American, the Times, The World, the Sunn, The Herald, the The Hartford Post, The Times and last it was The Courant from which paper I have been wide-spread all over the country.

And now will have to speaking about weather. It first came when I saw a New York paper and then The Hartford Post with weather's on and it heppened just when I started to pronounced a word in English and since then I have been a very fond for English newspapers especially for the weather for which I am well known all over the country. First when I saw the weather in the newspapers I said, "How they can tell the weather? How they knew about and which planet they based the forecasts?" About 4 or 5 years ago, the time I was work in the Estate of the late A. A. Ponce

Or the four novelties presented to view at local theaters during the past week one has already visited Hartford and may therefore be assumed to be reasonably familiar to Hartford playgoers. This was "Sadie Love," Avery Hopwood's farce, (his second so far this season), which is acknowledged to be funny, but has suffered at the reviewers' hands through comparison with "Fair and Warmer." Also there seems to be a consensus that it skates rather too close to the edge of decency for comfort. Miss Rambeau and Mr. Le Cardoba, however, are generally credited with individual hits and Miss Callish also comes in for her share of strange joy at Sir Herbert's acquittal is short-lived, for even while she is glorying in his proven innocence, he fiercely and suddenly proclaims his guilt, and in almost less time than it takes to tell it, swallows poison, picturesquely rolls down some steps and dies in the approved fashion, to the entire satisfaction of everybody, except possibly Lady Ware.

For some reason best known to the Garrick Company, who are the producers of "The Ware Case," the star who is being presented in the role of Sir Herbert Ware, English baronet, is Lou-Tellegen, the Graeco-Dutch actor who generally passes for French, having first visited this country as leading man for Mme. Sarah Bernhardt. Two or three seasons ago he decided to transfer his allegiance to us and

SOMETHING NEW FOR GRAND'S PATRONS

Will Get First Glimpse of "Sliding" Billy Watson.

IT IS HIS FIRST VISIT TO HARTFORD.

Associated With Him Is Ed.
Lee Wrothe, the Comedian.

The Grand will have as its attraction this week a show that has been attracting unusual attention all along the line and one that is easily a leader among the Columbia Amusement Company's productions. It is the Watson and Wrothe show which brings together those two well known comedians, "Sliding" Billy Watson and Ed. Lee Wrothe. Watson has never been seen in Hartford and is not to be confounded with the Billy Watson of "beef trust" fame. This show is the same as was presented in New York for a long summer run and it accomplished the remarkable achievement of playing to capacity audiences during the hot months of July and August. The performance in reality consists of two distinct shows. In the first part Mr. Wrothe holds forth as the chief comedian. He will be seen again in his old familiar character of "Higgins" but the piece is an entirely new one and bears the title of "Higgins at the Races." He is a comedian who works in an original way and that is one of the reasons for his enormous success. In the second part "Sliding" Billy Watson appears as the chief comedian. He appears in his favorite character of Otto, the Flying Dutchman. The scene is laid in the patent office at Washington and it gives Watson the proper opportunity for his peculiar style of fun and humor. With his funny little slide, his peculiar whistle and his knowledge of comedy stunts, he is always a sure fire hit in his comedy roles.

In the supporting company are such well known players as Owen Martin, one of the best straight comedy men in the business who appears as Kid Wise, a slick con man; Estelle Colbert, a clever character soubrette, portraying the French character of Mazie Gray; Ethel Marmont, Jack Howard, Hazel Woodbury, Max Fehrman, jr. and Al Dupont. At the close of the present season Watson and Wrothe will sail for Europe where reception at the home of the bride.

R. Rho Again Makes Ring Lardner Look Like an Amateur.

To the Editor of the Courant:—
I would like to find out what is the matter with my last letters, in which they have been sent in your office? Several letters have already been sent in the last few months, but nothing have appeared as yet in the Courant to be made public, and till now, still reading the daily Courant, but nothing as yet appeared in the Courant. What is the reason? I cannot explain it and nor can it be predicted for the reason of.

You know, Mr. Clark, that I have been associated with the Courant for many years, and still receiving it daily, but I am dissatisfied that my letters have not been made public for the last few months, even for the weather or others in consequences.

The last letter I sent in was dated last Saturday, June 3, and in which it contained that a son, Antonio, has been born to Mr. and Mrs. R. Rho, the well known weather prophet. Dr. S. E. Phelps, Mrs. Raymond Tribuzio, of this town, and a nurse from Unionville were the attendants.

The baby born is a healthy, strong and big, and weigh more than 18 pounds at the time of born. He was born Tuesday morning, May 30, at 1:15 A. M. standard time, and I was so surprised that nothing as yet have appeared in the Courant, and I don't know the reason or where is the matter.

Newington, Nov. 19.

Vivian Clayton Miller and Miss Ruth Jean Knapp, both of Newington, were married yesterday at 11:30 o'clock a. m., in the First Congregational church in Northampton, Mass., the Rev. Wendell Prime Keeler, pastor of that church, officiating. The groom is the youngest son of the late Henry Louis and Georgia (Nott) Miller of Newington, and a descendant in the eighth generation of William and Patience Miller, who were among the founders of Northampton in 1654. The bride is a daughter of John Henry Knapp of New Britain. Among those present at the ceremony were the bride's father; Mrs. Lulu Miller Fyler, a sister of the groom, and Edward R. Barnard, of Newington; Miss Maydell Davis of Northampton, and Elbert H. T. Miller of Scottsville, N. Y.

Shortly after noon a luncheon was served the wedding party at the home of Mrs. Della M. Waite, Bridge street, Northampton. The couple journeyed to Northampton by automobile, returning early in the evening to the home of the groom in Newington, where they were greeted and congratulated by about one hundred of their relatives and friends. A sumptuous repast was served and music and other festivities were enjoyed until late in the evening.

Sage, Allen & Company Show Appreciation of Employee With Them Twenty-five Years.

Miss Hulda S. Sellers, of Adams street, completed her twenty-fifth year of service with Sage, Allen & Company Thursday and the occasion was observed in a pleasant manner by the firm. During the day Miss Sellers had been reminded of the event by several remembrances from old friends and fellow employees, but she was wholly unprepared for the surprise which was in store for her, when, after the store closed, the employees gathered on the second floor and were briefly addressed by Norman F. Allen who gave to Miss Sellers five $20 gold pieces as a token of the firm's appreciation of her faithfulness and efficiency during the long term of years during which she has been associated with it. Miss Sellers expressed her gratitude in a few well chosen words and the employees showed their approval of the act by giving hearty cheers.

Miss Sellers is a native of Hartford and was educated in the public schools here. She entered the employ of Sage, Allen & Company on November 18, 1890, being then connected with the ribbon department. Later she was made buyer for the trimmings, and various other department have been given to her, until now she is manager for six important departments. She is a member of the Center church and has been associated with the Sunday school work of that church and is also a member of the Center church guild. She has always had the confidence of the firm and the esteem of her fellow employees, and is also popular with the customers of the store.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Theis of Pratt street, who were married Thursday evening, have left for an automobile trip to the Pacific Coast, and will return by way of the northern route. Mr. Theis is purchasing agent for the Travelers Insurance Company.

ILLNESS OF MR. THEIS.

Frank W. Theis of No. 2 Charter Oak avenue, who was taken to the Hartford retreat, Friday afternoon, after being found acting strangely on the street by the police, was said to-day by Dr. Floyd A. Weed of the retreat staff to be suffering from a nervous breakdown. Dr. Weed said that although he would not term the case a severe one, it was difficult to determine as Mr. Theis had been in the institution such a short time. Mr. Theis was married Thursday evening to Miss Katherine Ryan, also of No. 2 Charter Oak avenue, at the rectory of St. Peter's church, the Rev. Paul F. McAllenney, pastor of the church, officiating. Mrs. Theis visited her husband at the retreat to-day.

Nov 19 Gillette-Daily 1915
A wedding of more than usual interest to hundreds of Hartford people took place yesterday when Curtis A. Gillette, assistant manager of the Palace Theater, was married to Miss Etta M. Dailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Dailey of No. 280 Main street. The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock yesterday morning by Rev. James T. McDonald at St. Peter's Church. Miss Winona E. Dailey was bridesmaid and William F. Dailey, brother of the bride, was best man. The bride wore a traveling suit of plum-colored broadcloth trimmed with fur and a hat of gold lace, and the bridesmaid wore a blue broadcloth suit trimmed with ermine and a hat of silver lace. Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, which was attended only by near relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Gillette left on the noon train for Boston for a short wedding trip, during which they will attend the Harvard-Yale football game today at Cambridge.

PORTER SCHOOL ALUMNAE MEET

Women Attend From All Parts of United States.

Nov 19 1915

Farmington, Nov. 22.

The gathering of the alumnae of Miss Porter's School, in New York, Friday, was the biggest reunion of the school that has been held. There are almost 500 women who have been students at this famous school and nearly that number were present at the reunion at Delmonico's. When the centenary of the birth of Miss Porter was observed, in the Sarah Porter Memorial Parish House here, October 15, 1912, about 300 alumnae were present. Those present in New York Friday came from California, Florida, Maine, Texas and from nearly every state in the Union.

The entire establishment was turned over to the women, and there were silver haired grandmothers there as well as the bright young students of the present day. Everything was done to make the "girls," for they were all girls that night, remember school days. The restaurant termed it "Farmington Night" and had special decorations and music.

Mrs. Garfield of Cleveland, O., the chairman, read the roll, and a special effort was made by all alumnae to be present in order to respond. Mrs. Garfield and Mrs. Stimpson of this place were the only speakers.

Twelve or fifteen from this place and Hartford were present. Most of them returned to their homes Friday night. The reunion is the first "real" reunion that the alumnae, as a whole, have had. The first year's class has had reunions, but most of the members of that class are dead.

ing through him and taking about everything he had. Anyway, the reporter fell for the robbery stuff, until Dorsey returned his property to him with a story of the hairbreadth escape he had in getting it from the highwayman. But joking is not his business, it is only a diversion. If a fellow gets drunk and wants to fight, he could get no better cure than to meet Dorsey and fight with him. If he is down-and-out and needs a friend—no more sympathetic friend could be found. If he has been injured, he could fall into no safer hands than those of the man who has run the ambulance for a number of years, through all kinds of weather and all kinds of scenes.

Dorsey is the ambulance man. It is not a high sounding title to the outsider, but ask Chief Farrell about it some time. He will tell you that not everybody can have an ambulance job. Dorsey will probably be the ambulance man for some years to come. If he is, the department has an asset that will be worth considering.

Sam had come home from school—hungry as usual. Tossing his spelling-book on the kitchen table he hastened to the pantry and began an investigation of cakebox cupboards, and cookyjar.

Suddenly the back doorbell rang. Leaving his unprofitable search, Samuel went to answer. On the steps stood an unshaven, long-haired man whose clothes needed a tailor and a laundry worker.

"I'm hungry," began the stranger in a low, aggrieved tone, "and should like somethin' to eat."

"Well, so'm I," confided the boy, "but you know I've been a huntin' for ten minutes an' hain't found a thing."

the team, Guy Lowell of New York, and three other substitutes on the 1890 team were at the reunion, Louis

Sherwin of Boston, Jeremiah Smith of Boston and W. R. Mason of Maine. Both the men who coached this team are dead, George Stewart and George Adams. The former was widely known not only as a coach but as the designer of the first fin keel yacht entered in the international cup races.

The 1890 football team is famous in Harvard history not only because it defeated Yale but because it was the first team in fifteen years that had been able to turn the trick. The game was played at Hampden Park, Springfield, before 12,000 spectators, a tremendous crowd in those days and one described as more than twice as large as the one which had seen the game the year before. The noises and colors of the present day were as prominent features of the game than as now and in addition there was the cheerful sight of two or three ambulances drawn up beside the playing field to transport wounded to the nearest base hospital. A succession of Harvard reverses followed by the gathering of a team that showed promise of ability had earlier in the season elicited the comment from Walter Camp that "the Harvard team must be taken into consideration this year" in the plans for the season. It looks as though it would have to be "taken into consideration" next year, too.

Critics of the game played by Harvard that fall emphasized its scientific playing and said that the team was more highly developed than any team seen in a previous Yale-Harvard contest. The wedge plays and other mass formations played a prominent part in the game, but most of the gains were made on end runs and similar plays comparatively unusual in those days. The first touchdown was made on a long end run. The Yale team included such famous players as Lee, McLung and Heffelfinger. Lake played a prominent part in the first half of the game and in the first part of the second half, making several runs of from ten to twenty yards each and showing ability to wade through tacklers without being stopped. At the end of a twenty-yard run in the second half he was tackled by Barbour of the Yale team so heavily that his leg was injured and he had to be taken out of the game and replaced by Lee.

The Jack-of-all-trades of the local department—If you want a fight, a friend or a nurse he is well qualified to supply the demand.

NEARLY every New England village and town has its "Jack-of-all-trades," the fellow who can do anything from mowing the lawn to fixing the sewing machine when it gets out of kilter. Likewise most business institutions in the larger cities have their "handy-men," whose field of usefulness is just about as large. In the Hartford police department this handy-man or "Jack-of-all-trades" is Jack Dorsey, officially known in the department as "Patrolman John L. Dorsey, ambulance and patrol driver." He might answer to other names. For example, if you walk into the police garage and say "Hello Skull," you would see Dorsey emerge from the vitals of one of the department autos to see what is wanted. No one knows why he is called "Skull." Perhaps it is because he has a good one, or perhaps it is because he has patched up so many damaged ones—on other people. He might answer to the name of "Sweeney," not that he travels under an alias. The Sweeney name is a joke, and of Dorsey's propensity of getting tangled up in jokes more will be said later, whether he likes the revelation or not.

For seventeen years Dorsey has been the driver of ambulance and patrol wagons in the department. That does not sound very creditable, for a man to remain in one place so long, but he has remained there because no chief, from the time of Chief Bill on down to Chief Farrell, has ever felt that Dorsey could be well spared from that branch of the service. He has made a place for himself there, and as he has never seriously believed that a sergeant's cap would be any more becoming than his present uniform, he has never been a conspicuous runner up in any of the promotion campaigns. He has had more fun staying back watching the other aspirants succeed and fail.

Probably if all the blood that Dorsey has seen shed could be pooled, it would float a good sized vessel. That is not an exaggeration. His has been the master hand in many gruesome scenes. He is sympathetic, but he is not chicken hearted, and blood and mangled forms are daily occurrences with him, and no matter whether the victim has fallen off the "blind baggage" or has been tossed from his eight-cylinder touring car against a telegraph pole he will be handled just the same and just as efficiently by the ambulance driver.

Dorsey does not talk about these things. If he were interviewed for his biography, he would calmly say, "Go chase yourself," and walk away. If he would talk, he could tell of lives saved by his efforts. He might tell stories that show his courage and daring. He could tell about the night he was taking a sick woman from her bed to put her in the ambulance. As he lifted her from the bed in his arms and started to walk out, her pet bulldog jumped from under the bed and sunk its teeth in the calf of his right leg, and held on. Most people, would have been inclined to drop the woman and give the dog some attention. But not Dorsey. He stood there and let the dog chew until masculine help came and choked the dog off. Without stopping to look, he then took the woman to the hospital, and reported back to the emergency hospital for treatment himself. He could tell about the night when going out Collins street to St. Francis's Hospital, a patient, who was unattended inside the ambulance, became delirious, and he had to stop his machine and for half an hour struggled with the patient, getting the worst of the battle, because he would not hit a sick man, until the commotion awakened the neighbors of Collins street and aid was sent to him. He could tell about the night when a baker in a Front street bakery got tangled up in a bread mixer, and was horribly mangled in its machinery, but remained alive and conscious. It was the work of nearly four hours to release the sufferer, and during those four hours, Dorsey, half stripped, was lying on his back under the machine, helping rip it to pieces, literally bathing in blood of the victim, who died soon after being released. Many a time when a doctor has not been available a tourniquet applied at the right time and the right place has saved the victim's life.

That is another reason why he has been an ambulance man so long. He uses his head and does not try to get by with as little work as possible. In the emergency hospital, when he is not running the ambulance or adjusting a carburetor in the garage, he is the nurse. He knows how to sterilize the wound and make everything ready for the doctor; he knows how to bandage the wound, and if necessary he can do the operating himself.

Those who know Dorsey know that he is never excited. Whether he is racing at a seemingly reckless speed through the streets to get someone to the hospital before he dies, whether he is getting ready to spring one of his jokes on someone, or whether he is in a fight with a drunken maniac, he is always the same Dorsey. He does not talk about his fighting ability, either, but suffice it to say that in his years in patrol wagon work when he has been called upon to handle some pretty tough specimens, he has never been beaten in a fight and he never uses a club.

To see him one would think life was one long, serious problem for him. Seldom he smiles, and when he is

The Letter of Resignation

President Nichols's letter of resignation, submitted to the trustees Friday, follows:—
To the Honorable Trustees of Dartmouth College:—

Gentlemen: Herewith, I tender you my resignation of the presidency of the college, to take effect June 30, 1916, and I pray you to accept it.

Six and a half years ago, when you did me the honor to call me to my present office, the college was passing through a critical period, and in heeding your call I reluctantly left the work of a teacher and student of physics, which for 20 years had fully occupied my time, my mind, my enthusiasm and had gratified my every ambition.

The college needs of that earlier time have been largely met, and through the splendid co-operation and united efforts of many devoted fellow-workers the college is now in an exceptionally strong position, both in its internal organization and in its external relations. There seems, therefore, no compelling reason why I may not ask you to let me go back to my earlier work, the duties and recompenses of which are in fuller accord with my individual tastes and preference. For this return an invitation to a chair of physics in Yale college affords the acceptable opportunity.

Yet in leaving the official service of the college, as in coming to it, I hold its vital interests above my personal wishes. The duties of my office I have found exacting, and its high responsibilities, much as you have so considerably done to lighten them, a heavy burden. Looking forward to the many active years lying before a man of my age, I seriously doubt my endurance to hold through to the end to give the college that vigorous and efficient service which its continued welfare requires of its president. Moreover, I feel a growing conviction that the best work it is in me to do for the college is already done.

You who already know it I need not tell how precious to me have been the personal associations and friendships with the members of your own body, past and present, with my colleagues on the faculty and in the administration; nor need I speak of the loyal friendship and fine support I have had from graduates and undergraduates alike,—relations which from their warmth and heartiness have cheered and lightened my labors and given them whatever value they may have possessed.

The duties of my office I shall surrender gladly. With the priceless human associations it has brought me I trust and pray I may never have to part.

With affectionate respect and regard.

Sincerely,

(Signed) ERNEST FOX NICHOLS.

The resignation was accepted by the trustees in these terms:—

Boston, Mass., November 19, 1915.

Ernest Fox Nichols, D. Sc., LL. D., President of Dartmouth College:—

Dear Mr. President:—

It is with the greatest reluctance that we, the trustees of Dartmouth college, accept your resignation of the presidency of the college, to take effect at the close of your seventh year of service.

Since you undertook the exacting duties of your office you have given yourself loyally and without stint to their fulfillment. In difficult processes of readjustment you have brought to bear a high order of administrative ability, enriched with a large tolerance, an exhaustless patience, a noble dignity and generosity.

You brought to your task at Dartmouth trained powers of analysis, coupled with the loftiest ideals of scholarship. You have thus built up in the college an educational and administrative organization adequate and harmonious. Your impress upon the student body has been in terms of wider conceptions of intellectuality.

It had been our hope that Dartmouth college might long continue to enjoy your leadership. Yet we can but recognize that the sacrifices which you have already made deserve worthier recognition than the demand that you continue them at serious cost to your own well-being.

In the chosen field of science to which you are about to return you will carry our sure expectation of great accomplishment and added honors; but more especially you will carry our warm personal affection, the outgrowth of seven years of intimate fellowship in a common cause.

You will believe us,

Very respectfully,
The Trustees

DR. ERNEST FOX NICHOLS

President of Dartmouth College, whose resignation becomes effective in June and who next year will occupy a new Chair of Physics at Yale

Ernest Fox Nichols

(Professor H. A. Bumstead in the Yale News)

President Nichols of Dartmouth, who is coming to Yale to fill a new chair in the Academic Department, is a very able and distinguished physicist. He has made a number of important discoveries, especially in the study of radiation, that is, of light and of radiant heat. A good many years ago he perfected an instrument known as the "radiometer" for measuring very small quantities of radiant heat. By means of his "radiometer," he was the first man to measure the heat which we receive from some of the planets and fixed stars.

Together with Professor Hull of Dartmouth, he discovered and measured the pressure exerted by light, which is now thought to be a very important agent in determining the behavior of comets and meteoric dust near the sun. President Nichols has made many other experimental investigations, but these two will serve to show in a measure the nature of his achievements.

He is an excellent lecturer and is very fond of teaching. As president of Dartmouth, he has shown great ability as an administrative officer. Under his administration the college has made steady progress, and he has enjoyed the high regard of the trustees, Faculty, and students.

The reason for his resignation from his present post and his acceptance of the chair of physics at Yale is his strong desire to continue his scientific work, for which pursuit he has found no time during the administrative work of the Dartmouth presidency. He has been unwilling to give up study and research for the rest of his life, and for this reason he has resigned from his present post so that he might continue his experimental work and teaching.

Some years ago he delivered a lecture before the Yale Chapter of Sigma Xi on "The Pressure of Light," which, as mentioned above, was one of his discoveries.

Mr. Nichols received his Bachelor's degree from the Kansas Agricultural College. He pursued his professional study of physics for a number of years at Cornell and at the universities of Berlin and of Cambridge, and has been professor of physics at Colgate, Dartmouth, and Columbia.

READS LETTER TO STUDENTS

Dr Nichols's Announcement Causes

Surprise at Hanover

HANOVER, N. H., Sunday, November 21

At the Sunday chapel service in Webster hall this afternoon President Ernest Fox Nichols read a letter of resignation which he had sent to the trustees of the college. The announcement of his resignation came as a dramatic surprise to the faculty and undergraduate body, though the holding of the chapel service in Webster hall, contrary to custom, seemed to portend some unusual announcement. There was absolute silence among the audience of undergraduates and faculty following the reading of the letter. President Nichols said:—

"Gentlemen, I have asked you, the whole college, officers and students, to remain after the service to hear an announcement. The matter I have to announce in no way affects the college during the present year. It is made now rather than later to allow ample time for such arrangements as the trustees may deem necessary to make before the year ends.

"After long and thoughtful consideration of the welfare of the college for 20 years to come, I have reached a decision which I have communicated to the trustees in the letter I have before me. The legal authority and responsibility for the college rests with them. While the letter is addressed to the trustees, as it should be, it is written as much to you as to them. Therefore I read it."

Then followed the reading of the letter to the trustees, after which President Nichols continued: "Friendship, yours and mine, to me is sacred. It rests on good foundations. We have something each to give to the other, and we have given it generously. When a man sees his guiding principle clearly, if he looks upon it sadly he calls it duty, if gladly he calls it his star. Whether it be star or duty he must ungrudgingly leave home and friends, if need be, and pursue. To me the path ahead is a duty, lighted by a star, and I follow it.

"The college has come down to us, unbroken through five generations, ever stronger, ever better. We come and we go, but the college goes steadily forward with greater and greater promise. It will endure as long upon this ground as men love and seek the truth. Thus to each of us, when we come into this fellowship, the meeting point of an honorable past and a shining future, a torch is given which we each must carry forward, and by love and energy keep it burning ever brighter until we shall hand our torches on to those who come after us.

"The present is ours, and every one of us has a share and a part to play in it. The future will rest on what we build, and thus shall our work, your work and my work be judged. This year is ours together. In honor and in brotherhood, in loyalty and in truth, let us make it as perfect as it lies in our united powers to do. It is only by the sweat of to-day that man goes to the house of tomorrow."

After the talk the usual chapel service was concluded with the singing of a hymn and prayer. The undergraduates filed out of the hall in silence, a look of consternation on their faces. The faculty and officers of the administration had nothing to say regarding the announce-

A very pretty wedding took place this morning when Thomas H. Collins, postmaster in Farmington, took for his bride Miss Mary J. Corliss of No. 23 Summer street, this city. The ceremony took place at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock with a nuptial high mass, celebrated by the Rev. John T. Winters, pastor of the church. The Rev. William D. Corliss, S. RESIGNS AS PASTOR OF TALCOTT ST. CHURCH

Rev. R. F. Wheeler Will Leave January 1, After Thirty Years' Service.

Nov 22 1915
Rev. Robert F. Wheeler has resigned as pastor of the Talcott Street Congregational Church. The reasons for his resignation were that he wished to retire after many years' service and that he thought that a younger man should have the pastorate of the church. The resignation will take effect January 1.

Mr. Wheeler has been pastor of the church thirty years and is highly respected by the congregation. During his pastorate the church has advanced steadily, among its achievements being the erection of a new church building. The church is the oldest church for colored people in the city and one of the oldest in the United States.

Mr. Wheeler came to Hartford thirty years ago from a church in Brooklyn, N. Y. He is about 60 years old. He will probably make his home in Brooklyn.

Rev. Richard H. Ball of the A. M. E. Zion Church preached at the Talcott Street Congregational Church yesterday morning in the absence of Mr. Wheeler. Rev. C. E. Eason preached at the A. M. E. Zion Church.

SEVENTH PRESIDENT

Promptness even in an act of courtesy so much enhances the value of the deed itself that Amherst College by its grant of an honorary degree to Dartmouth's president-elect has indeed bestowed a gift worth having. The vote of Amherst's trustees authorizing the degree must have followed within a week of the vote of Dartmouth's trustees which made him president. So Mr. Ernest M. Hopkins may enter the ceremonies of his inauguration clad as a doctor of letters, where before he only ranked as a master of arts. The sincerity of Amherst's purpose in this gift arises from the remarkable identity of interests which such New England colleges as Dartmouth, Amherst and Williams all have in common. A man selected to guide the destinies of any one of them must contribute for good or ill to the success of all three. As he points the way for his own college he points it also for the others. This morning when Ernest Martin

ERNEST MARTIN HOPKINS

Inaugurated Yesterday as President of Dartmouth College

Hopkins was inaugurated in Webster hall before an overflow crowd of alumni, undergraduates and friends of Dartmouth, including Gov Spaulding of New Hampshire and staff. Morning prayers in Rollins chapel preceded the exercises of inauguration and an academic procession in cap and gown, marshaled by Dean Craven Laycock, followed the prayers. The morning prayers were conducted by John King Lord, professor emeritus of Latin.

President Hopkins chose for the topic of his inaugural address "The college of the future." T. L. Cotton, '17, of Cheyenne, Wyo., president of the Dartmouth Christian association and tackle on the Varsity football team, spoke for the undergraduates, welcoming the new president. Other speakers were former President Ernest Fox Nichols, who spoke on "Knowing the college"; Gov Spaulding, who brought the salutations of the state of New Hampshire to the new president; Chandler Richards who the moral equivalents of war. Herein for the college are great obligation and great opportunity like, and upon the contribution which it shall be equipped and prepared to make will depend the relative importance of the college to life large in years to come.

The Plea for Utilitarianism

It seems probable that the first point at which we shall be called upon to define our attitude is on the contention that all education, to be worth while, must be made more utilitarian. One finds generally in the English periodicals of the present the argument that classical education is a luxury which has outlived any possible usefulness, and which must go the way of all those other luxuries which have been foregone; and that our obligations and responsibilities can only be met by an education of which every branch shall be designed for direct application to immediate needs. Likewise, there come back accounts of meetings of groups of German schoolmasters in the branches, for instance, where resolutions are adopted to the effect that when the war shall be over these teachers will return to their homes with determination to make the German system of education more practical. These occurrences cannot be dismissed as sporadic. The evidence abounds that the national tendencies in these great nations is in the direction of an educational system of pure utility.

No tribute is fitting, for none is needed, to those institutions of higher learning in our country which have been founded for, and are giving, the vital training of a highly specialized technical curriculum. They have merited and won the highest commendation. The liberal colleges with all other types of educational institution, owe the technical schools a great debt of gratitude for their insistence upon the scientific method in the approach to scholarship, which has had its effect throughout the educational world. We are a widespread people, with numberless needs, and we could not do without that which such types of education have afforded. The realm of higher education, however, is of too great area for any kind of institution to occupy it all, and least of any should the traditional cultural college have ambition to attempt it. The function of the cultural college has proved to be of the utmost importance; its work has been of distinctive service throughout the nation's history; and its future success, in my opinion, will be more marked, if change is to be made, by reverting to a curriculum of fewer subjects better taught, than by spreading its efforts constantly thinner until its attitude takes on unfortunate semblance to a sprawl.

It is not likely to be, at any time, that without loss to itself the world can close its mind to the influences of the past. The intuitions for the beautiful and the understanding of the logical which have come down to us from civilizations which have risen and lived their allotted lives are foundations for that appreciation of philosophy, art and literature without which the world would lose its breadth and depth.

There has been no better expression of this belief than is included in the "Memorandum on the Limitations of Scientific Education," issued by a group of Englishmen of world-wide fame, headed by Lord Bryce, and published as a protest against the prevalent propaganda for the monopolization of the field of education in Eng-inherently either radical or conservative, for the same principle which impels it to pull back from one extreme to-day will to-morrow lead it to endeavor to correct the overswing of the reaction.

The Needs of the State

I have said that the college exists as means to an end, and that the end should be constructive idealism interpreted in terms of service. It well may be added that no particular form of service is so vitally essential to-day as high-minded consecration to the needs of the state. The development of our national life has been shown to be far short of the standard to which it was supposed to have attained, and in many of our attributes we have been proved more a group of peoples than a nation. It remains for the living of our time as truly as for those of the generation of half a century ago to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us, of developing unity and forcefulness of conviction in our national life, that, from the heritage of the past and the needs of the future alike, we take increased devotion, to the cause for which such sacrifices have been made and in the success of which we firmly believe humanity to be so much concerned.

To this endeavor the colleges should be committed by their every instinct and by all the influences which have shaped them; and solemn responsibility rests upon them now that they shall be sensitive to the new note which is beginning to sound in our national affairs as parochialism becomes less and less a characteristic, and as we come to recognize our inevitable responsibility among the nations of the earth.

Development of Character

I believe that it is worthy of more emphasis than has sometimes been given that the development of character is distinctly one of the great responsibilities of the college. The introduction of university methods into college teaching, the influence of professionalized scholarship in the chairs of instruction, and the marked disinclination of men of the present generation to consult together concerning the deeper phases of life, have, all together, so altered the once existing relationship between teacher and student that the old-time formative influence of the college faculty on student character has too greatly disappeared. It is still, however, not to be forgotten that our colleges were founded and sustained through years of drastic toil by men of religious fervor, who in self-sacrifice literally gave their lives for the perpetuation of institutions designed no less for spiritual inspiration than for intellectual command. Forms of expression change from generation to generation, and manifestations of spiritual instinct differ widely from those of a century and a half ago. But the initial obligation rests upon us to make the college influential in the development of those traits vital to well-proportioned goodness.

Scholarship as a product of the college is incomplete except as it be established on the foundation of character which is not only passively good, but which is of moral fiber definite enough to influence those with whom it is brought into contact. By as much as evil directed by intelligence is more dangerous than brainless badness, by so much is the college open to the danger of doing the country an ill turn if it ignores its responsibility.

Princeton President's Daughter Will Be Bride of Assistant Professor of Latin.

New York, September 11.—President and Mrs. John Grier Hibben of Princeton university yesterday announced the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth, to Robert Maxwell Scoon, assistant professor of Latin at Princeton.

Professor Scoon is a graduate of Hamilton college, '07, and was one of the first Rhodes scholars. He received a degree at Merton college, Oxford. He rowed on the Merton college crew while at Oxford, and at Princeton he has interested himself in rowing affairs. He received the degree of doctor of philosophy at Columbia university last June.

Miss Hibben is a graduate of Bryn Mawr college, '10. More recently she was one of a number of young women of well known families who took the nurse's training course in New York preparatory to joining some one of the agencies of relief at the front in Europe.

No. 23 Scoon-Hibben 1915

Miss Elizabeth Grier Hibben, daughter of President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University and Mrs. Hibben, and Professor Robert Maxwell Scoon of the faculty of the university, were married yesterday afternoon at Marquand Chapel, Princeton, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, predecessor of Woodrow Wilson as president of Princeton University, and until last year president of the theological seminary connected with the university. He was assisted by Rev. Ralph B. Ponderoy, rector of the First Episcopal Church of Princeton. Only the immediate relatives were present at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at Prospect, the home of the bride's parents. The maid of honor was Miss Barbara Armour of Princeton, and the best man was Thompson Scoon, brother of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids were Miss Esther Cleveland and Miss Marion Cleveland, daughters of former President Grover Cleveland; and Miss Elizabeth Duffield, Miss Mary Scott, Mrs. Donald Grant Herring, Miss Katherine Tillmann, Miss Ruth Hall and Miss Gertrude Schirmer, all of Princeton. The ushers were Donald Grant Herring, Professor David Magee, Professor John Basore and Percy

Miss Marion Isabel Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Cook of Ansonia, and James Madison Perry, Jr., of Bethlehem, Vt., were married Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Otto W. Burtner, pastor of the Congregational Church in Ansonia. The bride was attended by Miss Dorothy Cook as maid of honor and the best man was Charles F. Freeman of Ansonia. A reception followed at which about fifty guests were present, a number being from this city, where the bride was formerly employed in the office of the Rossla Insurance Company. Mr. and Mrs. Perry left for a wedding trip to New York and Philadelphia.

Collins street and Lieutenant Richard Collins of Engine company No. 7 were married at St. Joseph's cathedral this morning at 9 o'clock, the Rev. Andrew J. Kelly officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Mary T. McCormack, and Michael Meade was best man. The bride wore a gown of white charmeuse and duchess lace, with crystal trimming, and a picture hat with white plumes. She carried a prayer book bound in mother of pearl. The maid of honor wore a gown of white Georgette crepe, trimmed with princess lace and satin, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. A re-

No. Stern-Goodman 24, 1915

Miss Gladys Stern Goodman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Goodman of Warrenton avenue, and Francis Edward Stern, son of Mrs. George W. Stern of New York, were married last evening at the Hotel Bond, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Harry W. Ettelson, of the Temple Beth Israel, in the presence of about fifty guests. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Miss Beatrice Roos of Scranton, Pa., and the best man was Allan Kauffman of Paris, France. The bride wore a dress of white satin, cut short and full, made with a train, and trimmed with old rose point lace and duchess lace which formed the trimming of her mother's wedding dress. She wore a long tulle veil caught with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and lilies-of-the valley. The bridesmaid's dress was of yellow taffeta trimmed with kolinsky fur and pearls and she carried orchids. The walls of the ballroom on the mezzanine floor where the wedding took place, were festooned with smilax caught with clusters of yellow and lavender chrysanthemums, and the ceremony was performed before a bank of palms and chrysanthemums. Following the dinner which was served at small tables, the decorations being similar to those in the ballroom, there was dancing, the music being furnished by the Hotel Bond Orchestra. Mr. and Mrs. Stern will live in Rye, N. Y., after their return from their wedding trip and will be at home after January 1 at the Mendota cottage, Highland road. The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a diamond and sapphire bracelet and he gave to the best man cuff links of platinum and gold. The bridesmaid received from the bride a crystal and platinum bracelet. The bride was graduated from the Hartford Public High School in 1912 after which she attended Lasell Seminary in Auburndale, Mass. Mr. Stern attended La Villa School at Ouchy-Lausanne, Switzerland, and later the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at Boston. Among the guests from out of town present at the wedding were Arman Citreou of Paris, Miss Lillian Schwartz of Cincinnati and Miss Ernestine Lederer of Terre Haute, Ind.

Mr. Stern, who is a nephew of Jacob Schiff of New York, was educated at the La Villa school, Ouchy-Lausanne, Switzerland, and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is employed in the executive offices of the Equitable Life Insurance company in New York.

his giant West-of-England as, as it seemed to me, the gypsy in his coloring, his quick, dark eyes with their gleam. The bright yellow and he loved to wear added to his. His elder brother, the younger dark and wiry had plenty itself as he did it. Only when one saw other great batsmen fall did one realize how accurate was the timing and the wrist work of the old man. When he was well on towards his sixtieth year I have seen him standing up to Lockwood when man after man was helpless at the other wicket, tapping those terrific expresses away through the slips with the easy sureness with which one would bounce a tennis ball with a racket. The fastest bowler in England sent one like a cannon shot through his beard with only a comic shake of the head and a good-humored growl in reply.

Of his bowling I have very clear recollection. It was an innovator among nology through the offer of President Maclaurin to the Directors of the Port of Boston to test the samples of materials to be used in the construction of the new drydock.

As far as the State is concerned, this is the first time that such a matter has been undertaken so systematically, although it is only another of the Institute's numerous acts of public service.

In his correspondence with Chairman McSweeney, President Maclaurin says that the Institute will be glad to place its equipment at the service of the State as far as it is compatible with its academic work. The magnitude of the task is somewhat realized when it is made plain that to test properly the various materials of the drydock in their various relations, some 30,000 samples will be examined. The Institute's equipment is practically adequate, but it will be necessary to increase the sets of concrete moulds, and possibly to add a testing machine to its apparatus.

Another line of investigation may be conducted by the Institute, which has offered to determine the flashpoints of inflammable fluids, about which Fire Prevention Commissioner O'Keefe has made inquiries.

EVER-PRESENT ARITHMETIC

A Common and Distinctly Important Factor in Our Daily Lives

One of the commonest annoyances in modern telephone service is the "wrong-number" mistake. It happens many times a day in any exchange. But the girls expect to make mistakes; the telephone companies also expect them too, and do not blame them just so long as the number of incorrect calls a day does not exceed a certain predetermined number.

If the records show that the wrong-number calls in a given exchange exceed the daily average by even one per cent, says Technical World, the company knows that something is wrong with the service, and proceeds to make an investigation, and if, by chance, the number for any week goes far below the average, the company is always willing to commend.

The companies realize that such things are controlled by the law of averages, the modernized code of the Medes and Persians. One may not be able to forecast each individual case with certainty; but in the mass, all the affairs of man can be worked out by arithmetic.

It took years to convince men of this law. Chance, good luck, the turn of fortune's wheel—even our Billiken of yesterday—all these were worshipped, and all had feet of clay. Melrose Barnes, with a demonstration of the certainty of unloading dice, was one of the first to combat this superstition. He took a set of ten common dice and threw them ten thousand times, keeping a record of each throw. He found that the ace appeared 16,601 times; the deuce, 16,603; the trey, 16,670; the four, 16,661; the five, 16,704; and the six, 16,701.

Working on the theory of the law of averages one would expect each die to turn up 16,666 times in the 10,000 throws. The results attained by Barnes, though far from being perfect, were so close that even the skeptics were puzzled. The largest error for any die was slightly less than two-fifths of one per cent, while the smallest was less than one-fiftieth of one per cent.

All business of today takes cognizance of the law of averages.

In many of them the material has never

Princeton President's Daughter Will Be Bride of Assistant Professor of Latin.

New York, September 11.—President and Mrs. John Grier Hibben of Princeton university yesterday announced the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth, to Robert Maxwell Scoon, assistant professor of Latin at Princeton.

Professor Scoon is a graduate of Hamilton college, '07, and was one of the first Rhodes scholars. He received a degree at Merton College, Oxford. He rowed on college crew while at Oxford. At Princeton he has interests in rowing affairs. He is a degree of doctor of philosophy from Columbia university last

Nov 23 Scoon-Hibben

Miss Elizabeth Grier, daughter of President J. Hibben of Princeton University. Mrs. Hibben, and Professor Maxwell Scoon of the same university, were married this afternoon at Marquand Hall, Princeton, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. Francis, predecessor of Woodruff as president of Princeton, and until last year president of the theological seminary connected with the university. He was a Rev. Ralph B. Pomeroy, rector of the First Episcopal Church of Princeton. Only the immediate relatives were present at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents, of whom was Miss B. M. of Princeton, and the bride was Thompson Scoon, brother of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids were Miss Esther Cleveland and Miss Cleveland, daughters of President Grover Cleveland; Elizabeth Duffield, Miss M. Mrs. Donald Grant, Herri Katherine Tillmann, Miss I. and Miss Gertrude Schirm. Princeton. The ushers were Grant Herring, Professor I. gee, Professor John Basore

Miss Marion Isabel Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Cook, Ansonia, and James Madison Cook, Jr., of Bethlehem, Vt., were married Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Otto W. Burton, pastor of the Congregational Church, Ansonia. The bride was attended by Miss Dorothy Cook as maid of honor and the best man was Charles Freeman of Ansonia. A reception followed at which about fifty guests were present, a number being from this city, where the bride was formerly employed in the office of the Rosalia Insurance Company. Mr. and Mrs. Perry left for a wedding trip to New York and Philadelphia.

COLLINS-McCORMACK

Miss Anne McCormack of No. 320

Collins street and Lieutenant Richard Collins of Engine company No. were married at St. Joseph's cathedral this morning at 9 o'clock, the Rev. Andrew J. Kelly officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Mary T. McCormack, and Michael Meade was best man. The bride wore a gown of white charmeuse and duchess lace, with crystal trimming, and a picture hat with white plumes. She carried a prayer book bound in mother of pearl.

His giant West-of-England cast, as it seemed to me, the gypsy in his coloring, his quick, dark eyes with their gleam. The bright yellow and red he loved to wear added to the effect. His elder brother, the wizened, dark and wiry, had this gypsy appearance. I think, only of the effect prove no reason to think that in his views, though, follow I am ready to believe that he was in Europe. There was a breeziness of manner about him, made his company a delight to the game. He was a highly educated surgeon, but the fashion of talk he associated with a jovial police was high-pitched, congealed chest from which he reserved something of the ply itself as he did it. Only when one saw other great batsmen fall did one realize how accurate was the timing and the wrist work of the old man. When he was well on towards his sixtieth year I have seen him standing up to Lockwood when man after man was helpless at the other wicket, tapping those terrific expresses away through the slips with the easy sureness with which one would bounce a tennis ball with a racket. The fastest bowler in England sent one like a cannon shot through his beard with only a comic shake of the head and a good-humored growl in reply.

Of his bowling I have very clear recollections. He was an innovator among bowlers, for he really invented the leg-theory a generation before it was rediscovered and practiced by Vine, Armstrong and others. Grace's traps at leg were proverbial in the seventies. His manner was peculiar. He would lumber up to the wicket, and toss up the ball in a take-it-or-leave-it style, as if he cared little whether it pitched between the wickets or in the next parish. As a matter of fact this careless attitude covered a very remarkable accuracy. His command of length was absolute, and he had just enough leg spin to beat the bat if you played forward to the pitch of the ball. He was full of guile, and the bad ball which was worth four to you was sent, as likely as not, to unsettle you and lead you on.

Those who knew him will never look at the classic sward of Lord's without an occasional vision of the great cricketer. He was, and will remain, the very impersonation of cricket, redolent of fresh air, of good humor, of conflict without malice, of chivalrous strife, of keenness for victory by fair means, and utter detestation of all that was foul. Few men have done more for the generation in which he lived, and his influence was none the less because it was a spontaneous and utterly unconscious one.

PARIS'S STREETS SHOULD BE NEUTRAL

[From the Syracuse Post-Standard]

The Municipal Council of Paris is considering the policy of changing the names of all streets reminiscent of anything German or derived from any Teutonic source.

With admirable sense, The Temps attacks this plan as savoring too much of prejudice and a campaign of haired. But it bases its objections not upon any love of Germany, but because of the geographical mix-up that would ensue after the change.

The Avenue d'Allemagne was so named because its general direction was towards Germany. It would be palpably foolish to rename it the Avenue des Etats Unis or the Avenue de l'Angleterre. And Paris has such a delightful way of marking its highways, too! Who but a Frenchman would think of calling a street the Rue Jean-Jaques-Rousseau? Picture Salina street as John Paul Jones street or the Avenue of Nicholas Van de Bogart!

The naming by the French of the Rue de Berlin was not done with any desire to make Germany famous. It was given the street to commemorate the entry of Napoleon into Berlin, quite the opposite of the impression it creates among those who do not know the reason for its title.

Paris streets should remain neutral. When the hatred engendered by the Great War has become a thing of the past, Parisians, wandering around looking for the streets they knew, will wonder why the government ever bothered to befuddle them with a lot of unrecognizable names.

nology through the offer of President Maclaurin to the Directors of the Port of Boston to test the samples of materials to be used in the construction of the new drydock.

As far as the State is concerned, this is the first time that such a matter has been undertaken so systematically, although it is only another of the Institute's numerous acts of public service.

In his correspondence with Chairman McSweeney, President Maclaurin says that the Institute will be glad to place its equipment at the service of the State as far as it is compatible with its academic work. The magnitude of the task is somewhat realized when it is made plain that to test properly the various materials of the drydock in their various relations, some 30,000 samples will be examined. The Institute's equipment is practically adequate, but it will be necessary to increase the sets of concrete moulds, and possibly to add a testing machine to its apparatus.

Another line of investigation may be conducted by the Institute, which has offered to determine the flashpoints of inflammable fluids, about which Fire Prevention Commissioner O'Keefe has made inquiries.

EVER-PRESENT ARITHMETIC

A Common and Distinctly Important Factor in Our Daily Lives

One of the commonest annoyances in modern telephone service is the "wrong-number" mistake. It happens many times a day in any exchange. But the girls expect to make mistakes; the telephone companies also expect them too, and do not blame them just so long as the number of incorrect calls a day does not exceed a certain predetermined number.

If the records show that the wrong-number calls in a given exchange exceed the daily average by even one per cent, says Technical World, the company knows that something is wrong with the service, and proceeds to make an investigation, and if, by chance, the number for any week goes far below the average, the company is always willing to commend.

The companies realize that such things are controlled by the law of averages, the modernized code of the Medes and Persians. One may not be able to forecast each individual case with certainty; but in the mass, all the affairs of man can be worked out by arithmetic.

It took years to convince men of this law. Chance, good luck, the turn of fortune's wheel—even our Billiken of yesterday—all these were worshipped, and all had feet of clay. Melrose Barnes, with a demonstration of the certainty of unloaded dice, was one of the first to combat this superstition. He took a set of ten common dice and threw them ten thousand times, keeping a record of each throw. He found that the ace appeared 16,601 times; the deuce, 16,663; the trey, 16,670; the four, 16,661; the five, 16,704, and the six, 16,701.

Working on the theory of the law of averages one would expect each die to turn up 16,666 times in the 10,000 throws. The results attained by Barnes, though far from being perfect, were so close that even the skeptical were puzzled. The largest error for any die was slightly less than two-fifths of one per cent, while the smallest was less than one-fiftieth of one per cent.

All business of today takes cognizance of the law of averages.

In many of them the material has nev-

The hour of the wedding was not made public, but Dr Smith hastened from the morning service at St John's to the bride's residence, arriving there a little after the noon hour. The drawing rooms were decorated with flowers early in the morning. The couple left to-day for a short wedding trip.

Mr Gillett, who is 64 years old, has served the 2d Massachusetts congressional district for 22 years and is now the ranking republican on the appropriations committee of the national House of Representatives and one of the party leaders in that body. Mrs Hoar, who is 43 years old, has long been a prominent figure in the social life of the national capital. Her first husband died while a member of Congress in 1906 and she has since lived most of the time at Washington in the house which Senator Hoar owned.

Congressman and Mrs Frederick H. Gillett, who were married in Washington on Thanksgiving day, and who have been spending the week-end in Westfield, motored into Springfield yesterday afternoon and called on various friends. They will start for Washington to-day, making the journey by motor in easy stages.

Professor Arthur L. Gillett and Mrs. Gillett of Marshall street have returned from Washington, D. C., where they attended the wedding, on Thanksgiving Day, of Professor Gillett's brother, Representative Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts and Mrs.

Miss Hoar is the younger sister of Miss Frances Hoar, and the daughter of the late Rockwood Hoar. Her mother, now Mrs. Frederick Huntington Gillett, was before her first marriage to Mr. Hoar, Miss Christine Rice, and at present employed as a

MR AND MRS JOHN B. PERO

Four Generations Will Help Them

Celebrate in Their Indian Orchard

Home—50 Relatives to

Be Present

There will be several family gatherings in Indian Orchard to-day to celebrate Thanksgiving day, but probably the most enjoyable family party that will be held anywhere in the town will be at the home of Mr and Mrs John B. Pero of Berkshire street, for not only will Thanksgiving day be observed, but the 60th anniversary of the wedding of Mr and Mrs Pero will also be celebrated. Four generations will be present and relatives to the number of about 50 will gather. Among those who had arrived yesterday for the affair are Mr and Mrs J. T. Pero of Athol, Mr and Mrs H. S. Pero of Cambridge, Mr and Mrs M. J. Pero of Fitchburg, Mr and Mrs David Pero of Fitchburg, Mrs T. P. Roache of New Bedford, Mrs Charles Cousins of Boston, Mrs John P. Pero and family of St Louis, Mo., Fred J. Pero of Thomaston, Ct., Charles H. Pero of Akron, O., L. Pero and family of Boston, Mr and Mrs Arthur Eakins and daughter of Boston, J. H. Barr and Miss Nellie Barr of Waltham, Dr Neil Roache of New Bedford, J. T. Pero and M. J. Pero, Jr., of Fitchburg, and Mr and Mrs Don Pero of Chicago, Ill.

In addition to the out-of-town guests already assembled among the Orchard people who will be at the celebration will be George F. Pero and family, Mr and Mrs Joseph P. Kavanagh, Dr and Mrs M. W. Harrington and daughter, Miss Mary Harrington, J. Herbert Pero, Miss Agnes Pero, Mr and Mrs P. W. Donlon, and a few others. On account of the advanced ages of Mr and Mrs Pero the celebration will not be as elaborate as it was 10 years ago, when they observed their golden wedding.

Mr and Mrs Pero are among the oldest residents of the Orchard, and have a wide circle of acquaintances. John E. Pero was born in Chamblee, Can., on September 30, 1835, and received his early education in that town. While still a boy his family removed to Newton Upper Falls, where he learned his trade of iron molder in the Petter shop. After learning his trade he worked for a year in North Chelmsford, a year in Lowell, nine years in Worcester, from which place he came to Indian Orchard, where he has since made his home. It was in 1874 when he came here to take charge of the iron foundry of the Chapman valve manufacturing company. He held that position until January 14, 1906, when he retired from active business.

In learning the iron molder's trade, Mr Pero followed in the footsteps of his father, his uncles and his brothers, and all of his sons were iron molders by trade. Mrs Pero, who was the oldest of nine girls, and whose maiden name was Rosanna O'Neil, was born in Glasgow, Scot. She came to Waltham to live in 1845, and it was there that she met Mr Pero. They were married at Watertown 60 years ago to-day by Rev Bernard Flood. They are Wedded to W. I. Goodfellow in Chicago—To Live in Buffalo.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 26.

Mrs. Emma W. Mitchelson, widow of the late Joseph C. Mitchelson, who left a collection of coins valued at $100,000 to the state of Connecticut, at his death four years ago, was married in Chicago today to William I. Goodfellow of Buffalo, N. Y.

"We were schoolmates and chums in our home town, Geneseo, years ago," said Mrs. Goodfellow at the Blackstone Hotel tonight. We corresponded for a while after my marriage thirty years ago, but it was not until quite recently that we really renewed our old acquaintance.

"We intend leaving tomorrow for California, where we will spend the rest of the winter before returning East. Then we shall probably settle in Buffalo."

Mrs. Goodfellow's home is in Tariffville, Conn. She is said to be a woman of considerable means and her husband is also a man of wealth.

Music, flowers, and a very attractive group of young people, with a few grown-ups to add dignity to the occasion, made the dance which Dr. Ansel G. Cook and Mrs. Cook gave for their second daughter, Miss Ellenor Richardson Cook, at the Hartford Golf Club on Friday evening a brilliant affair. The guests from out of town included Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt of San Francisco, Whitney Palache and Miss Palache, Mrs. George G. Williams and Mrs. James Andrew Pickett of Farmington, Mr. and Mrs. J. Benjamin Dimmick of Scranton, Pa., and Mrs. John Addison Porter of New Haven, formerly of this city. In the receiving line were Mrs. Cook, Miss Ellenor Cook, Miss Sylvia Howell and Miss Katherine C. Cook, sister of the debutante, both of this city, Miss Marian Baldwin of Lakewood, N. J., Miss Martha Carrington of Charleston, S. C., Miss Gertrude Murray of New York, Miss Gertrude Lovett of Boston and Miss Harriet Cook, younger sister of Miss Cook. Dr. Cook and Mrs. Cook entertained at the dance.

One of the most delightful and jolly parties ever given by the Bachelors was their first dance of the season, Wednesday evening, at the Hartford Golf club, which was in the nature of a rustic party. The spirit of the invitations, which recommended that old clothes be worn, was carried out in the details of arrangement. The club house was decorated with corn stalks and pumpkins, a program for dancing that included a Virginia reel was given by Wittstein's orchestra, and about 300 guests were present. The costumes were provocative of much mirth, some distinctly humorous effects being gained by the country clothes. Gingham frocks or aprons and sunbonnets were worn by most of the feminine guests, overalls, bandanas and gay hose being favored by their escorts. Mrs. Lewis D. Parker made effective use of a red wig and an orange dress and Erwin Rankin, who disregarded the advice of the invitations and wore "store clothes," was one of the most conspicuous of the guests. Instead of punch, there was a keg of cider, and this with doughnuts afforded refreshments during the evening. The supper menu included sausages and scrambled eggs. Several dinners preceded the dance, that given by Stillman Westbrook, president of the Bachelors club, and Winthrop G. Haviland, at the club, being attended by twenty-eight guests. In keeping with the other arrangements for the dance, the dinner was unconventional. Old fashioned portraits, lithographs and mottoes decorated the walls of the room, and the table was spread with a red cloth. Antique chairs seated the guests, who served themselves to the old fashioned dishes. The patronesses for the dance were Mrs. H. H. Armstrong, Mrs. J. Watson Beach, Mrs. F. Minot Blake, Mrs. Morgan G. Bulkeley, jr., Mrs. H. Bissell Carey, Mrs. William C. Cheney, Mrs. Welles Eddy, Mrs. Russell L. Jones, Mrs. John T. Robinson and Mrs. Thomas W. Russell.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Butler of Collinsville Observe Anniversary
Appropriately.

WEDDED 60 YEARS

Collinsville, November 29.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Butler observed the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage on Saturday at the home of their daughter, Mrs. A. C. Graham, with whom they reside. Mr. and Mrs. Butler formerly lived in Burlington, but moved to Collinsville about six years ago. Their golden wedding was fittingly celebrated ten years ago by a large gathering of the townspeople, and they were presented with a substantial purse of gold and many other handsome gifts.

They spent the day quietly on Saturday, receiving several calls and gifts of flowers and other tokens of friendship. They were married November 27, 1855, by the Rev. Jarius Burt, then pastor of the Canton Center Congregational church, who had also officiated at the wedding of Mrs. Butler's parents.

Mr. Butler was born in Burlington, May 25, 1831, and was the son of Darius and Rhoda (Hart) Butler. He was the youngest of eleven children and the only one still living. Up to six years ago he had always resided at the old homestead, about Collinsville Couple Married That Long.

Collinsville, Nov. 30.

The number of couples who enjoy sixty-one years of companionship is rather few but this privilege has been accorded to Mr. and Mrs. George E. Butler. Their sixty-first wedding anniversary came on Monday. The day was not observed in any special manner as Mr. Butler's strength has not been as good the past few weeks and he is confined to his bed the greater part of the time. His health is apparently as good as ever, however, his weakness being caused simply by his advanced years. Mrs. Butler continues to enjoy fairly good health and retains her interest in the affairs of the day.

They were married at Mrs. Butler's home on November 27, 1855, by Rev. Jarius Burt, for many years the pastor of the Canton Center Congregational Church. He had also offi-

Dr. and Mrs. Wellington Koo

—[Copyright by Underwood & Underwood, New York.]

Dr. Wellington Koo, the new Chinese minister to the United States, arrived at New York November 28th from Liverpool, accompanied by his wife and left at once for Washington to take up his post. He is only 30 years old and is said to be the youngest man who ever came as a minister to the United States. Dr. Koo had first been appointed as minister to Mexico, but was suddenly transferred to the diplomatic service in the United States. Mrs. Koo is a granddaughter of Prince Ching, famous Chinese statesman and daughter of Tang Shao-Yih, first prime minister of China under the republic. This picture of Dr. and Mrs. Koo was taken aboard the American liner New York.

JAPAN NAVY FIGURES CUT

Decrease of $3,000,000 from Estimates of 1915—Total Naval Budget $50,000,000

Tokio, Nov. 29.—The Japanese naval estimates for 1915 total about $50,000,000, a decrease of $3,000,000 from the 1915 budget. Supplementary expenditure of $22,500,000 for the construction of new warships will spread over a period of four years. The estimate for 1916 is $3,000,000.

TO AID WORKING MOTHERS

Th End Day Nursery Auxiliary Has Its Annual Fair in the Copley-Plaza

Many a woman, obliged to leave her children and go out to work, will rejoice at the success of the fair held in the Copley-Plaza Hotel today. Members of the Th End Day Nursery Auxiliary planned sale and many friends were there to assist in disposing of the beautiful articles which the tables were laden, or by purchasing them for holiday gifts. Dr. Joy Cummins, president of the auxiliary, was chairman of the general committee and her helpers included Miss W. Crosby, Miss Charlotte Rich, George A. Chapman, the treasurer, Frank H. Ivers and Miss Sally Allen, members of the organization, formed to aid house at 25 Dover street. About the salon were tables. That flowers was in the centre with Mrs. Ham J. Harris, Mrs. Frederick Weather and Mrs. Alfred Shrigley in charge. The articles were as follows: Fancy work, Mrs. O. Gardiner; household, Mrs. J. H. Ordway; candy, Mrs. Robert H. Beckley and Mrs. Dorothy W. Crosby; infants' wear, Mrs. C. Brewer Smith. Mrs. Charles W. Noyes impersonated "the lady in a hundred pockets" and earned a number of dollars by this novel form of advertisement. The large ball room was filled with small tables for the luncheon and tea. Dr. Cummins was in the group in imposing appearance.

"MORGAN OF JAPAN" HERE

Baron Eichi Shibusawa, One of the Best-Known Financiers of Japan, with Party, Being Entertained in Boston

Baron Eichi Shibusawa, one of Japan's leading financiers and commonly known as the "J. P. Morgan of Japan," arrived in Boston this morning with a party of eight other Japanese and will be entertained here until tomorrow.

Included in the party, which is at the Hotel Touraine, are two of the baron's sons. One of the Japanese is an interpreter who has been added to the party since it arrived in the United States. After breakfast and a short rest the baron, who, with the other visitors is being entertained by the Chamber of Commerce, went to the Chamber's building, where he met the officers. He planned also to pay his respects to Mayor Curley before going to see Dr. Charles W. Eliot. Other members of the party were taken to Harvard to view some of the buildings. Several teas will be given in honor of the baron and other Japanese.

This evening the Chamber of Commerce will give a banquet at the Algonquin Club, at which Boston bankers and leading business men will have an opportunity to meet Baron Shibusawa, who is president of the First Bank of Japan, located in Tokio, as well as head of the Japanese Chamber of Commerce. He is acquainted with a number of Boston men, through his visit here in 1909, as chairman of the Honorary Commission of Japan, and it is one of the prime objects of this trip to get into closer touch with American financiers and business houses for the advancement of better business relations, commerce and finance.

Among those who will be guests at the Chamber's banquet tonight are Dr. Charles W. Eliot, Professor Edward S. Morse of the Peabody Academy of Science of Salem, James J. Storrow, Shigejiro Yamanaka, Louis K. Liggett, Elmer J. Bliss, former president of the Chamber; Louis A. Coolidge, Russell Robb, George W. Brown, Henry B. Sawyer, Jasper Whiting, Walter C. Fish, Unohicki Hattori, professor of Japanese literature and life at Harvard, and Lieutenant Katsuyuki Nishizaki, the representative at Harvard of the Japanese Government.

The party, which came here from Pittsburgh, will go to New York for a few days, then to Washington before proceeding to San Francisco, where the baron is greatly interested in the Panama-Pacific Exposition, having been largely instrumental in inducing his country to exhibit.

Besides the sons and a friends, the baron's party comprises: M. Masuda, secretary; M. Zumoto, interpreter; K. Noguchi, a banker of Japan; T. Yokoyama, manager of the Tokio shipyards; I. Wakita, another banker, and M. Nagano, a leading merchant of Japan.

Boothbay Harbor Men Replace Strikers

Thirty men have been brought to Boston from Boothbay Harbor, Me., it is understood, to fill the places of some of the striking steam trawler fishermen on vessels of the Bay State Fishing Company. Some of the strikebreakers were given berths aboard the trawler Wave, enabling this vessel to start for the fishing grounds today.

LITTLE CRIPPLES WILL ENJOY

Fair in Aid of New England Peabody Home Will Have Many Delightful Features

A fair and dancing festival for the benefit of the Peabody Home for Cripple Children will be given in the Copley Plaza Hotel on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. This annual bazaar, with entertainments, will offer many attractions. There will be the usual number of tables and variety of fancy and useful articles for sale at reasonable prices for Christmas gifts, also a well-known restaurant; home-made candies, pickles and jellies.

Among the gifts is a doll selected for this fair at the sale of Madame Paski's collection held recently at the Hotel Touraine, and made by Polish girls in Paris. She is called "The Nymph."

The chief attraction on Saturday will be the dancing festival at eleven o'clock under the direction of Madame Paski, who will have her corps de ballet. On Saturday evening there will be a ball dancing in the state suite, eight to ten.

ARRESTS TWO AFTER HAD

Somerville Policeman Catches Burglar Point of a Gun

Joseph P. Sweeney and Charles J. were arraigned in the Somerville court this morning on charges of breaking and entering and larceny. They pleaded not guilty and waived examination. Each was given $1000 for the Superior Court. The men were arrested at the point of a revolver by Patrolman A. J. Fitzpatrick, who discovered them in the drug store of Eugene B. Carpenter, at 10 Westway, East Somerville, between 6 o'clock Sunday morning. Fitzpatrick found a rear door unlocked and entered the store to investigate. The two men pounced upon him, a hard fight, in which Fitzpatrick's club, he drew his revolver and the men he would shoot. This was the end of the fight. He handcuffed them to surrender. He handcuffed the man, marched the other to the telephone booth, holding the prisoner by the back of the neck, and the police. Three patrolmen searched the store, found the two men, and a patrolman guarding his two men there.

Both men are known to the police. The same court, just two months ago, the man was arraigned on a similar charge of breaking and entering. He appeared before the court from a sentence to the Massachusetts Reformatory.

Brookline Day Nursery to Celebrate

The twentieth anniversary of the Brookline Day Nursery will be celebrated at the Day Nursery, 10 Walter Street, tomorrow afternoon from four o'clock. The nursery was started on November 1, 1895. At that time children were cared for in two rooms. It is now an average daily attendance of forty-seven in the sunny room. The entire house, owned by the city, is now itself. The nursery is supported by the city, and by the children's brigade, made up of children and their parents. It is hoped that all will show their interest and appreciation in this work by a large attendance.

FLENTJE WEDS WEALTHY WIDOW TWICE HIS AGE

Hartford Man, 27, Marries Mrs. Katherine J. Nightingale, 57.

Mrs. Katherine J. Nightingale, who is 57 years old and the wealthy widow of a Holyoke, (Mass.) paper manufacturer, and Harry L. Flentje, who is 27 years old and an insurance agent, were married in this city, November 27, it was learned yesterday, by Rev. James W. Bradin, rector of St. John's Church. They are living at the bride's home, No. 435 Farmington avenue, the apartment being in the name of Mrs. Harry L. Flentje. The ages given are those given when the marriage license was taken out at the local bureau of vital statistics.

Mr. and Mrs. Flentje have known each other for but a comparatively short time, it is said. Mr. Flentje lived with his parents at No. 823 Asylum avenue and, it is said, was their principal support. Up to a year ago he was a clerk in the home office of the Travelers Insurance Company. He was then made a special agent of the Aetna Life Insurance Company and has been selling compensation insurance in Vermont and Massachusetts.

Early in the year, Mrs. Nightingale took a liking to Mr. Flentje and offered him a place in looking after her mining interests in the West. He turned down the offer because the place was of a temporary character and because he wished to continue in the insurance business. As they came to know each other better, Mrs. Nightingale put her automobile at the disposal of Mr. Flentje and of his parents. His friends say that this automobile was given by the bride to the bridegroom as a wedding present.

Mrs. Nightingale has moved in a circle of a few close friends, of which Mr. Flentje became one, and their engagement and marriage were known to few except this little circle. She is the widow of George Nightingale, a paper manufacturer of Holyoke, Mass., who died June 17, 1910. He had made over practically all his estate, estimated to be worth $250,000 to $300,000, before his death. The inventory of his estate showed a total of only $28,582.21. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Nightingale came to this city.

Mr. Flentje was uncommunicative last night about the marriage. Owing to the illness of his mother, Mrs. Henry F. Flentje, he spent the night at his former home.

In 1912, Mrs. Nightingale played a game of hide and seek in this city with the police department and the automobile department of the secretary of the state's office, following an automobile accident in which she knocked down a policeman, his wife and their two children. On July 28 of that year, she attempted to drive an electric runabout down State street, south of the isle of safety and after narrowly escaping hitting people standing on the corner, ran into a Zion street car and struck Policeman J. W. McGrath, his 2-years-old baby, his wife and his daughter, 11 years old, were all slightly injured.

BARSTOW-POWER.

Hartford Girl to Become Bride of New York Man in Fourth Church-Parish House.

Dec 1, — 1915
The marriage of Miss Ruth Bugbee Power, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Power of Deerfield, avenue, and Raymond Dwight Barstow of New York, will take place at 7 o'clock this evening at the parish house of the Fourth Congregational church, the Rev. James J. Dunlop, pastor of the church, officiating. Only the immediate families of the members of the bridal party will be present. The decorations of the parish house parlors are to be of pink and white chrysanthemums against a background of palms and ferns. The bridal party will enter to the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin," played by Mr. and Mrs. Leon Wheeler with violin and piano, and Mendelssohn's wedding march is to be used as recessional. Other selections will be given during the evening.

The bride's only attendant is to be Mrs. Edwin W. Ladd, who will act as matron of honor, and Dr. Myron W. Barstow, brother of the groom, will be best man. Albert C. Griswold, Samuel A. Griswold of Wethersfield, Edwin W. Ladd and Dr. Roger N. Squire of this city will be ushers. The bride is to wear a gown of white crepe meteor with silver lace trimming, and a tulle veil fastened with a bandeau of pearls. She will carry a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and white roses and will wear also a diamond pin, her gift from the bridegroom. Her attendant is to wear pink crepe meteor with lace and fur trimmings and carry pink chrysanthemums.

The bride's gift to the bridegroom was a gold watch chain and to her attendant, a gold pin. The bridegroom has given his best man a gold stickpin and his ushers gold pencils. A reception from 8 to 10 will follow the ceremony, and supper is to be served by the Sextonian.

WALKER RELEASED FROM STATE PRISON

Dec 1 — 1915

Leaves Quietly at 9 a. m. for Home of Brother-in-Law.

William F. Walker, the New Britain embezzler, who was paroled on Wednesday, bade goodbye to the state prison in Wetherfield at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. Not a person other than the prison officials saw his departure, which was in striking contrast to the scene Friday when a large number of visitors to the prison gathered for the expected leaving. Walker walked to the automobile of Warden Ward A. Garner of the prison, in which he was taken to the home of Judge John Coats of New Britain, his brother-in-law.

General expectations had been that Walker, if he left at all yesterday, would not do so until the middle of the morning, or during the afternoon, for there had been rumors that he would take time to pack his clothing in the morning. Apparently he found time to do this Friday night or early yesterday morning, for he was ready for his short trip on the stroke of 9 o'clock.

Walker's leave-taking was singularly undramatic for a man whose name was for weeks a front-page feature of newspapers all over the country and for whom detectives scoured the entire continent for months. He rose at 6 o'clock, his usual hour, ate the regular prison breakfast and spent an hour or so working in the print shop, where he has been editor of the prison paper for some time. He had a brief conference with the prison officials and then he bade them good night. He had a car brought to the prison and he came to see the chauffeur who had been assigned to him. Retires After 47 Years in Business

Back in New Britain, Former Bank Man Seeks Se- clusion

New Britain, Dec. 4.

All efforts to interview William F. Walker upon his return to this city today were futile. The former bank treasurer was brought here this morning in a closely curtained automobile, going to the home of his sister, Mrs. John Coats, where he arrived soon after 9:30 o'clock. He was whisked into the house and remained closely protected from the public gaze all day. Several newspapermen called to interview him, but their requests were not granted.

Judge Coats and Mrs. Coats did not let any visitors in further than the front hallway and courteously declined any interviews. Walker could be seen sitting in the parlor when one visitor called. His sister was holding his hand and she was apparently trying to cheer him up and encourage him. He was bent forward, looking intently at her and, when he suddenly looked up and met the gaze of an outsider, he quickly put up a newspaper to screen his face from view.

When interviewed, Judge Coats told the newspapermen, "Forget it; we are trying to. Give the man a chance to make a fresh start. All he wants is to be left alone." The judge said that Walker would not give an expression of appreciation to the prison directors for granting his parole. Others had expressed their gratitude in his behalf. He refused to say whether Walker would leave the state or permission would be asked. It is understood that Mrs. Coats has already approached Colonel N. G. Osborn, head of the parole board, asking for permission for Walker to leave Connecticut.

It is believed that Walker will remain quietly at Judge Coats's home until he is fully recovered, after which he will leave with the judge and his wife for a short period of recuperation, on which he will decide as to his future plans.

RETIREMENT OF ENOS SMITH Dec 1 — 1915 LONG IN TOBACCO BUSINESS

Member of Hinsdale Smith & Co,
Whose Experience Extends Back 47 Years

Enos Smith, for 36 years a member of the firm of Hinsdale Smith & Co, importers and packers of leaf tobacco, will retire from active business to-day. Mr Smith's business experience extends back over 47 years, and began when he entered the employment of M. A. Allen, an Amherst merchant. Mr Smith was soon put by Mr Allen in charge of a branch store in Key West, Fla., and stayed there three years. In 1872 he entered into partnership with Cyrus Adams, a leading tobacco merchant of San Francisco, Cal., and spent nearly eight years on the coast. He was married during this period to Ida Augusta Knapp, daughter of Dr Henry Knapp.

The firm of Hinsdale Smith & Co was formed in Springfield in 1879, when Mr Smith joined with the late Hinsdale Smith and his son, Edmond H. Smith. Hinsdale Smith died in 1893 and the business has since been carried on under the same firm name by Enos Smith and Edmond H. Smith. Enos Smith was born in Hadley and received his education at Hopkins academy, Wilbraham academy and a business school in Boston.

Ewell-Livermore, 1913

Miss Myra L. Livermore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Prouty Livermore of Wethersfield avenue, and Starr L. Beckwith-Ewell, son of Glover C. B. Beckwith-Ewell of Whitney street, formerly of New York, were married last evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Dillingham, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer in Waterbury, formerly of Bridgeport, assisted by Rev. Dr. John Coleman Adams, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer in the city, the single ring, Universalist service being used. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Miss Dorothy E. Right of Bridgeport, and the best man by W. F. Henry Gade of New York. The ushers were Laurence H. McClure of this city and Earle F. Livermore of Montreal, brother of the bride. The entire house was decorated with southern smilax which formed a bower in the front room where the ceremony was performed. Here there were quantities of yellow chrysanthemums, the variety Bounfene Supreme, which in the library, the color scheme was pink and green, the decorations consisting of smilax and pink chrysanthemums. The bride wore a simple dress of white crepe meteor worn over skirt of chantilly lace and the long sleeves being made of tulle. On the court train, was worn a long tulle veil which fell from the back of the head where there was a large butterfly bow which was held with a band of the tulle forming a plaited ruff. Her shower bouquet was of lilies-of-the-valley and bridal roses tied with a large bow of ribbon lace. Her attendant's dress was of light green tulle, the skirt being made pannier style and worn over an underskirt of light pink crepe de chine and lace. The bodice was made of ruffled, flesh-colored tulle and she carried pink Killarney roses tied with green gauze ribbon. Her slippers and stockings matched the underdress. The dress of the bride's mother was of mauve beaded crepe de chine trimmed with Spanish lace and she wore orchids. The mother of the bridegroom wore dress of pink taffeta with an overskirt of imported lace. The music during the ceremony and reception which followed was furnished by Morris Perlmutter, assisted by a violin and cello. In the dining room where the buffet lunch was served, the walls were festooned with cultivated smilax and on the table was a large basket of white Killarney roses. About eighty guests were present, including many

FEBRUARY 26, 1914.

The suit for divorce of Mrs. Lois B. Rantoul, grand-daughter of James Russell Lowell, was resumed in superior court in East Cambridge last week. She charges her husband, Edward L. Rantoul of Beverly, with cruel and abusive treatment, and declared on the witness stand last February that she had an "intellectual love" for her husband's college chum, Chester C. Rumrill of Springfield. The nervous breakdown of Mrs. Rantoul, due to the excitement of the trial, interrupted the case last winter. Judge Hardy will hear the remainder of the testimony.

MRS. RANTOUL LOSES SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Boston, March 5.—Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul, a granddaughter of James Russell Lowell, was denied a divorce from Edward L. Rantoul by Judge Hardy at Cambridge today. Mrs. Rantoul alleged cruel and abusive treatment. The defense claimed that the troubles of the two were due to the wife's admitted affection for Chester Chapin Rumrill of Springfield.

$58,412. March 1914
Chester Chapin ("Chippie") Rumrill of Springfield Tuesday confessed on the witness stand in East Cambridge court his love for the wife of his best friend and college chum, Edward L. Rantoul. Rantoul sat with his face buried in his hands at a table scarcely three feet away. In ante-room Mrs. Lois B. Rantoul, granddaughter of James Russell Lowell, wept she heard the halting admission of "heaven sent lover." "Did your relations with Mrs. Rantoul ever pass the bounds of mere friendship?" the question was sharp, and Rumrill's eyes shifted jealously as he answered in a low voice: "Yes, they did." "When was this?" Attorney Hunt asked. "It is hard to place the date. I think it was in the fall of 1910. There was no declaration. We seemed simply to understand our love was mutual." Asked, "Did Mrs. Rantoul let you kiss her?" witness answered.

DECISION FOR MRS. RANTOUL

Boston Court Denies Husband's Petition for Sole Custody of Children Jan 7, 1916

Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul at Boston yesterday won her battle against her husband, Edward L. Rantoul for the custody of their two children. Judge McIntire in his decision refuses the husband's petition that he be given sole custody of the children. The decision leaves the disposition of the children as under the previous ruling of the East Cambridge court, the children, Mabel Lowell Rantoul, 11 years, and Harriett Charlotte Rantoul, 10 years old, being with the mother six months of the year, and the other six months with their father.

CLARK-THRALL.

Poquonock People Married By Mrs. Helen T. Brigham.

Poquonock, Dec. 3.)

This evening at 6 o'clock at Liberal Hall, used by the Spiritualists of this section, Miss Laura Helen Thrall, daughter of Willard A. Thrall, was married to Edward Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin W. Clark. The ceremony was performed in the auditorium of the hall and Mrs. Helen Temple Brigham of New York, a noted Spiritualist, officiated. The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was played by Miss Gertrude Sykes on the piano and Raymond Sykes on the violin. The procession was led by Mary Helen Thrall, a niece of both the bride and bridegroom, as ring bearer. The bride entered on the arm of her brother, Henry M. Thrall, who gave her in marriage and she was met at the altar by the bridegroom, and the best man, Raymond B. Clark, his brother. The maid of honor was Miss May C. Carney of Springfield, Mass., and the bridesmaids were Miss Alice M. Thrall and Miss Clara R. Griswold. The flower girls were Dorothy F. Merwin and Helene W. Hagarty, cousins of the bride.

The ushers were Harry M. Clark, Howard C. Thrall, Oliver J. Thrall and Edward J. F. Kernan, all of this place. During the ceremony Mrs. R. Arthur Hagarty sang, "O Promise Me," Miss Maud DpBon, playing the accompaniment.

Following the ceremony a reception was held, the bride and bridegroom being assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Clark, parents of the bridegroom, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Lamberton, cousins of the bride. About 200 guests were present from Springfield, Mass., Little Falls, N. Y., Bridge-water, Mass., Granville, Mass., Suffield, Windsor Locks, Hartford, Dindor, New York city and Poquonock.

After the reception a wedding supper was served in the lower room of the hall. Both rooms of the hall were handsomely decorated in evergreen bows, palms and running pine, also cut flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Clark received a large number of handsome presents.

After a short wedding trip to Boston and through New York state, Mr. and Mrs. Clark will live at the home of the bride's father, Willard A. Thrall, Poquonock road, where they will be at home after January 1. The bridegroom is engaged with his father and brothers in the lumber and tobacco business. Today was the fortieth anniversary of the marriage of Mrs. Clark's parents. Her mother died a little more than a year ago.

from England is complete with a few exceptions. These few pieces it has been impossible to replace. When it was found necessary to replace the low circular sheet iron stove in the dining room, the antique ornaments were removed from the old one and put on a new stove, made as nearly as possible from the old design. It is an "airtight" stove with an opening at the top through which a large billet of wood could be put which would burn it, and room on either side of it for a kettle of water. An old clock, over 100 years old, came from England, stands in the dining room.

The floor of the parlor is still covered with Brussels carpet ever brought in. The furniture in the parlor is of Empire design with haircloth upholstery and is complete with twelve chairs, a rocker and haircloth sofa. In the room the carved woodwork and the fireplace are very beautiful. In front of the fireplace is the old brass fender, with andirons and the bellows hanging on the wall.

Some of the rooms still retain their original wall paper, but in the sitting room the paper has been removed, showing a stenciled design around the fireplace. Here will be the new fireplace.

LE OF GAY MANSION

Colonial House of Suffield, Bought by Rev D. R. Kennedy, or a Home

Special Correspondent. 1915
SUFFIELD, Ct., Saturday, December 4

The famous Gay mansion situated in the Main street has been bought by Rev Daniel R. Kennedy, Jr., pastor of the First Congregational church. He will completely fit the house with all the modern conveniences, but will not occupy it himself for at least five or six years. The house is of the old colonial design and some of the woodwork is the finest seen today in any of the old houses around in this part of the state. Rev Mr Kennedy will preserve the old features and style of the house and will make such changes as may be necessary to put in a bath and other similar conveniences. It is Rev Mr Kennedy's intention to occupy the house as a home, at such time when he may retire from the ministry.

Rev and Mrs Kennedy have for some time been collectors of antique furniture and at the time the valuable pieces of furniture and relics were for sale at the Gay mansion this last summer Rev and Mrs Kennedy bought considerable of the furniture. The antique furniture and relics which Rev Mr Kennedy now owns will be in keeping with the historical Gay mansion. There are about 30 acres of land with the place, and in time this will be set to various fruit trees. The house was built by Ebenezer King in 1793 and is today one of the oldest landmarks in town. Mr King lived here until 1811, when it was purchased by William Gay, and was his home or that of his descendants until sold to Rev Mr Kennedy this week.

William Gay or Squire Gay as he was often called, was the son of Rev Dr Ebenezer Gay, who was the first pastor of the First Congregational church of Suffield from 1742 until his death in 1796, when he was succeeded by his son, Rev Ebenezer Gay, Jr., who lived in the "old manse" just north of the Second Baptist church. Instead of following the ministry, William Gay entered Yale college and studied law instead of theology, and practiced for many years in Suffield. He was also postmaster from 1798 until 1834 and kept the post-office in the southwest room of the Gay mansion, which has just been bought by Rev Mr Kennedy.

Instead of following the ministry, William Gay entered Yale College and studied law instead of theology and practiced for many years in Suffield. He was also postmaster from 1798 until 1834 and kept the post office in the southwest room in the Gay mansion.

The house, of Colonial design, is of the style known as a two chimney house which style came into prominence about 1760. The house is sheathed with straight planks and clapboarded, with a large hall running the full length of the house with two immense rooms on either side.

The hall with its beautiful archway, and carved woodwork on the wainscoting, mouldings and panels of the door, is still covered with a carpet made from wool raised on the thirty-acre farm connected with the estate. Along both sides of the hall are antique chairs and tables and an old fashioned piano.

Most of the antique furniture was recently bought by Dr. James H. Naylor of Hartford for a Boston firm. Some of it is over 200 years old and especially valued because the sets are practically complete. It was a habit of the Gay family when a dish or piece of furniture was broken, to have it repaired. In that way the sets were kept complete and nothing was ever allowed to be sold.

The most antique and most valuable furniture is the dining room set, which is complete and of Queen Ann design, both chairs and table being in the original finish. There is also an old fashioned high chair in which seven generations have sat, and an old fashioned compass or "courting chair" which still seems to be in good condition. The mahogany sideboard was made by a Suffield cabinet maker many years ago. The old blue Liverpool dinner set which was ordered

Rev John Eills Loses His Case.

Rev John Eills, formerly pastor of the Unitarian church in Chicopee, lost another contest in court to secure partial control of his five-years-old daughter, Olga. Mr Eills petitioned to be granted the right to have the little girl with him on week-ends and during half of the summer vacation. JOHN EILLS,
The Father, Alleged Kidnapper.

MRS. EILLS LOSES IN JAPAN JUNE 20, 1917 Court Rules Against Her in Famous Case Involving Custody of Child

Reports just received from Japan state that the petition that was brought before the courts of that country by Mrs. John Eills for the possession of her daughter, Olga, who is now ten years old, has been dismissed by the Supreme Court. The court took the ground that the case of Mrs. Eills was not sufficiently strong for further consideration.

A recent issue of the Japan Advertiser states that Judge Tabe in his final ruling, gave the opinion that the custody of the child rightfully belongs to the father, John Eills, who has had the care of her and supervision of her education for the past three years. The case has been before the Japanese courts for nearly four years, following a period of litigation in the courts of Massachusetts of similar duration.

In the fall of 1913 Mr. Eills, having obtained possession of the little girl despite the decree of two courts of this State in favor of the mother, took her to Japan. Efforts to have him extradited on a charge of forgery failed, and early the next year Mrs. Eills followed him to Japan and took up the legal contest which has now been decided against her.

FATHER UNDER INDICTMENT.

The chief of police of Boston, Mass., has sent to THE TIMES a circular which sets out that somewhere in the world John Eills, ex-minister, ex-journalist, ex-broker and ex-telegrapher, is in hiding with his little 5-year-old daughter Olga, whom it is alleged he kidnapped from her mother's home in Revere, Mass., February 22. The mother, Mrs. Harriet C. Eills, has made an appeal to the newspapers of the country to assist her in locating her child, and the Boston police have notified the police of the country to keep a lookout for the father, ordering his arrest on the charge of kidnapping, for which he has been indicted.

Few women in the world have ever been obliged to fight so hard or as long for the possession of a child as Harriet Eills. When the child was but 3 months old her father took her and disappeared for nine days. Twice he attempted to have his wife declared insane, and the second time succeeded in having her confined to the asylum at Northampton for 17 days, where she was obliged to eat with and mingle with patients afflicted with all kinds and degrees of insanity.

The heart-broken mother says in her plea to the press of the country:

"Will you cut out her picture and mail it to friends at distant points? Her father may have taken her to England or even to Australia.

"Will the newspapers all over the country listen to a mother's cry and republish the facts to aid the police in apprehending my husband and restoring Olga to me?

"The father's name is John Eills, 45 years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall, light brown hair and smooth shaven, although it is possible he may have grown a beard or mustache by this time.

"Won't you who are reading this page be a link in an endless chain to hunt for my little girl and send copies of this letter all over the world?

"Clergymen, teachers, women's clubs, mothers' clubs, won't you cut this out and ask the news editor of your paper to publish it, not once, but frequently?

"If you or your friends are contemplating a trip, won't you take a copy of this letter and spread the news still farther? It would be especially helpful to have foreign papers publish the facts."

Persons particularly interested can secure circulars or post-cards containing photographs by addressing, Mrs. Harriet Eills, No. 100 Revere street, Revere, Mass.

 Miss Ruth Laura Bartlett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Russell Bartlett of Portland, and Edwin Jesse Hahn, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Hahn of Middletown were married yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Trinity Church, Portland, by the rector, Rev. Dr. Oliver H. Raftery, who used the Episcopal service. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by her sister, Miss Hazel Bartlett, as maid of honor, and her two cousins, Laura Shettleworth and Evelyn Shettleworth, as flower girls. Wells Root Fowler of Westbury, R. I., was the best man and the ushers were Philip Leroy Hahn, brother of the bridegroom, Oscar Shettleworth, cousin of the bride, of Middletown, Harold Wilkinson, Wesleyan, '17, and Leroy Lawton, who attends Michigan State College. As the bridal party entered the church. Mr. Wheeler, organist, played the wedding march and the bride wore a dress of white tulle with a train and veil. Her bouquet was of pink lilies-of-the-valley. The bridesmaids wore gowns of pastel shades with Georgette crepe hats with silver trimming, and carried flesh pink chrysanthemums. E. K. Hawley of this city acted as Mr. Trapp's best man. The house was decorated with palms, pink chrysanthemums and smilax. Music was furnished by Cordes of New York.

RICHARD STEELE,
 New Captain of H. P. H. S. Football.

West Hartford, was the best man. After a wedding trip through the South, Mr. and Mrs. Dunning will live in this city.

There is a great deal of local interest in the election of Richard Steele as captain of the Hartford high school football team yesterday for the season of 1916, succeeding Wyllis H. Tracy.

 Richard Steele, 1917, was elected captain of the Hartford high school football team yesterday for the season of 1916, succeeding Wyllis H. Tracy.

Steele was on last year's championship team as well as the team of the season before. He is one of the best right ends that the high school has had in a good many years, playing in every game but the New Britain contest. Injuries kept him out of that engagement. He is an exceptionally fast man and is very adept at handling forward passes.

 Miss Marion A. Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Wilson of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Frederic Dunham Trapp, son of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Trapp of this city, were married on Wednesday afternoon, December 3, by Rev. Louis Van den Burg at the home of the bride's parents, No. 119 Cambridge place.

Miss Dorothy Knowles, who acted as flower girl to her cousin, wore a gown of pink tulle. The other attendants were Miss Evelyn Beavers, Miss Nellie Kerfoot, Miss Helen Chapman, Miss Lillian Halsey and Miss Ann Verplanck, all of Brooklyn; Mrs. Edward Coleridge Harvey of Mountain Lakes, N. J., Mrs. Sessler of Staten Island, N. Y., and Miss Ellen Powell of Mountain Lakes, N. J. The bride's gown was of white satin and princess lace; the skirt short and very full—with a lace bodice and pearl trimming. On her head she wore a cap effect of princess lace and orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaids wore gowns of pastel shades with Georgette crepe hats with silver trimming, and carried flesh pink chrysanthemums. E. K. Hawley of this city acted as Mr. Trapp's best man. The house was decorated with palms, pink chrysanthemums and smilax. Music was furnished by Cordes of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Trapp are taking a trip through the South and after January 1 will be at home at No. 239 Farmington avenue.

Among the Hartford people who attended the wedding were Mrs. Manning, Mr. and Mrs. William W. Trapp, Mrs. Charles Hills, Mrs. Frank Olds, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Wickham, Mrs. Thomas Garvan, Miss Pauline Bidwell, Mrs. Melancthon Burr, and Mrs. H. B. Pennell of Portland, Me., a sister of Mrs. Trapp.

After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Trapp will spend the winter with the bridegroom's father, as Mrs. Trapp, mother of the bridegroom, will leave the day following the wedding for a trip to the Pacific Coast. She will go by way of New Orleans and the Southern Pacific route to California, where she will remain with relatives until March. Her son, H. Beaumont Trapp, is living in Los Angeles. She will be accompanied by Mrs. M. Burr of New York.

A son, Wilson Beaumont Trapp, was born Saturday, February 23, at the Niles street hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dunham Trapp, of No. 28 Lilley road, West Hartford.

A daughter, Jane Trapp, was born Sunday to Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Trapp of Springfield, formerly of this city. Mrs. Trapp was formerly Miss Marion Wilson of Brooklyn, N. Y.

MISSIONARIES GO BACK TO ZULUS

civilization, at a time when, still unknown to the peoples of the world, the land of which Connecticut is a part, was little more than a waste, inhabited by savage tribes. Many of the missionaries are graduates of the Hartford Theological Seminary.

They are now a part of that movement, begun years ago, which is more and more making a misnomer of the phrase "Darkest Africa," and dissipating the mysteries which inspired the great missionaries of history to turn their eyes to this field, and which was a magnet to world famous explorers and hunters. The barriers are giving way, and Africa is growing towards a general civilization, even in its more uncultured parts, a civilization which will be perhaps in some measure, akin to that it once knew, as the natives from contact with the white race adopt or adapt to their own needs the customs of the outlanders, English and American, French and Dutch. The Christianity and learning and science of the great countries of the world are seeping into the jungles so that this Africa, the missionaries say, will one day assume an even more important role in international affairs, than it does today.

New Britain Couple.

Among Connecticut workers there are Mr. and Mrs. George B. Cowles, formerly of New Britain, who went to the field for the first time in 1893, returning to the United States some years later and going out again in 1915. They are now engaged in educational work in Natal for the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Mr. Cowles was at one time general secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association at Scituate, Mass. Mrs. Cowles, before her marriage was Amy Bridgman. She is a cousin of Myron H. Bridgman of this city, custodian of the Hartford-Aetna National Bank, and a daughter of Rev. Frederick, also a missionary. Her father and mother are the founders of the home at Umzumbo, where she and her husband are now stationed.

Mrs. Cowles' Letter.

In a letter written recently by Mrs. Cowles to her cousin here, she describes how the high cost of living has made itself felt there and tells of a thrilling horseback journey into the jungles, across country, never ridden over before by a white woman, and where some of the trails were so crooked that they appeared like forked lightning. She tells also of a communion service and baptism at a gathering of natives, among whom, she says, the story of the Nazarene has made a striking change in their manner of life. Her simple narrative of the pathetic story of a little cripple who was christened "Amon, but in talk of something more interesting. This is just to tell you that we are suffering with you, while you are staggered and frightened at the present state of things.

"Mr. Cowles and I have recently had a glorious horseback ride together. We call these trips our 'honeymoons.' This time Mr. Cowles was going to visit a new church which had been assigned to him by the mission. It was in the remote region, where no white woman had ever been, so I was especially keen to go, for I love these places in the wilds. Before our arrival at 'Itungwa,' our evangelist had told the mothers to caution their children not to run away from us. Such an array of big, black, questioning eyes met us there, but they were brave and didn't run away. Knowing their fears, I was touched, when, on Sunday every child came to Sunday school with a present in its hand. Baskets and mats and the beautiful wing of a rare bird. Over thirty present in all. It is such surprises that hearten the way and make missionary work the sweetest work in the world.

Native Hospitality.

"The week before our coming those dear people had sent a delegation clear to 'Harding,' thirty-five miles away, to buy two cups, two saucers, two plates and two knives and forks for our use. How great and grand we must have seemed to those far away people, I realized, when I looked through the door of one of the other huts and saw our host, sitting with his family and native guests on mats on the floor, eating pumpkin porridge with their fingers. Such licking and smacking, such skillful movements of the hands. A peep through the door and one whiff of the smoke coming through was enough for us, and made us doubly thankful for the kind thoughtfulness, which had made it possible for us to sit in chairs in a trimmed hut with no fire in it, and to eat with knives and forks, sitting at a table.

Chain Lightning Trail.

"Our kaadi at 'Itungwa' on a side hill, a deep bush and mountain back of it, and just below us the 'Inzinkulu' River, which was not fordable for miles and miles. Silent and deep and green it flowed along with wild ducks and herons flying over it, and beyond, so wild, so far away from every sign of civilization, it didn't seem possible we could be in Natal. We could easily imagine ourselves on the banks of the Zambezi, or Congo, and I was the first white woman to have seen it. We had traveled for three days on horseback to reach this place, and had slept on grass beds on the floors of three different huts. The round trip covered eighty miles of the roughest riding I have ever experienced. As we followed our grinning guide through

Married By Dr. Cooper.

It is interesting to note that the wedding of Miss Bridgman and Mr. Cowles took place in the home of Mrs. John B. Smith, a relative of Miss Bridgman, which stood where the New Britain General Hospital is now situated. Considerable interest was manifested in the wedding.

a dog, a pig, or a chicken, all was quiet, solemn and reverent.

"It was amazing how these Zulus catch a tune. With tremendous enthusiasm they sing over and over again a beautiful hymn about Jesus on the Cross. There is but one story to tell to such a crowd. That story dropped into a dark pool of heathenism, such as that, causes a commotion at first, then the giving up of beer and immorality and all the age old customs. . . .

"After the preaching service came the communion. Many babies were baptized then we partook of the bread, bought in Harding, and the wine which we had brought, and which was passed around in one tumbler bought for the occasion.

The Little Cripple.

"In the group of those to be baptized, there stood a mother, with a baby in arms, and two little girls beside her. She was just a heathen woman, so recently converted, that the stamp of heathenism, was still written upon her face, but she had brought her all to have the 'seal of God' put upon them. The sole garment of one of them was a corset. The bones and lacing had been pulled out, and it had been sewed together in such a way as to make the lacing holes outline a yoke across the little brown chest. French embroidery! The sister of this little girl was the most pathetic specimen of a wrecked body that I've ever seen. She was about eight years old and her little face was so chaste and sweet that it haunted me for days. A bright, radiant, little face it was, too, with a soft brown skin, dangleling, dried up legs, and a small tum developing between the shoulders told the story. A long illness upon a mat on a hard floor and now this little wreck was doomed for life to remain in a sitting posture. Mr. Cowles stooped low when he put the water on that soft woolly head and the 'seal of God' was placed upon her, and she was baptized. America! Amelika do you not think the angels sang? During most of the service, kept little 'Melika' sitting at my feet for the hut was so crowded there was danger of further accident. Since coming home I've sent her a dress and Teacher Agnes, writes that she will enter school, soon. The children will carry her on their backs to and from school, but she has often hopped all the way to church, down one and up another. Her arms seem to take the place of her legs. The poor dried up legs are quite callous with frequent dragging over gravel paths.

"The closing service at 'Itungwa' was one of Thanksgiving, and lasted until 2 o'clock in the morning. It was the 'hottest' service of all. People told me, Monday morning,

"BARON" GEORGE ULRICH

I am monarch of all I survey,
My right there is none to dispute
From the center all around to the sea
I am lord of the fowl and the brute.

THE "I" is Baron George Ulrich. The "all" is Little Harbor Island. The "sea" is the sea.

Ulrich Buys an Island.

Vice-President George Ulrich of the American Industrial Bank Trust Company has bought of Odiorne heirs Little Harbor Island, near Portsmouth, N. H. The grantors are Charles B. and Frank P. Odiorne of Cleveland, O., Charles W. and Mary S. Odiorne of Portsmouth and Ella C. of Newcastle, N. H., and Samuel of Kittery, Me. The deal calls for about fifteen acres of land.

DECEMBER 21, 1916.

This barony he acquired a month ago. He returned from its early last week and is telling about the purchase to friends who know nothing about the islands, but are fascinated by the description.

To begin at the beginning.

Although Portsmouth is the port of New Hampshire and marries the Granite State to the world of commerce by rail as well as by water, it is among the most antique of the old-fashioned cities of New England and takes pride in not becoming modernized. It was settled in 1623 and that date and years succeeding are stamped on several of its quaint, old-time houses, which somehow remind you of Hawthorne and the good, old times of the sea-board when the Puritans were young. Its wide, shaded streets are in sympathy with these time-honored landmarks. The Jackson house, built in 1684, rises in the heart of the city. The old Church of St. John and the grey mass of the Athenaeum carry the glowing over the historic past. And the present is best shown, as far as international relation is concerned, by the fact that it was there that the peace dove succeeded the war eagle, when President Roosevelt led along to the treaty of Portsmouth, putting term to the conflict between Japan and Russia, barely ten years ago.

Victim of the True Wanderlust.

But it is more to the harbor than the port that Mr. Ulrich turns and it is the harbor which he describes to friends who have followed him in his travels. For as everybody knows, Mr. Ulrich is a blood victim of the One True Wanderlust. He has climbed and has written about the Great Pyramid. He has traversed France and all central Europe and out in his charming home on Farmington avenue he has curios and souvenirs and pictures from all over everywhere. An evening there is better than a Lyman Howe travelogue. Mr. Ulrich was in Switzerland when the war started. He was in Paris when the war cloud was its darkest and there he stayed for a spell while von Kluck was rushing toward Claye. Later he was on the cruiser Tennessee in the harbor of Cherbourg, a harbor which he thinks is not in the same class with Portsmouth.

Where Sea and Mountain Meet.

"Portsmouth is a famous summer resort," he said yesterday. "It is patronized by travelers from all over the country. They find out in the harbor bracing air direct from Old Ocean. Up in the city they breathe exhilarating ozone from the spurs of the White Mountains. Near my island the two meet. A seaward breeze gives your lungs life from Neptune. A landward air gives you the blessing of the woodland nymphs.

Birth of the Ranger.

Mr. Ulrich figures that the harbor is able to float 2,000 ships of the size of the Vaterland, one of the largest ships in the world. It is free of ice even in the depth of winter. The navy yard is in sight from the Ulrich island home. So are great marine ways and shipbuilding yards. From the site of an early yard, succeeded by a monster lying-in home for ships, the Ranger was launched. This was 1777 and a few days later Paul Jones was treading the deck of the little vessel, when she was well out to sea and from her peak and masthead was flying, first of all craft, the flag of the western republic. From the living room of his island house Mr. Ulrich shows the birthplace of the "pirate's" roving raider.

First Jab Against Britain.

And the Hartford traveller shows old Fort William and Mary. It was there and on December 14, 1774, that patriots first raised hand against Britain in the divergency destined

For Every Meal.

Dropped eggs and bacon—Partly fill a spider or frying pan with boiling water, add a saltspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of vinegar. You will need to have the water about two inches deep in the pan. Carefully break the eggs, one at a time, into the hot water. Be sure that the eggs are completely covered, adding boiling water if you have not enough already in the pan. Let the water simmer gently for four minutes, until each egg has a casing of white. Remove the eggs carefully with a skimmer. Allow the water to drain off, and serve the eggs with broiled bacon.

Slice the bacon very thin. Broil it quickly on each side, keeping it well out of the fat that drips off.

Baked fish—Split through the belly and lay in cold water with a little salt for half an hour after thorough washing. Dry carefully and sprinkle with a little salt and black pepper; then close the fish and place it in an earthenware baking dish, covering the top of it half an inch thick, with a dressing of chopped onions and green pepper and little lumps of butter. Sprinkle over thickly then with fine stale bread crumbs, put a tablespoonful of cold water in the dish and bake slowly.

Grape juice sherbet—Sherbet is more easily digested than ice cream and grape juice flavor appeals to almost persons. Add one quart of water to one pint of grape juice and one cupful of sugar, and freeze. Serve with squares of sponge cake.

Tongue on toast—For a lunch, a cold piece of boiled tongue. Mix it with a hot cream sauce, adding the beaten yolk of an egg to give richness. Let it simmer very slowly over the fire while some delicate slices of toast are being buttered. Cover each piece of toast with the mixture and send to the table in a covered dish. Ham may be used instead of tongue. For devilled Ham sandwiches—For good sandwiches for the

Four Generations Represented at Golden Wedding of a Half Cent

Residents of Hartford for half a century, having three children, seven grandchildren and a great-grandchild, and loved and respected by their neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Heise, of No. 175 Lawrence street, are celebrating, to-day, the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. Born in Altoona, Schleswig-Holstein, 81 years ago, Mr. Heise is a veteran of two wars, having fought in both the Prussian-Danish war and the American Civil war. Immediately on coming to this country, in 1864, he enlisted in Waterbury in the Tenth Connecticut Volunteers. He saw active service during the closing year of the war, and was present at the surrender of Lee at Appomattox.

After the war he married Susanna Fogel Klimpf in Hartford, December 10, 1865, the Rev. Charles R. Fischer officiating. A daughter, Mrs. Augusta Heise Scheimeister resides in Brooklyn, N. Y., where her husband is a musician. Their two sons, Frank A. and George C. Heise, twins, are so near alike in form and feature that only their nearest friends can tell them apart. Frank is a member of the police department, and George was also a member until a few months ago, when he was retired because of ill health. Both are musicians of ability.

TOGETHER FIFTY YEARS.

MRS. EDWIN STROUD.

EDWIN STROUD.

Mrs. Stroud comes of a strong, wholesome ancestry. Indeed, the names of Atwell and Camp have been conspicuous in the annals of Durham for generations. Mrs. Stroud herself is in fine health, and was 75 years old last Memorial day.

Mr. Stroud is a native of Middletown, born June 25, 1841. As a youth he worked in his father's foundry, part of the time as machinist, and part as bookkeeper. When the Civil war opened he enlisted in Company A, Second infantry, C. V., and was discharged three months later. He then re-enlisted in Company C, Fourteenth infantry, C. V., for three years. He participated in the battles of Antietam, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, and the Wilderness. In an engagement at Poe river, May 10, 1864, he was wounded in the foot and was transferred to the veteran reserve corps and continued there until he was honorably discharged July 3, 1865. He returned to this city and, with the exception of six years spent in Texas has resided in Middletown.

Rev C. W. Merriam of Grand Rapids, Mich., a native of this city and well known here; R. Wallace Peckham, until recently a Young Men's Christian association college student in this city, and Samuel E. Walker of East Northfield, were among the passengers who were saved from the steamship Orissa that was torpedoed Sunday morning off the British coast. The ship sank in 12 minutes. The three were in a party of 57 American army Young Men's Christian association workers, under Arthur E. Hungerford, who are on their way to the war zone. All the progress at passengers and all but three of the church during were saved.

Rev Mr Merriam is a brother-in-law of R. B. Sturtevant of the Sturtevant-Merrick company of this city and is the grandson of Homer Merriam. Mrs H. C. Rowley of this city is an aunt. He was born and brought up in Springfield and until two years ago was pastor of a Greenfield church. He was until recently, pastor of the Park Congregational church of Grand Rapids, Mich., but secured a leave of absence last summer to work in a Texas cantinment camp. He then secured additional leave to work among the soldiers in France. He stopped with relatives in this city two weeks ago on his way to a port of embarkation.

Mr Peckham distinguished himself by cutting a rope that entangled one of the men and dragging him into a

Reception Given by Parishioners to Rev and Mrs Charles W. Merriam

A large number of members of the Second Congregational church and parish last evening attended the fare-passports. There was also an American Red Cross doctor at the hotel who examined each man and prescribed "a long night's sleep" for all.

Philip Cook of Baltimore sent a cable message to his wife, saying only: "See Acts, chapter xxvii, verses 41 to 44." (This is the passage describing the shipwreck of the Apostle Paul, ending with the sentence, "And so it came to pass that they reached land safely.")

Mr Hungerford's Narrative

Arthur E. Hungerford, leader of the Young Men's Christian association party, gave to the Associated Press at London the following account of his experiences:—

"The thing that struck me most was the calm, businesslike way with which our men took things. There was not a man hurried. There was no panic, no fluster; merely a bunch of men getting themselves and others out of the ship in orderly fashion."

"Our men were in cabins along four corridors, all opening into the central stairway. There were bulkhead doors at each of these corridors, and my one fear was that these doors might be carelessly closed before all the men behind them were out. So I stood at the foot of the stairway and watched the men file out. I went through the corridors to see that everybody was out and then shut the bulkhead doors myself."

"The men were marshaled in little groups under their corporals and they went to their stations just as they had done a dozen times in our drills aboard ship."

"The sound was exactly as I had seen it described many times in the newspapers—a dull thud as the torpedo struck the outside shell of the ship, and then a muffled explosion somewhere far down below. I lay in a bunk with my clothes on, but I got out immediately and stood at my station at the foot of the staircase. Soon after I got there I heard the sound of another explosion, which was accompanied by the going out of all lights."

"When all the men had got on deck, I went up and climbed into No 1 lifeboat, whence I watched the orderly procedure aboard the other boats up and down the whole length of the ship. My boat was the last one away, except No 9, which had a little trouble with the ropes."

"It was a wonderfully calm night and the ship's headway did not bother us much, as the engineer had been able to reverse the engines before the boilers went out of commission and the ship was barely moving by the time the boats were lowered."

"Almost all our men brought their overcoats off the ship, but few more things, as they mostly went to the members of the crew who, generally, came away in their shirts."
